AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PELICAN

The sheer exuberance of youth upon the screen spread to the audience in most satisfying fashion during the opening last night of "College Love," the feature-

"College Love," the "graduation" of the justly popular two-reel series of collegiate pictures conceived and produced by Carl Laemmle, Jr., is the first feature length production to be made with the familiar characterizations of college life and the first to be synchronized in sound.

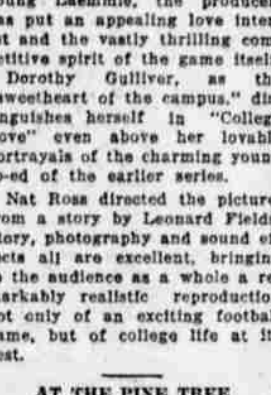

Football, the world's most popular non-professional sport, is the theme of the story into which young Laemmle, the producer, has put an appealing love interest and the vastly thrilling competitive spirit of the game itself.

Dorothy Gulliver, as the "sweetheart of the campus," distinguishes herself in "College Love" even above her lovely portrayals of the charming young co-ed of the earlier series.

Nat Ross directed the picture, from a story by Leonard Fields. Story, photography and sound effects all are excellent, bringing to the audience as a whole a remarkably realistic reproduction not only of an exciting football game, but of college life at its best.

AT THE PINE TREE

The fascination of India and the Far East is convincingly injected into "The Oriental," the Universal talk-film now at the Pine Tree theatre. Not until the very end does the audience withdraw from the spell of the Orient which surrounds this interesting picture and that in itself is a directorial feat of tremendous weight, for Holmes Herbert, who plays the role of a Hindu magician is really an American masquerading. Margaret Livingston, the woman who seeks the aid of a fortune teller in the picture, plays the leading feminine role. Rockliffe Fellowes and Fred Mc-Kaye complete the cast.

Scene from "THE ORIENTAL," A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

The role of villain is an intellectual accomplishment. Crauford Kent, who plays the role of the doctor who knew all about poisons in the Universal picture "The Charlatan," which is now playing at the Pine Tree theatre, is an inveterate reader and he feels that it helps him interpret his varied roles.

AT THE LIBERTY

By far the best and most entertaining Western Universal has turned out in some time is "Smilin' Guns," starring Hoot Gibson, which opened last night at the Liberty theatre. It presents the popular and versatile star in a new and entirely pleasing role.

While the energetic Hoot has injected a certain amount of the dominant note in Gibson Westerns has been Hoot's darddevil riding and death-defying feats. But in "Smilin' Guns," Hoot gives his audience, along with the usual amount of good riding and thrills, some of the best comedy anyone could desire.

Blanche Mehaffey, beautiful and talented young Irish colleen, heads an excellent supporting cast which includes Virginia Pearson, Leo White, Robert Graves, Walter Brennan, Jack Wise, James Bradbury, Jr., and Dad Gibson. All perform creditably and acquit themselves with honors.

AT THE ORPHEUS

A cast of international prominence appears in Billie Dove's new first National picture, "Adoration," now being presented at the headline attraction at the Orpheus theatre.

Miss Dove is an American girl; Antonio Moreno, the leading man, is Spanish; Nicholas Bela and Lucy Dornale are from Budapest, Hungary; Nicholas Sontagin was born in Crimea; Lucien Prival is of foreign extraction and was educated abroad. Winifred Bryson is an American actress, as is Francis Hamilton. Emile Chautard is French. Frank Lloyd, the director, is of Scotch birth.

DRESS TOO DRAB

LONDON.—Present day clergymen dress too much like undertakers, says Rev. B. G. Gourchier, vicar of St. Jude's. "Few clergymen have the courage to go about dressed like reasonable human beings," he says. Their present method of dressing is "calculated more than anything else to set up an effective barrier between the clergyman and the layman," he says.
