An Austrian recently played a violin for 24 hours without stopping. We've known plenty of people who have just fiddled around half their lives.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE LIBERTY
Bob Steele, young athletic star, gained a name for himself in western pictures and carried himself to a place among the leaders in national popularity. The injection of new angles and novel twists into the stories from which his pictures were adapted was partly responsible for his rapid climb upward, but his success was largely due to the personality and ability of the young star himself.

He attained a top place among the western players, but almost as suddenly as he broke into prominence he has left the field of western pictures. Steele felt that the range of characterizations in westerns was too limited. He decided to go into the field of action pictures, with their wider range of locale and plot.

In such a vehicle he now is appearing at the Liberty Theater. "Laughing at Death" gives Steele a chance to show his real histrionic ability, for he plays a dual role in the production. Steele is cast both as a European prince and as a stoker on a trans-atlantic liner who, loving adventure, agrees to change identities with the prince and thus throw conspirators off the track. The most thrilling of sequences result.

AT THE PELICAN
Clara Bow fans turned out in large numbers yesterday to see and hear their favorite in the much-heralded role of bare-back rider and female Paillard in the feature picture, "Dangerous Curves," at the Pelican.

The scenes of "Dangerous Curves"—and the excellent sound atmosphere as well, are those of a big circus. Miss Bow is the bareback rider in love with Richard Arlen, a tight-rope walker. Kay Francis is the vamp who gathers all of Arlen's misplaced love to herself until the hero learns that Kay is false.

In addition to Arlen and Miss Francis, splendid support is furnished by David Newell, Anders Randolph, May Boley, T. Roy Barnes, Joyce Compton, Charles T. Brown, Stuart Erwin and Jack Lodge.

The picture is all-dialog. It is the first dialog picture with a circus background, and it will probably prove to be one of the best. Don't let this one go by.

AT THE PINE TREE
Quite the most delightful comedy scenes in the history of the talking picture take place between Louise Fazenda and Johnny Arthur, the two funsters in the all-star cast in "The Desert Song," which has made screen history as the first opera to be transferred to films in its entirety, and which may be seen on the screen of the Pine Tree theater now.

Other prominent parts in "The Desert Song" are played by John Boles, Carlotta King, Myrna Loy, John Miljan, Marie Wells, Jack Pratt, Edward G. Robinson, Robert E. Guzman, Otto Hoffman and others, in addition to a magnificent chorus of 100 voices—a veritable triumph for the Vitaphone.

AT THE ORPHEUS
Pulsing with all the vigorous charm of the last frontier, "The Rainbow," which opened yesterday at the Orpheus theater, is as completely American as buckwheat cakes or corn-on-the-cob. It has all the color of the gold rush days and all the speed which modern motor cars and gangs can inject into a good yarn. And in addition it has Dorothy Sebastian and Lawrence Gray in as pretty a love story as can be imagined against the beautiful desert backgrounds, which seem created especially for romance.

The story of "The Rainbow" concerns the attempt of Derby Scanlan and his gang, stranded in a little western "ghost" city, to retrieve their fallen fortunes by faking a new gold strike at Eldorado. Lola, Derby's ward, falls in love with Jim, one of the mad throng pouring in on the scene of the alleged strike, and the drunken revelation by one of the gang that the strike is a hoax sets off the dynamite. Escapes, captures, misunderstandings and a climax so surprising that your mind receives it as a definite impact of colliding ideas made "The Rainbow" the last word in thrills.

MRS. WEST GOES TO CONVENTION

Mrs. Walter West, grand guardian of Jobs Daughters for the state of Oregon leaves tonight for Denver, Colo., to attend the national convention in session Aug. 29, 30 and 31.

Mrs. West will make the trip via San Francisco, Palo Alto, where she will visit for several days. After the convention Mrs. West plans to journey on east to Topeka, Kas., and Chicago for a month's visit.

In May of this year, Mrs. West was elected to the high position of guardian. The state convention of Jobs Daughters is to be held here in April of 1930. It is with a great deal of pleasure Mrs. West is looking forward to the trip. She has been an active worker in the Order of De Molay for many years. Her visit to Chicago, her old home, will be the first in more than 12 years.

Out Our Way

It's Stylish To Be Bronzed, Too!

Pretty Barbara Newberry has been cast in several Broadway shows, but this is the first time she was cast in bronze. Here you see the comely chorine, selected by Florenz Ziegfeld as the owner of "America's Most Beautiful Legs," beside the unfinished bronze as it came from the foundry, still bristling with the nails that are necessary to hold the mold. Mahonri Young, grandson of Brigham Young, famed Mormon, was the sculptor.
