Supply Has Dwindled
Since Distilling
Halted.

WASHINGTON, July 22. (A. P.)—Five or six distilleries will be given permission by the prohibition bureau in the near future to resume the production of whiskey in the United States to replenish medicinal supplies.

In making that announcement, Commissioner Doran said the nation's government-guarded supply of medicinal whiskey had dwindled since distilling was halted under the eighteenth amendment to 9,549,071 gallons.

About 1,500,000 gallons are withdrawn from this stock each year and, taking probable evaporation into consideration, the total is considered sufficient to meet legal requirements for only five years.

About 2,000,000 gallons, the commissioner announced, will be produced next year so that the requirement for four-year aging can be complied with and, allowing for evaporation of 400,000 gallons, provide a full year's supply in storage in 1934.

The distilleries will resume operation under government supervision and will be allowed to produce about 1,400,000 gallons of bourbon and 600,000 gallons of rye whiskey next year. It is estimated that about one year's supply will be on hand when the new stock is ready for sale.

The commissioner regards recent suggestions that large amounts of the present supply are of questionable quality as having little foundation. Not more than 1,000 of the 300,000 barrels in the bonded warehouses, he believes, can be classed as questionable.

'PEPPERSASS' ON FINAL TRIP

as Jacob's Ladder, after something had gone wrong.

The locomotive toppled from the rails and into the ravine, where it was blown into bits when the boiler exploded.

Many of those who had assembled as guests of the state of New Hampshire and the Boston & Maine railroad to see "Old Peppersass" rededicated and make its final run, after having served as a museum piece since 1892, were marooned for hours in the bitter cold on the peak. They were forced to stay on the mountain because the ill-fated locomotive, in crashing over the trestle, had torn up so many ties that speedy repairs with the equipment at hand was impossible.

A number, including many women guests, elected to hike down the mountainside, and it was five hours before some of them reached hotels at the base after their boulder and brush-strewn journey.

Mrs. J. E. Conklin of San Francisco, nurse who went on duty the day Miss Wolfkill disappeared, gave a kidnapping clue. She said she heard Miss Wolfkill say: "I will not leave. This is my home." Miss Conklin said she heard the words on the ranch house porch and she did not know with whom Miss Wolfkill was talking.

REPTILE EATS ARMY BLANKET

CINCINNATI, July 22. (AP)—A boa constrictor with an army blanket in its vitals drew the services of eleven men at the Zoological Gardens here as it lay in evident pain, but the snake still held the blanket today after futile efforts to remove it.

S. A. Stephan, general manager of the Zoo, immersed the 24-foot reptile in an alligator tank, placed a hood over its head, and attempted with the aid of ten men to work the blanket out. That failing Stephan inserted into the snake a tube with a metal inside, but was unable to catch the blanket and pull it out. A half gallon of oil then was poured into the snake to relieve it. The blanket caught in the serpent's fangs Friday as it struck at a pigeon, and was swallowed with the bird. J. H. Poe, carnival operator, paid $1000 for the boa a few weeks ago, he said.

PRETTY MAIDEN PASSES CHECKS

A pretty and attractively dressed girl and her male companion passes $60.50 worth of bad checks on the merchants of Grants Pass during the week-end, using the signature of W. A. Johnson.

When last seen the couple was leaving the city in a coupe and officers north and south of the city were notified to watch for the couple.

The girl was probably 18 or 19, wore an immaculate white dress and a white coolie coat and was described by the merchants as very attractive looking. The young man was neatly, but not flashily dressed.

The method the girl used was sufficient to fool a number of the merchants. She entered the stores shortly before closing time paying by check she claimed that was received from her father, W. A. Johnson. The boy stated that he had worked on his farm and that they gave reasonable sounding stories. There are three W. A. Johnsons in Grants Pass, which makes the matter more complicated.

PEIPING, China, July 22. (A. P.)—An increasingly serious border situation in Manchuria over the week-end contracted gratification that American intervention under the authority of the Kellogg pact seemed to have averted actual hostilities.

Chang said the Chinese troops remained on the defensive. Russian troops, he said, were equipped with poison gas and 32 field guns.

