WATCH OIL IN SUMMER TIME

Motor Experts Say Drivers Must Exercise Particular Care.

Heat is the enemy of efficient lubrication, say motor experts. That is why they advise you to watch your oil even more carefully in summer than you do in winter. At this season the normal heat of the engine is increased by the higher temperature of the atmosphere. Also, summer is the time for long vacation trips that put heavy strain on your engine.

You'll save yourself trouble if you choose an oil for your motor that resists heat and that forms no hard carbon even when burned.

"There are excellent reasons why summer motorists get such fine service from Shell Motor Oil," say chemists of the Shell laboratories. "Unlike even the most expensive oil, Shell Motor Oil forms no hard carbon at all. Refined without excessive heat, Shell Motor Oil is better prepared than other oils to stand summer usage. When it is burned, the carbon that is left is not hard and gritty, but merely a soft soot which blows away harmlessly through the exhaust. This is very important in the high-compression motors of today."

"Furthermore, this soft carbon is only one-third to one-fifth as much in quantity as the carbon formed by even the most expensive oils. For summer as well as winter use, Shell Motor Oil makes today's motors work better."

DOG HERO OF WAR IS DEAD

WEST ORANGE, N. J., July 10. (AP)—A stray dog that became a battle-scarred veteran of the A. E. F., today lies in a military grave in a local cemetery. His tombstone bears the epitaph: "Rags—wounded in action with the American expeditionary forces—the lone mourner was Joseph L. Bock, a retired member of the East Orange fire department, to which 'Rags' had attached himself during the years following his return from the war."

Out Our Way

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PINE TREE

One of the most unique and popular features of Al Jolson's stage performances is the runway from the footlights into the audience on which he comes out among the people to do his songs. The feeling of comradeship gives. And the idea was one of those inventions of which necessity was the parent.

Al Jolson is now playing at the Pine Tree theatre in Warner Bros.' extended run production, "The Jazz Singer." Jolson is there, literally on the piano, laughing, singing, thrilling audiences to the point of tears and cheers, as he recounts the story of the boy who would see the world.

AT THE LIBERTY

Mamie Stone, the Sphinx Woman, as personified by Belle Bennett in one of her most interesting and heart-grIPPING characterizations, is the attraction at the Liberty theatre. The picture is called "The Power of Silence."

Anders Randolph and John St. Polis give fine performances and are well contrasted as the rival attorneys. Every character adds his bit to the complete structure of the play, but Belle Bennett pervades the atmosphere every moment, even when she is temporarily absent from the scene. Her Mamie Stone is one of the finest performances, calculated to enhance still further her reputation as one of the great dramatic actresses.

AT THE ORPHEUS

Harry Langdon is the one screen comedian who can truthfully be called the "ace" of all screen comics. His claim to this distinction lies in his characterization.

Bewildered, whimsical Harry, whose droolery, sad face and twitching lips have created volcanic upheavals of laughter, is never imitated nor does he imitate. His screen characterization is the culmination of ideas and characters which he first introduced upon the speaking stage. His latest picture, for First National, "Heart Trouble," now showing at the Orpheus theatre.

reveals a most unique plot, saturated with human humor and presenting a novel condition which grew out of the recent war.

AT THE PELICAN

Striking in its originality of theme and deeply moving in its intense drama and spoken lines, "The Valiant" all-talking Movietone production starts a four-day run at the Pelican theatre today.

Indicative of the intensely human note that is struck in the motivation and dialogue of this most unusual screen offering is the fact that although the leading character, portrayed by Paul Muni, is introduced through his confession of a murder and thereafter is seen only in a felon's role, he wins and holds the sympathies of the audience to their very last glimpses of this valiant figure.

Indeed, it is his high-minded and purposeful attitude toward his family—to save his mother and sister from heartbreak and shame by cloaking his identity—that makes the striking title fit so well the atmosphere of the drama. It has its origin in a Shakespearean couplet that he has chosen as his motto:

"The coward dies a thousand times;
The valiant taste of death but once."

AT THE VOX

A love story you can't help loving is told by Belle Bennett, Joe E. Brown, Alberta Vaughn and Charles Byer in "Molly and Me," the Tiffany-Stahl Tiffany Tone production that delighted audiences yesterday at the Vox theatre, where it remains until Thursday.
