School for Bulldogging Latest Educational Move

Zeke Announces Intention of Establishing Correspondence Course in Art of Handling Longhorns. Disability Prevents Practical Demonstration.

BY ZEKE SQUEE
LAKEVIEW, Ore., Aug. 19. (Special)—Caving in to a general clamor from the younger fry of Goose Lake valley, your scribe finally has opened here an institution of learning, where we give a correspondence course in bulldogging steers.

IT IS the intention of the alma mater to graduate a nice big class of bulldogging seniors in time for the students to take part in the thrilling wild west features billed in the Roundup program scheduled for August 31 and September 1 and 2.

SOME might jeer at our undertaking to teach bulldogging entirely by mail, but we guarantee to give you the entire works, which ranges from bringing the teacher a nice, big red apple in the morning, all the way to limping out of the arena after an over-fractious steer has thrown the buckaroo overboard and stopped in his stomach for good measure.

THE FALL semester is now open and any of the younger male goings of Goose valley who contemplate enrolling are urged to do so now before the old folks catch on to what you are up to and give you the devil.

TERMS are reasonable and the school furnishes lesson leaflets, knives, liniments and ointments to last the freshman the first two weeks. One crutch also comes with the supplies.

The student is required to provide his own mustang, steers, fairgrounds, slates, pencils and the other crutch. This makes a very pleasant arrangement for the bright boy who must fish for his education with a shoestring.

YOUNG Joshua of Goose valley, and fat ladies who wish to reduce, here is your golden opportunity! Enter an uncrowded profession and win the plaudits of the multitude. Take up bulldogging and get ahead. Work in plain view of the cheering thousands.

HERE is what it means to you: Imagine you are in Lakeview for the big celebration. A chute from the corral is opened, a steer hops out in front of the grandstand long enough to wave its tail in a fond farewell to the Roundup guests, then attempts to clatter out of the left-hand side of the picture.

BUT NOT SO! One of our valdeditors in the bulldogging class sits his horse in goodly fashion over on our right. He
