

BIG BLAZE IN ARIZONA CONTROLLED

Fire Covers Front of Ten Miles; Cattle Driven Before Flames

NOGALES, Ariz., May 13 (AP)—After burning over more than 15,000 acres the greatest forest fire in the history of this section of Arizona today was believed to have burned itself into the control of 100 weary men who had fought the blaze on an ever-widening front for six days.

Cowboys rode before the fire driving herds of terrified cattle down sun-baked slopes ahead of flames which licked at scrub oak on a ten mile front. Panned by a high wind the blaze in places travelled as fast as a prairie fire, jumping canyons and fire breaks in the Patagonia mountains.

Buildings and equipment of mining properties were consumed, while miners fled to Henshaw, small mining village near here, where the blaze was diverted a few miles from the town. Miners' families were rushed from the village, many of them taking their belongings with them.

The conflagration started when a miner stumbled and dropped his carbide lamp in dry grass. The red glow of the burning forests was visible at night for more than fifty miles.

The blaze finally was halted by the combined efforts of fire fighters shifting winds and the topography of the country. Unless the wind changed today rangers hoped to beat out the embers along the fringes of the blackened sides of Palomas canyon.

Circus Opens Today

Here is one of the stunts that will feature the evening performance of the circus tonight. This fair young lady is a past master at the art of riding not one, but two horses.

CIRCUS OPENS IN CITY TODAY

ance is a study in itself. No army ever moved more surely, more efficiently than does the modern circus. It seems there is a unit for every stake and for every rope to be pulled, and what is really more important these units are on hand exactly when and where they are wanted. First the heavy wagons drive up. The drivers know exactly where to go and when to stop. Canvas and stakes are thrown off and men are waiting with heavy sledges to drive the eight foot long stakes in the ground. It is the matter of less than half an hour when all of the tents have risen skyward. A Pullman porter takes more time to make up a berth than these circus canvasmen require to set up the entire outfit. And over at the cook house, breakfast for the hungry workmen and the performers forty-five minutes after the range wagon hits the lot. Fire in steam cooker started en route to the show ground and no time lost in getting the coffee boiling. In the meantime more wagons roll up. There are the cages for the menagerie. Here comes a truck loaded with hay, another with bags of oats, and bran. The circus press agent stated this morning that the circus fed four tons of hay, 125 bushels of oats and half a ton of bran. A tank of water arrives and a city sprinkler goes into the "big top" and lays the dust. Nothing is overlooked, nothing left to chance. Feed, water and shade are provided and the animals get the very best of care. It's no child's play, this moving and unloading and erecting the Christy circus equipment.

Then Comes the Parade.

After the big top has been raised the animals have been settled in the menagerie, attention is given to the parade. The bugle sounds, the riders take their places, the bands and the callope tune up, and the elephants and camels shuffle to the far end of the long procession. Thousands gazed with astonishment this noon at the long and spectacular parade that took everyone by surprise as it wended its way through the business section and back again to the circus grounds. In the lead was the magnificently carved and ablaze with gold leaf, a red and gold shell band wagon that the old timers gazed at with fond recollections. The Christy show has the only one now in use. There was another gorgeous band chariot embellished with life-size animal carvings and covered with gold leaf that the press agent stated represented an investment of $1000. Then followed the whole paleocephalic agglomeration of prancing horses, male riders, pretty girls, wild animals, lumbering elephants, shuffling camels, funny clowns, a colored jazz band, tandem teams of snow white horses and zebras, big tawny cats in open dens, real cowboys and cow girls, and last the callope, steaming and smoking. It is a sight to stir up the ambition in the onlooker to change the days routine and go to the circus.

CLASSES HELD AT DES MOINES

the defendants be restrained in any way from limiting the degree of instruction or limiting the granting of credits.

Dr. Harry C. Wayman, president of the university, was notified of the issuance of the injunction by telephone and without waiting for formal serving of the district court's order, summoned the students to return to their classes.

The injunction was said to be in the "Nature of a friendly action".

Earlier Mr. Wayman, who with the remainder of the faculty had been released by the trustees, had said he would carry out to the letter the order of the trustees, suspending all classes and lectures in the university until further notice from the board.

The disorders of Saturday came to a head after a meeting of the trustees called to investigate charges of some of the students involving Dr. T. T. Shields, 61, Toronto, president, and Miss Edith H. Reberman, 49, secretary of the board. In the background also were reports of a fundamentalist-moderat controversy and contentions that the board had imported Canadian students to spy upon members of the faculty.

Dr. Shields and Miss Reberman were said by their accusers to have registered together in a hotel suite. The trustees found the charges "without foundation." Dissatisfaction among the student body increased and a second meeting of the trustees followed Saturday night.

Students bombarded the administration building, in which the trustees met, with eggs and other missiles. Police were called to disperse the rioters and Dr. Shields and Miss Reberman were escorted to the railroad station under police guard to return to their homes.
