Relief From Curse of Constipation
A Battle Creek physician says: "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Relax-O-Rex has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the large, dry, evacuating bowel called "colon." The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Relax-O-Rex tablet at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25 c today at the nearest Retail Drug Store.—Star Drug Store.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PELICAN
The undying quality of real man-to-man friendship is the motif underlying William Boyd's interesting and entertaining picture, "The Leatherneck," at the Pelican theatre today.

Meeting in war-time, two American marines and a German soldier form a comradeship which lasts through a decade and carries them from one outlying post of the world's civilization to another. When one meets romance the others help him attain his heart's desire. When disaster blasts his heart and happiness, they offer their own lives on the altar of revenge.

In the hands of such able player as William Boyd, Alan Hale and Robert Armstrong the three buddies, through weal and woe, are hearty and often humorous. Even in the most poignant moments, the "devil dogs" are true to their virile, hard-fighting selves. The comedy is bubbling and spontaneous and typically masculine.

As the only woman in the cast Diane Ellis, a blonde with cameo features, proves herself an excellent foil for the masculine array of talent, which includes in addition to Boyd, Hale and Armstrong, such talented actors as Fred Kohler, Mitchell Lewis and Jimmy Aldine.

AT THE PINE TREE
As inscrutable as a Sphinx; aloof and silent, shunning alike the clamorous praises of friends and the criticisms of rivals; that is Jetta Goudal. The French "cocktail of emotion," appearing in D. W. Griffith's "Lady of the Pavements," the current attraction at the Pine Tree theatre.

The motion picture profession has yet to solve the mystery of this enigmatic actress who, paradoxical as it may seem, is the best known and the least known of all the noted stars of the screen. Jetta Goudal shuns society.

What she does after her day's work is over, nobody knows, except that she retires to that mysterious something that lies vaguely beyond her stout front door; and what she does with her spare time is nobody's business, and because it is nobody's business so many persons are interested.

So far as is known, the French actress has a complete monopoly in Hollywood on the mystery business, which is her reason for being so mysterious about it. She should let out the secret, she says, there would be a thousand motion picture stars who would copy after her and become very able enigmas themselves. Jetta works very hard while on the set and at night she is home, as all good stars do. What she does there and there comes the rub and the reputation for being a woman of mystery, which isn't such a bad reputation after all.

AT THE LIBERTY
"Hey Rube," with Hugh Trevor and Gertrude Olmsted featured, will be exhibited at the Liberty theatre for the last time today.

"Hey Rube" bristles with rousing action laid against a background of glittering atmosphere, the small-town carnival and circus. Patrons who have viewed the feature declare that it is one of the most thrilling shown at the Liberty theatre this season.

Unfolding a delightful love story between Trevor as a young side-show con-man and Miss Olmsted as the heroine, "Hey Rube," teems with big "punches" such as the perilous plunges through a sheet of fire by Ethylene Clair, who plays a "high diving Venus," and the rescue of Miss Olmsted by young Trevor who swings on a rope from the topmost spoke of a ferris wheel to deliver the former from a flaming platform on the peak of the high diver's ladder.

Besides Trevor, Miss Olmsted and Miss Clair, who appears as the "most beautifully" formed woman in the world, "Hey Rube" numbers Bert Moorehouse, Walter McGrath and James Eagle in its cast.

Vox theatre and playing until Thursday "Molly and Me" presents Joe E. Brown as Jim, who is the "Me" of the title. Molly and "Molly" an agreement between their marriage vows that, if either ever wanted freedom, it was to be asked for and granted without question.

For fifteen years they toured the small towns in their cheap little burlesque show, always yearning for Broadway, but always happy, always deeply wonderful in love with each other—and then their dreams of fame came true for Jim. But, with fame, came a rift in love's lute and Molly begins to wonder if she isn't only too much excess baggage.

The story, which is an original by Lois Leeson, provides Belle Bennett with a dressier role than she has held for some time, while Joe E. Brown's character is made to order for this funny man, who can also drag forth a tear. Alberta Vaughn is the little fancy stepper who kicks up a lot of trouble and heart interest and Charles Byer plays the theatrical producer. Albert Ray directed "Molly and Me," which presents many talking and singing sequences recorded by the RCA Photophone. The synchronized musical score is by Hugo Rosenfeld, and the theme song especially written for the picture by L. Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Baer is called, "In the Land of Make Believe."
