CLEGHORN, CLINE DRAW IN GREAT MAIN EVENT; STEVENS KNOCKED OUT

Billy Breedlove Upsets "Dope Bucket" by Beating Navy Champ; Jack Breedlove and Jack McCoy Fight "Special" to Draw

The ten round main event last night between Walter Cleghorn and "Tiger" Johnnie Cline was called a draw.

Mingled cheers and "boos" attended the divergence of opinion. Several hundred fans left the arena firm in the belief that Cleghorn had won; a majority, apparently, was satisfied with a draw, and a scattered few held that Cline had a shade.

It is just as how you look at a fight. If rounds were counted, Cline won four decisively, the first, sixth, ninth and tenth; Cleghorn won the other six—some were nearly even, but one or the other of the two middleweights had a shade in each. Thus if the referee had adhered to a round-by-round count, the Eskimo would have deserved a close decision.

Fight as Boxing
On the other hand, if one takes into consideration that last night's battle was a fight, not a boxing match, and that the winner of a fight—in the common sense of the term—is the best man at the end, one must concede that Cline certainly deserved a draw. According to this theory, the showing in the last two rounds is twice as important as the first two.

Cline was thoroughly beaten in the second, third, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth rounds. But he came back like a whirlwind in the final two laps, and gave the same Alaska Indian a sweet pasting.

Deserved Draw
The writer is inclined to believe Cline deserved a draw. Prize fights of today are merely an outgrowth of bare-knuckle, finish fights, where a man could win 50 rounds, but if he were knocked out in the 51st, he would lose the bout. In other words, the best man at the end deserves consideration today, no matter how much he lost at the beginning.

It was a great fight, with Cleghorn infinitely better than his last appearance. He fought an aggressive fight and beat the "Tiger" to the punch time and again with his famous "leaping left."

Cline Wins First
Cline took the first by smothering the Eskimo under a series of his swift rushes with rights and lefts connecting on chin and body.

In the second Cleghorn stepped into the lead. His "leaping left" would shoot out like a rapier and he would follow it up with a battering attack to the body. For three rounds Cline could not get away from that dazzling left that thumped against his face with a monotonous persistence.

Comes Back in 6th
Not that the "Tiger" did not retaliate. Occasionally he would unleash a fierce and destructive charge that would carry Cleghorn into a corner. But the Eskimo shaded Cline until the sixth. In that round Cline suddenly unleashed a weaving, smashing attack, and caught his swarthy opponent flush on the chin with sizzling right and left hooks. Cleghorn was hanging on before the round was half over, but the supreme effort had tired the "Tiger" momentarily, and he was content to peck away with short rights and lefts to guarantee a margin in that round.

Cleghorn stormed out in the seventh like a whirlwind, and not only beat Cline on left leads and infighting, but, wonders of wonders, slugged his toe to the ropes in a "wild-eyed" back-to-toe slugging bee.

prone effort to shove off defeat, and was successful. Referee Arthur called it a draw, and the crowd went home, some happy, others disgruntled. The main event was even better than their last clash—there was more mixing. Cline weighed 157½ and Cleghorn tipped the beam at 159½.

Looked Pitiful
When the two fighters faced each other—Breedlove spotted the navy boxer four pounds—the word "mis-match" was on the tongue of every fan in the arena. It looked pitiful as the older and bigger man stalked the slippery Bend boy around the ring. But gradually it became apparent that Stevens could not hit Breedlove.

In the second Breedlove unleashed a two-fisted attack. A smashing right over the heart put the sailor down for nine. Another blow to the body, a few seconds later, put him down for the count. To see the baby-faced, slightly built kid standing over the recumbent form of a husky, experienced prize fighter, gave the fans a great thrill.

The six-round special event between Jack Breedlove and Jack McCoy was a draw. Breedlove was not himself, and could not penetrate McCoy's defense. It was a good exhibition of boxing, but there was little hitting.

O'Connor Kayoed
When Eddie O'Connor took that final right cross to the chin in the second round of his four-round special event with Syd Anderson of Eureka, he was knocked out colder and longer than any fighter in a Klamath ring for many a day. They carried him to his corner, and after a few minutes had to virtually carry him to the dressing room.

The first few minutes of the first round were even, and then Anderson connected with a short right, which put O'Connor down for a count of nine.

The Seattle youth arose and put up a good fight until the Eskimo boy caught him with a pile-driving right cross to the chin. O'Connor fell flat on his face. At the count of nine the bell rang.

Revived—
They revived him for the second, and O'Connor came out fighting like a tiger. Anderson, cool and calculating, let drive another right cross, and O'Connor went down for a count of four.

He was up again, and a few seconds later came the end—a wallop that Anderson brought up from the floor, and which carried him half way across the ring after his fist had connected with O'Connor's jaw. The Seattle boy fell face forward like a log. He did not twitch a muscle.

Jimmy Moore knocked out Rusty Stewart in the second round of the curtain raiser with a strong punch to the mid-section. Stevens failed to get on his feet in time at the count of nine, and was counted out.

The card was the best ever seen in Klamath, better even than the card in which Cleghorn and Cline battled the first time.

