AT THE THEATRES

At The Pine Tree

While presidents and governors are being elected, there's another election on which is full of thrills and fights, all of which makes some unusually timely and interesting moving picture entertainment. It is "The Carnation Kid" the new Douglas MacLean production which is showing at the Pine Tree starting tomorrow.

In the MacLean picture there's a district attorney running for office in a big city; and some very dangerous underworld forces importing a famous gunman to see that the district attorney never has a chance to run again. From the time that the young typewriter salesman is mistaken on the train for the notorious Carnation Kid with his newly invented machine gun, things begin to move in the plot.

MacLean plays the part of Clarence the typewriter salesman; Francis McDonald is the real Carnation Kid.

At The Pelican

Maurice Chevalier, to France and England what Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson are to America, and the greatest international genius of song and pantomime that New York has seen in many a long day, has a song in "Innocents of Paris," which he believes will be his greatest success.

The song is "Louise" and it was written especially for the French stage idol by Richard Whiting and Leo Robin, two of Broadway's best-known composers of popular songs and musical comedy hits. It is a love ballad and is developed as the theme song of the production.

Three songs which he sings in French and "puts over" in his own inimitable style of pantomime and mimicry, are "Valentine," the number which brought a sophisticated audience of critical New Yorkers to its feet at the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic recently—and "Dites Moi More," and "Les Ananas." The last number is the French version of the perennial American volkswagon, "Yes We Have No Bananas." "Innocents of Paris" comes to the Pelican theatre for three day run beginning Sunday. It was written by Ernest Vajda, the noted Hungarian playwright, and the screen version was written by Ethel Doherty.

At The Liberty

The management of the Liberty theatre announces it has booked the Western Feature, "The Border Wildcat," starring Ted Wells, to start Sunday. Wells is filmdom's greatest trick rider. In "The Border Wildcat," the ever-popular cowboy literally runs wild through the entire picture, performing stunts that will amaze and thrill the audience. With Pete, his trained horse, Wells gallops like a riding demon in and out of countless thrilling and dangerous situations.

At The Orpheus

What critics declare to be the most striking and dramatic presentation of the gigantic "rum running" industry that the screen has yet offered is in "Blockade," a story of liquor trafficking on the high seas which Director George B. Seitz has made for FBO, with dashing Anna Q. Nilsson in the featured role.

Combining a high standard of dramatic artistry in its more intimate passages with the clash and battle of armed ships on the high seas, where desperate outlaws war against the government forces for the loot that comes of bootlegging and brigandage, the picture has won quick acclaim throughout the country. It will be seen at the Orpheus theatre on Sunday for a run of two days.

AT THE VOX

"Father and Son," the Columbia drama of unselfish father love, synchronized with dialogue and a musical score, opened at the Vox theatre yesterday with Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier and Mickey McBan in the leading roles. It is good entertainment for all. The plot is unusual and the characterizations and voice reproductions are excellent. The happiest of home life exists between Jimmy Fields, the motherless boy, enacted by Mickey McBan, and Frank Fields, the adoring father, portrayed by Jack Holt. Next door to the Fields' home lives Miss White, an old-time friend of the family.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS

Are men who are compelled to observe many things, deciding the right or wrong persons in traffic accidents. Bent, or jammed fenders are among the first items they look for. The man with the straight, clean fenders on his car has the edge. Stop and let us give you an estimate on those fenders, and take no chances on being compelled to pay the other fellow's repair bill when you are involved in an unavoidable accident.
