SEALS RETAIN LEAD BY HALF GAME MARGIN

Double Header Upset by Hollywood Stars; Lowers Average.

By winning twice in yesterday's Pacific coast league double headers, the San Francisco Seals today led the league by only half a game. The Stars held second place, and the Mission Reds of San Francisco third.

Hollywood won the series, four games to three by yesterday's double win at Wrigley field, Los Angeles. The score in the first battle was 4 to 2, and the second was 10 to 3. Buzz Wetzel's masterful mound work was credited with having turned the trick in the first, and Hank Hulvey did it in the second.

Amid a deluge of basehits and a parade of pitchers on both sides the Mission Reds and the Los Angeles Angels tangled at Recreation park, and split the proceeds, the Reds taking the morning game 10 to 9, and the Angels winning the afternoon, 11 to 7. The series ended with the Missions holding five wins to two for the Angels.

Sacramento's Senators lost both games to the Oakland Oaks on the lot across the bay, the morning score was 13 to 0, and the final 7 to 2. However, the Senators despite their double defeat won the series, four games to three.

Portland and Seattle divided their double header, the Indians winning the first game 11 to 3, and the Ducks clubbing their way pounded Horace Blevins, re-erupt pitcher from Tacoma, for a total of 13 base hits, while the visitors garnered 11.

Old Cubs Hid From Chance In Lockers

By AL DEMAREE (Former Pitcher N. Y. Giants)
There has been a great deal of publicity given the Hack Wilson-Donohue-Kolp flare-up in Chicago, but in the old days of baseball, fights were the rule rather than the exception.

Players fought each other, the umpires, and spectators in the stands. It was a favorite trick of the ball players to step on the ump's toes with their spikes, and occasionally they got hit in the face with his mask for their trouble. Mike Donlin was always stepping on umpires' toes.

Many a time the players of Frank Chance's great old Cub machine rushed into the locker room and locked themselves in their lockers, where he couldn't get at them, until Frank's rage cooled down. When he caught a man, he usually gave him a good trimming.

The funniest fight I ever saw was between Chief Myers and Art Fletcher. It was like some of these professional pugilistic encounters. Players held both of them, and not a blow was struck, although Chief kept yelling, "Let me at 'im!" and Art belted just as lustily, "Let 'im come!"

Twenty years ago today, Ed Bealbach of the Chicago Cubs pitched and won his 12th straight victory.

IT ISN'T THE FIGURE - IT'S THE SCORE!

Our best golfers come in assorted shapes and sizes, and the styles vary from year to year, but a pattern you can't go wrong on is that of the short, chunky barrister model from Atlanta.

HILGENDORF
model, such as that of Charles Hilgendorf from Michigan. Hilgendorf scored a 306 at Winged Foot, and that wasn't the worst golf seen there, either.

SARAZEN
Then there is the Gene Sarazen pattern, short and well set up like a drinking fountain. Or, if you prefer, half-pint measure.

WHITE
The build of an athlete after 50 is that of Jack White, the veteran Scot clubmaker and wielder.

JONES
Dunn back in 1922 in North Berwick. One of Bobby Jones' favorite clubs, his "Jeannie Deans," is White's creation.

SHUTE
Then there is the syph-like figure of Denny Shute (his name used to be Denmore), the human icicle from Worthington, Ohio, who tied for second place at Winged Foot with Sarazen, at 296.

ESPINOSA
Al Espinosa is another model of that was good this year until the chunky barrister type came into vogue.

FARRELL
Prominent among the offerings is the Johnny Farrell job. This is a reed-like model that can be made into something very attractive with the help of Moe Epstein and Solly Berg.

FLIER KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF MONOPLANE

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Aug. 5, (AP)—Scattered fragments of a monoplane lay on the parched slope of Fremont peak in the Mohave desert today, mute evidence of the tragic death of Virgil Cline, San Jose, Cal., pilot whose plane exploded yesterday 4,000 feet overhead in one of the wasteland's rare thunder storms.

A flash of lightning, which struck the gasoline tank of the craft as it soared on its way to Chicago from Los Angeles caused the detonation which abruptly terminated the journey, in the opinion of Oliver Phillips, mine superintendent of Randsburg, Cal.

Phillips reported that when a mine physician first arrived at the place where the flier's broken and mangled body was found, fragments of the plane were still raining from the clouds which brought no respite to the desert's long drought. A card found in Cline's pocket was the only means of identification.

The plane was a special built craft recently purchased from Lockheed Aircraft corporation for which Cline worked, by William Brock, and was to have been used by the round the world flier in a long distance flight as yet unannounced.

The plane was heard flying over the small mining town but could not be seen because of the clouds, Phillips said. The explosion ended the sound of its motor. Their first glimpses of the plane came as it fell from the sky in small pieces.

There are 35,000 John Smiths in the United States, it is said.
