AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PELICAN

Take a map of the world. Stick a pin in any spot which designates an important city and Victor McLaglen can tell you all about it.

Canada, Hawaii, Fiji Islands, Tahiti, Australia, Ceylon, Bombay India, Portuguese East Africa, German East Africa, South Africa, England, Ireland, Scotland, America, Baghdad, all are parts of call for the Fox Films star during his adventurous life and he never was idle, for it is in the record that he participated in seven wars.

When the World War began McLaglen and his brother to enlist Cape Town for London to enlist.

When he reached London he found that, from the four corners of the globe, his seven brothers had gathered at the call of their country.

One brother came from China another from Canada, two from the United States.

Now he is a soldier again, but this time in the all-dialogue Fox Movietone production, "The Black Watch," John Ford production in which McLaglen is starred in the role of "Captain King," of the famous Scotch regiment. "The Black Watch" is based on Talbot Mundy's story, "King of the Khyber Rifles," and is the attraction at the Pelican theatre now.

Myrna Loy plays the role of the exotic "Yamani," the she devil of India who aspired to a throne.

AT THE ORPHEUS

"Plastered in Paris," at the Orpheus theatre, starts with a "flash" sequence of World War trenches and thereafter leaves the great conflict "flat."

The trench scenes show Sammy Cohen as the dynamic little Jewish comedian where he gets a dose of poison gas and hospital surgeons decree that thereafter he will be a kliep! aniac.

Ten years later they are delegates to the American Legion convention in Paris and Pennick seeks a cure by a famous French specialist for his friend Sammy.

AT THE LIBERTY

In the unusual situation of having two leading men for a single picture, Leatrice Joy, star of "Man-Made Woman," has a decided uncommon cast for this DeMille studio feature for

'DRY' GAS AIDS THE OIL GAUGE

It sounds funny on the face of it—but experts vouch for this statement.

Your oil gauge reading may be entirely wrong if you use a "wet" gas. You can help keep it correct by putting only "dry" gas in your tank.

This is the secret. "Wet" gas is only partly consumed in your cylinders. That means loss of money, loss of power. It also means that the unburned drops slide down cylinder walls, washing off the oil, draining into the crankcase. Then they dilute the oil, cut down its efficiency. The oil gauge, being merely mechanical, may be true in registering the amount of oil in your tank, but it is wrong when in fact your oil is half gasoline.

On the other hand, when you fill your tank with Shell 400, the "dry" gas, experts of the Shell laboratories tell us that this fuel goes into your cylinders completely vaporized. It burns completely, burns cleanly. Thus there is no such amount of residue left to dilute your oil, as when you use "wet" gasoline. The use of Shell 400 helps to keep your oil gauge truthful.

Next time you change your oil, take a look at the stuff that comes out of the crankcase, if you have been using a "wet" gasoline. Compare with oil from an engine that burns only Shell 400. You'll be surprised!