An appeal of President Chiang Kai Shek, who is also generalissimo of the Chinese armies, to the commanding officers and soldiers, was published here. Chiang called upon the armies to rise against "Red imperialism" and uphold the sovereign rights of China.

He declared the abolition of unequal treaties and realization of national independence constituted the most important points of the Chinese revolutionary program and said that every officer and soldier of the national army should be willing to sacrifice his life for these realizations.

The manifesto concluded: "Russia's arrogant attitude cannot be ignored. Otherwise how can we ever hope to abrogate unequal treaties and win our proper place in the family of nations? Unless we unite in the fight against red imperialism our country and our peoples will perish."

The nationalist government at Nanking published a manifesto to the world governments stating its case.

The pronouncement said that in view of communist propaganda undermining the government it had been constrained to adopt measures of self defense with regard to the Chinese Eastern railway. It declared the soviet government, disregarding the consequences had adopted warlike preparations.

The manifesto in conclusion invited the world to give its attention to evidence of subversive communist propaganda in Manchuria, emanating from the highest soviet officials in the province.

Japanese news agency dispatches furnished what appeared to be most authoritative report of events within Manchuria.

Grover Whalen Warns "Decent" People To Avoid Night Clubs Resorts Are Owned By Gangs

NEW YORK, July 22. (AP)—Visitors to New York and "decent people" have been warned by Police Commissioner Whalen to keep away from night clubs, which he says are controlled by gangdom. Those who fail to heed the warning he said, are liable to get a lot of police attention.

The commissioner issued his warning in announcing the indictment of John Diamond, notorious gunman and racketeer, and Charles Entratta, ex-convict, for last Saturday's double slaying at the Hoty Totsy club of which Diamond was part owner.

"This indictment," said the commissioner, "brings to the fore the fact that gangdom is in control of the night clubs, it would be well for decent people to keep away from such places, for they are going to get lots of police attention from now on."

The Hoty Totsy club is one of the less pretentious of the Broadway district resort. Diamond and Entratta disappeared after the double shooting in which William Cassidy, alleged bootlegger, and Simon Walker, a former convict, were killed.

Commissioner Whalen's reorganized "Broadway Squad" descended upon more than a dozen speakeasies in the midtown section last night and early today, seizing a quantity of liquor and arresting a number of persons. The raids caused a general shut-down while a few places that remained open were reported to have immediately jumped the price of whiskey from fifty to seventy five cents a glass.

TRIO LOST IN THICK FIR WOODS

SALEM, July 22. (AP)—Edwin A. Thomas, assistant advertising manager, and Addison Lane, mailer, employees of the Capital Journal, and Horace Baker, also of Salem, are lost somewhere in the foothills of the Cascade mountains in the Scotts Mills district. The district is exceedingly rough and is covered with dense timber.

The three men left Salem Saturday to fish over the week-end, expecting to return Sunday afternoon. Alarmed at the failure to return, the wives of Thomas and Lane went to Bucket camp, near Scotts Mills, where they found Lane's automobile. The sedan was locked, and neither blankets nor food had been disturbed, indicating that the men had left the car Saturday and had not returned to camp Saturday night.

An airplane search today revealed no sign of the three, and a group of searchers organized by Sheriff Bower is now in the hills.

Where Was Portland?

The largest city in the state sends only a few delegates to the Oregon state Elks Convention.

"Mutual cooperation," that's what the big city on the Columbia river had been crying at Klamath Falls ever since they realized how well California can serve southern Oregon.

Portland wants the support of the southern Oregon merchants. It cries for our business and never supports our activities. We spend thousands of dollars in Portland every year; we support their Rose Festivals, buying weeks, horse shows, etc., with special trains and long automobile caravans and to reciprocate they send a handful of delegates to Klamath's biggest convention. They were out-done a hundred to one by Seattle, a city interested in Klamath and not even located in the state of Oregon.

The big Rose City of the dead has served southern Oregon in this fashion for years. Its indifference and disinterested attitude toward southern Oregon has lost it hundreds of thousands of dollars. For this reason southern Oregon had traded where it is served the best, for California gives us good merchandise, better service, and better prices, and last but not least, California supports our activities, they are interested in our affairs, our growth, and our success.
