Floating Seadrome on Bermuda Airline Will Be First of Trans-Atlantic Chain

Soon, if you're sufficiently "air-minded," you can fly the Atlantic in short hops. The first of a series of trans-Atlantic "floating airports" like the one pictured above is to be built immediately and anchored 300 miles at sea. Half way between New York and Bermuda. This fantastic landing field will be manned by a crew of 45 men and will contain a machine shop, hotel and restaurant and a radio beacon to guide approaching planes. It will be a steel platform 1200 feet long and 400 feet wide, and normally will ride about 100 feet above the water. Chains 21,150 feet long attached to specially designed sea anchors will hold this floating island in place. Experimental flights will be made between the main land and Bermuda this year, using the seadrome as a stopping place, according to Joseph A. McDonald, right, who will be in charge of actual construction. He is president of Henry J. Gielow, Inc., of New York, the builders. If the first venture is successful, construction of a string of other floats across the Atlantic will be pushed as soon as possible. Engineers say the seadrome will ride any waves up to 150 feet in height with practically no motion. For the giant platform will not float on top of the sea; it will rest on buoys submerged in the ocean depth, where the water is always still. Anchored only at one end, the seadrome will turn with the wind, thus always offering its full length for the landing and taking-off planes.

DAUGHERTY DENIES HE WAS IN "LITTLE GREEN" HOUSE ON K STREET

COLEMBUS, O., March 13. (U. P.)—Harry M. Daugherty, attorney-general in the Harding cabinet, has broken a long silence to disclaim all connection with the famous "little green house in K street," Washington, which was so notorious. He has written a Columbus newspaper denying that he ever saw the house, ever knew anyone who had been in it, and even casting doubt upon the existence of the house itself. His letter came from Sarasota, Fla. Daugherty, at the same time he wrote the newspaper, wired to Senator James F. Watson of Indiana asking Watson to state publicly that "I was never inside the 'little green house' if there was one and never even saw it from the outside."

Irvine of Portland resigned as a member because of his appointment on the new consolidated board of education created by the 1929 legislature. The resignations of C. C. Colt and C. L. Starr from the University of Oregon board of regents and the board of regents of Normal schools respectively had been received previously. Colt and Starr also were appointed in the new board. J. F. ## RACING DRIVER KILLED TODAY

(Continued from Page One) bring it back on its proper course. He spun around on the course and crashed into the sand dunes with a terrific impact. Bible, who was a novice in high speed racing, had been given approval of the American Automobile association to make the record attempt after a series of tests yesterday, in which he satisfied officials of his qualifications. His mount rolled about a hundred feet before coming to a stop. The cameraman, unable to move from his tracks, was mangled, his body being hurled a great distance. The bodies of Bible and the photographer were picked up and taken to a mortuary. The accident was the second fatal one to occur on the beach in a year. Frank Lockhart, a daring Indianapolis driver, lost his life here last year when his Stutz Blackhawk racer went out of control. Bible was 42 years old, and is survived by his widow and two children. Major H. O. D. Segrave, who set the world's record of 231 miles an hour here Monday, and who had announced that he would make another attempt today to better his own mark, declared after the accident that he would not run again. The accident evidently eliminated America's hope of regaining the world's speed record this year.

BIG ARMY OF REBELS READY

(Continued from Page One) Mexican Revolutionists today were turned on Torreon, where, according to unofficial information which reached Rebel headquarters here, a great army of 25,000 Rebels has been massed for the expected battle with Federal troops under the leadership of General Plutarco Elias Calles, former president of Mexico. If the reports as to the size of the Rebel contingent in Torreon are accurate, one of the greatest battles in the history of revolutions in this turbulent country is pressed. Some 3,000 Rebels, including a band of 2,000 Yaqui Indians, have been reported on their way to the strategic city, which would place the Rebel strength at in the vicinity of 25,000 men when the conflict starts. The force under Calles is reported to be one rebellion, and the battle is looked upon as the crisis of the rebellion in the north. Meanwhile Rebel-controlled Mexico today was under a proclamation of General Juan Gonzalez Escobar, commander in chief of the Revolutionists, which decreed the abolishment of religious laws, and a moratorium of all debts, interest on debts and bank deposits of 5,000 pesos or more. The statement by Escobar, the first official communication of the kind since the beginning of the rebellion, also declared for the resolution ratified by a constitutional convention in February, 1927, which forbid reelection to the presidency of Mexico. Throughout five sheets of typewritten Spanish the Revolution wherever mentioned in the decree, was termed a "renovating movement," and attention was called to the "legal form in which the revolution is unfolding." The religious laws promulgated and strictly enforced by the preceding Mexican administration were termed "undemocratic" in the decree.

EATON, THELMA LEAVE TONIGHT

(Continued from Page One) under $500 bond as a material witness against her father. The complaint alleges that the father brought the daughter from a place near Woodland across the state line into Oregon and, eventually to Klamath Falls, for immoral purposes. The parent and child registered as man and wife in two hotels. The father was examined at length by a representative of the department of justice yesterday and is said to have admitted the allegation in the White Slave complaint. He was quoted as saying he "loved his daughter," but not as a father, and that he had had this feeling for her since she was twelve years of age. The girl who was placed under the protection of police Saturday, told her story at length to authorities yesterday and signed a statement of her version of the affair. The girl is said to have told of her father's abnormal feeling towards her. She related in detail the fear she felt for her parent, how he had threatened to kill her and how she was anxious to free herself from his power. Sheriff Dill of Cowlitz county, talked with Eaton yesterday. It was after his conversation that Eaton is said to have "broken" and told the whole story. Eaton and his daughter will be taken to Portland by C. C. Wells, deputy United States marshal, on the northbound West Coast limited this evening.
