AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PELICAN George Bancroft, who made such an overwhelming success of his first all talking picture, "The Wolf of Wall Street," appears in a new all talking drama, "Thunderbolt," at the Pelican theatre this week. Bancroft's voice is part of the man himself, deep, resonant, and capable of expressing a wide range of emotions. Richard Arlen, co-featured with Fay Wray in "Thunderbolt," has already made a name for himself in talking pictures in "The Man I Love," "Thunderbolt" directed by Josef von Sternberg, maker of "Underworld," is a gripping picture of life and love outside of the law.

The fame of "Underworld" started two outstanding screen personalities on the road to success. They are George Bancroft and Josef von Sternberg. Now these two have turned to talking pictures and have made another masterpiece, said to outstrip "Underworld," in the all talking medium. The picture is "Thunderbolt," which will show at the Pelican theatre this week. Sights and sounds of New York's great Negro metropolis and of Sing Sing's condemned row, furnish the background for the story of a fighting hero-man. Richard Arlen and Fay Wray are co-featured in the picture.

AT THE LIBERTY Olive Borden in the stellar role of "Come to My House," showing at the Liberty theatre, gives a scintillating and dramatic characterization of Joan Century, the society girl in Arthur Somers Roche's widely read story.

As the beautiful girl who is torn between the loves of two men, Miss Borden brings much of her latent dramatic power to the surface in one of the most versatile roles she has ever played.

AT THE ORPHEUS As versatile a troupe of comedians as ever was gathered together in one production is to be found in the cast of "Lady Be Good," the first National picture which comes to the Orpheus theatre today.

Heading the cast are Dorothy Mackall and Jack Muhlall, first National featured players, and both excellent farceurs. Muhlall made a tremendous hit with his character "Tom of 'The Poor Nut,'" a farce comedy success, and Miss Mackall has been featured in "Subway Sadie," and several other farces.

AT THE PINE TREE Duplicating in melodramatic guise the smashing success of the all talking musical, "The Broadway Melody," M-G-M's new dialogue, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," now playing at the Pine Tree theatre, reaped equally as enthusiastic reviews from the New York critics at its Broadway premiere.

Unanimity of opinion prevailed that "Mary Dugan" represents the outstanding all talking film of its kind. "The most expert piece of work that has been delivered to the talking screen," commented the Morning Telegraph, and other papers expressed a similar opinion with equal force.

WRITES APPEAL TO AVOID JAIL

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Aug. 6. (UP)—The judge couldn't talk with his fingers, and the prisoner, a deaf mute, could talk no other way. So it was decided to conduct the trial of Joseph Botrich, charged with theft here recently, in writing.

Botrich read the charges and scribbled: "I know. I did it."

"Why?" wrote the judge.

"Needed money," the mute answered.

When the penalty was made known to him, the prisoner hastily indicated: "I'll give everything back."

"Don't do this kind of thing again," was the magistrate's next inscription.

"Never," Botrich set down in letters John Hancock would have envied.

"Sentence suspended," wrote the judge, closing the case.
