AT THE THEATRES

Another link in the chain of acute mystery in "Strange Cargo," Pat's rapid-fire mystery romance, is forged when the Captain (Claude King) matches the tongue from the head of Dr. Stecker (Frank Richter) and accuses him of murdering the missing millionaire.

Reported to be one of the most thrilling all-talking pictures ever screened, "Strange Cargo" will be the attraction at the Pelican theater starting Sunday for a run of three days. Several stage players of reputation and wide popularity are featured. The story deals with the mysterious murder of the owner of a palatial pleasure yacht at sea and from start to finish the dramatic action never lags. The sound effects are said to be tremendously effective.

AT THE PINE TREE
"The Home Towners," the Warner Bros. all-talking Vitaphone production, represents the last word in sound and speech films, incorporating as it does all the improvements which have marked the meteoric progress of the talking film. It is really an "all-talking" picture, for every word spoken by the characters in the story is audible to the audience, no titles whatever being shown upon the screen.

"The Home Towners" is a rollicking comedy-drama written by George M. Cohan, long the "Yankee Doodle Dandy" of the stage, and more or less seriously characterized as the man who made the American flag famous. As a stage play "The Home Towners" registered a pronounced success, lending itself remarkably well to the screen.

AT THE ORPHEUS
Regal beauty—especially in pictures—usually is fatal to a career. Take Mary Astor, Fox Film player, who has been called the "Patricia of the Screen."

For several years producers could not seem to see Miss Astor in anything but period pictures, supporting such stars as John Barrymore, Douglas Fairbanks and Richard Barthelmess. None knew better than Mary Astor that supporting such stars as those meant little opportunity to do anything else but look pretty.

A few months back Mary Astor signed up with Fox Films and made known her wishes to do some acting. She was put to the test, and a severe one, being assigned the feminine lead in "Dressed to Kill," a story of the underworld in which she played the part of a consort of crooks. Her work amazed the film colony and the public, and she has come right back with an almost similar adaptation for the screen. For the making of "The Home Towners," Warner Bros. have assembled an unusual all-star cast, every member of which has had both stage and screen experience. The roster includes Richard Bennett, Doris Kenyon, Robert McWade, Robert Edeson, Gladys Brockwell, John Miljan, Vera Lewis, Stanley Taylor, James T. Mack and Patricia Carson. Bryan Fox directed.

Addison Burkhardt and Murray Roth adapted this joyous play to the screen.

"The Home Towners" comes to the Pine Tree theater Sunday for a run of three days. Stop, look, listen!

AT THE LIBERTY
Something to look forward to—Ken Maynard in his latest thrill twister, "The Lawless Legion," scheduled to arrive at the Liberty theater on Sunday. The intangible Maynard is in a class by himself when it comes to portraying the western types of character and injects plenty of stunts and thrills into his pictures. He has built an enviable following of fans throughout the world and his latest, fastest and best "The Lawless Legion" will increase that following of legions.

According to advance reports, both audiences and critics agree that it is by far the best this popular star has appeared in to date. Everything desirable in the way of entertainment is to be seen and heard in this thrilling story of the early days of Texas and the border.
