AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PINE TREE "It will be a long time before the screen has another one like it." Such was the verdict of

Wall and Kay Francis, the suave vamp of "Gentlemen of the Press."

AT THE LIBERTY One of the most thrilling of adventure-action pictures ever filmed comes to the Liberty theatre today when Bob Steele's latest FBO production, "Laughing at Death," starts its run at the local house.

"Laughing at Death" concerns the exploits of a young American college husky who stakes on an ocean liner through summer vacation.

Steele plays opposite Natalie Joyce, beautiful new screen find. The pair makes an admirable combination. Wallace Fox directed "Laughing at Death."

AT THE ORPHEUS The Dummy leaned down from his perch upon the saloon bar, gesticulating with drunken dignity as he slobbered the words which waked toll-weary men from their hypnotic dreams of endless wealth and sent them racing madly across the desert in lynchings, providing one of the most exciting sequences of "The Rainbow," Tiffany Stahl's Reginald Barker Special production with Dorothy Sebastian and Lawrence Gray showing today at the Orpheus theatre.

The all-star cast of "The Desert Song," which was directed by Roy Del Ruth, includes John Boles, Carlotta King, Louise Fazenda, Myrna Loy, John Miljan, Johnny Arthur, Marie Wells, Jack Pratt, Edward Martindel, Robert E. Guzman, Otto Hoffman, and many others.

She established herself as the "Empress of It" the first time she appeared in pictures. She established herself as a talk picture actress when she appeared in "The Wild Party" and now she establishes herself as one of the world's most versatile actresses in her role of equestrienne and female clown in "Dangerous Curves." She is Clara Bow and her newest all-time talking play, a story of the "big top," is at the Pelican theatre.

In support of Miss Bow in this new picture are Richard Arlen, featured player in "The Man I Love" and other successful films; David Newell, romantic lead in "The Hole in the