Cleghorn stormed out in the seventh like a whirlwind, and not only beat Cline on left leads and infighting, but, wonders of wonders, slugged his toe to the ropes in a "wild-eyed" back-to-toe slugging bee.

TUNNEY DENIES STRIKING DOWN NEWSPAPERMAN

POLA, Italy, April 20, (UP)—George Bernard Shaw and Genio Tunney strolled leisurely among the Roman ruins on the British Islands today. They exchanged literary views, it was presumed, as they wandered among the Roman ruins.

Tunney, who was accompanied to the islands by his wife, said he could not "in good taste" discuss Mr. Shaw.

He was anxious, however, to discuss reports that he had struck a newspaper photographer who attempted to photograph him at Cannes last winter. Tunney said he did not strike the man and added that there should be an investigation and a correction.

Ruth Swamped By Huge Mail Begging Money

THE FANS MUST THINK I'VE GOT ALL THE DOUGH IN THE WORLD!

By AL DEMARKE (Former Pitcher N. Y. Giants)

Babe Ruth's fan mail runs from fifty to one hundred letters a day. These letters run all the way from requests from boys and girls for autographs to begging and blackmailing missives of the most sinister nature.

The begging letters run all the way from requests for baseballs to wheel chairs and thousands of dollars.

I was astounded at how many letters the Babe receives, when he showed several days accumulation of fan mail.

These letters requested all the way from twenty-five to ten thousand dollars.

Ruth always answers letters that are accompanied by a self-addressed envelope and it keeps him pretty busy.

I was surprised at the large amount of money he sends in answer to begging letters.

In looking over his mail I ran across numerous letters thanking him for remittances all the way from five to fifty dollars.

The Babe hasn't any batting weakness but off the field his big heart is his weakness.

This Boy Upset the Dope

This is the wiry, slippery and clever Billy Breedlove, who upset all the dope last night by knocking out Sailor Al Stevens, former champion of the coast naval fleet, in the second round of the semi-windup last night. A hard right to the heart did the trick.

CHICAGO GRAND JURY INVESTIGATES REPORT OF "WHOOPEE PARTY"

CHICAGO, April 20, (AP)—More tales of "whoopie" parties by members of the sanitary district trustees were reported today to have been laid before the grand jury investigating alleged extravagance and graft by the board.

Arthur Mathieson, described as private secretary to Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the board, who was defeated at the November election, was before the jury yesterday. The story he was reported to have told detailed a trip by members of the board to New York in 1927, and mentioned a "whoopie" party at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, in which broken furniture was tossed out of windows and property damaged to the extent of $6,900.

The jury was understood to have been told that vouchers were padded in order to cover up large expenditures for the delegation of trustees and their friends who chartered a special train which set out for a flood control conference in Washington, but which, according to Mathieson, also touched at New York. Liquor and revelry were said to have been indulged in, and there were expenditures of the district's moneys, according to Mathieson's story, for flowers and candy for night club hostesses.

Prosecutors were told that the Waldorf-Astoria party started when members of the Chicago party supplied themselves with electric light bulbs and began a bombardment of the walls and sidewalk. This was followed by the hurling about of pieces of furniture, the hotel later presenting a bill for $6,900 damages.

JOHNNY MILES SETS NEW MARK

BOSTON, April 20, (UP)—Johnny Miles, a sandy-haired youth from Hamilton, Ont., nosed out three veteran long-distance stars on the home stretch today to win the 33rd annual Boston A. A. marathon classic.

His time of 2:33:08.4-5 set a new record for the historic 26-mile course, being 3 minutes, 59 seconds faster than that of Clarence De Mar, who established the previous record last year.

Karl Koski and Willie Kyronen, both of the Finnish-American A. C. of New York, fought a thrilling battle for the lead in the closing moments of the race. Although they were unable to match the mankilling pace set by the flying leader, they did succeed in finishing in record-breaking time.

Koski finished second in 2:35:26, while Kyronen was a close third in 2:35:44.

IZZY HELD TO DRAW BY DANO

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20, (UP)—The flyweight champion of the world, Corporal Izzy Schwartz of New York, was held to a draw by Pablo Dano, Filipino boxer, in a ten round bout here tonight.

The match was close all the way, elusiveness of the dark-skinned brawler adding him a great deal in breaking even with the New Yorker. The title was not involved.

HOLLYWOOD, April 20, (UP)—Tommy Jones, welterweight, won a ten round decision from Dick Hopps in the main event at Hollywood Legion stadium last night.

Jones took every round but the fifth and displayed a beautiful left hand and a hard uppercut.

FIGHTS OF LAST NIGHT

San Francisco—Corporal Izzy Schwartz, New York, and Pablo Dano, Philippine Islands, drew, (10).
San Diego, Cal.—Long Tom Hawkins, San Diego, and Benard Wright, Omaha, drew, (10).

O'KELLY LOSES TO MALONEY BY ROUTE OF KAYO

NEW YORK, April 20, (UP)—Jim Maloney, Boston heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over Con O'Kelly of Ireland in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout at the Coliseum tonight.

O'Kelly's left eye was cut badly and the referee refused to let him stay in the ring, despite his protest that he was able to continue. The Boston fighter had outpointed his opponent by a good margin in the first two rounds.

Maloney weighed 203½ and O'Kelly 197.
