ESKIMO UNABLE TO KO BENNETT IN FAST BOUT

Card Last Night One of Best Ever Seen Here.

Walter Cleghorn, Alaska Indian, with a left hook that deals misery every time it connects, was unable to put over the punch that would make Tommy Bennett, San Francisco battler, take the count, in one of the best ten-round bouts ever staged at the American Legion pavilion.

Both fighters were aggressive, willing to take as well as give, and the fans were treated to a rare exhibition of hard slugging and clever boxing.

Eskimo Is Tough
Matched with Cleghorn's smashing left hook was Bennett's clever side stepping and long right arm jabs. He repeatedly rained blows to the Eskimo's face and body but the sturdy Indian didn't seem to realize that he was being punished, and always came back for more.

Round for round, it would seem that Cleghorn had somewhat the best of the argument. This was due to his style of fighting. The hard rushes of Bennett in the first of each round were usually offset by the Indian's ability to receive that attack and come back at the close of the round with a vicious attack. For this reason, many of the fans felt that if a decision were to be given, Cleghorn was entitled to it. In a clearly technical sense, it must be conceded that Bennett employs good ring generalship, is a clean fighter, and that he hit often. It was plain that he could not punish the Eskimo enough to weaken him, although on two occasions it looked like Cleghorn was worried a little.

Opening Round Fast
The bout opened with a smashing attack by both fighters. It almost brought the fans to their feet, would have, doubtless, had not a previous bout given them so much thrill. Both men released some hot stuff and it looked like a draw from the beginning.

Round by Round
In the second round Cleghorn let loose with a few good lefts which told Bennett he had better fight shy of too much of that medicine. That round was Cleghorn's by a safe margin.

In the third round it was a matter of give and take, with honors about even. The same went for the fourth, with Bennett showing slightly better form. Again in the fifth the Eskimo took the honors by a narrow margin, his ability to receive standing him in good stead. The sixth was a little slower and Bennett finished the round in the best shape. In the seventh, however, Cleghorn came back with a determination to end the fracas, and he punished Bennett severely. It looked like he was about due for deep water when the gong rang. Bennett recovered during the rest and came back in the eighth for a fast milling, both men showing good form. The ninth was about the same kind of battle with Cleghorn finishing a little the strongest. It was plain that a knockout was out of the question. Bennett was too — and too clever to let himself in for a blow that might mean curtain. The tenth found the fighters in about the same position as in the ninth, leaving the impression with the fans that Cleghorn had a slight edge over the — Italian.

As is usual at a sporting event there were some who felt that the decision of Referee Ross was unfair, but in the main the crowd was well satisfied with both fighters, showed real enthusiasm, in fact, and all realized that they had just witnessed one of the best cards ever staged here.

The semi-windup was a grueling battle from start to finish. Johnny Spencer, Seattle and Frankie Monroe, Chiloquin, went five rounds to an unpopular draw. The hard-hitting, boring-in Monroe was met with smashing jabs and clever boxing by the Seattle boy which at once placed him as a favorite with the fans. Monroe is a hard man to hurt, but the clever Spencer opened a deep cut over his eye early in the fight and kept the blood oozing from it throughout. On points, it was clearly Spencer's fight and Referee Ross was booed when he lifted both fighters' gloves at the end of the fifth round.

Jackson Kayoes O'Neil
Near the end of the third round in a four round event, Eddie O'Neil went down for the count after a hard hammering by Steamboat Jackson, slugger from Wallace, Idaho. Eddie was game and showed a willingness to continue but the crowd felt he had been punished enough and called for a decision. Steamboat was credited with a technical knockout.

Curtain Raiser Good
There must be something in a name, for the bantam scrap resembled two infuriated bantam roosters about as closely as it is possible for a human to impersonate a fowl. Benny Dyson of Klamath Falls and Finley Wilson, Klamath Indian boy, seemed determined to exterminate each other and they all but stole the show. Flats were firing continuously and their show brought the loudest applause of the evening. They fought to a draw.

Jerry Knocked Out
Bad Jerry drew a knockout at the hands of Jack Davis in a scheduled four-round bout. Jerry substituted for Mahr Remers and was too inexperienced. He took the count at the end of the second round.

Harold Wright of Chiloquin and Walter Giovannini of Klamath Falls were the first on the card. These youngsters gave a good account of themselves in a two-round match, although both are a little awkward. The crowd contributed dimes, nickels and quarters for their benefit and they showed considerable alacrity in picking up the money.

Altogether, last night's card was a first class opener and Matchmaker Bickerstaff enjoys the appreciation of the fans in providing lively entertainment. With this kind of a start, the fall season should prove interesting to followers of fistiana and the Legion pavilion will be taxed to accommodate the crowds.

CHILEAN TAKES DRUBBING FROM CHAMPION SAM
CHICAGO, Sept. 7. (AP)—Two Chileans, Luis Vincentini and Stanislaus Loayza, put up two very different types of boxing exhibitions in fights that topped Paddy Harmon's stadium

Big Bam Scared of Killing a Pitcher

By AL J. BAKER
(Former Pitcher N. Y. Giants)
Babe Ruth told me he has always had a secret fear of getting hold of a fast ball on the outside of the plate and driving it straight back at the pitcher. "I try to pull the ball to right field or hit late and drive the ball into left field," he explains.

"I'm always afraid of killing a pitcher, especially when one of my 'cousins' is pitching." Ruth always calls the pitchers he loves to hit against, his "cousins."

To show how dangerous it is out there on the pitcher's mound, "Folli" Ferritt, the old Giant pitcher, claims Hans Wagner once hit a line drive through his legs that the center fielder caught on the fly in deep center.

AUGUST 24, 1914
Fifteen years ago today the Boston Braves led the National League race after being in last place during July.

card last night. Both were willing, but Vincentini had the misfortune to be matched with the world's champion lightweight and left jabber, Sammy Mandell. Consequently he took a decisive whipping.

Loayza fought Joey Medill of Chicago, and it was ten rigorous rounds to a well earned draw. Loayza was no more eager than his countryman, but Medill was not the competition Mandell was.

Fighting at 135 pounds, the champion was his old self. After the first five rounds, the fight was all Mandell. He was fast, accurate and willing. Often Vincentini grinned as his own lunges and drives met nothing but atmosphere.

The fight was not a championship affair, both men coming in over the 135 pound limit. The Loayza-Medill fight was ten rounds of toe-to-toe bawling, with one as ready as the other to trade punches. It was the most active fight on the card, which included a ten rounder in which M. Sullivan, St. Paul welterweight, belted victory for himself over the ragged, but not too clever Spaniard, Alf Ros. Clyde Chastain, Dallas welter, and Jackie Brady, Syracuse, drew in the other ten round match.

HOLLYWOOD HAS SLIGHT MARGIN IN COAST RACE

Half Game Separates Actors and Missions.

Hollywood was its old self again yesterday after defeating the Oakland Oaks to retain its half game lead in the Pacific Coast League pennant race, but the bustling Mission Reds were right on the heels of the lads from Movieland, while the top notch standing indicated that first place was virtually anybody's prize.

The fourth game of the week's series at Emeryville across the bay from San Francisco was a snappy exhibition, which the Stars bagged 3 to 1. "Buz" Wetsel held the mound for the visiting Stars, doing a tidy job by allowing only a single hit in the first four innings, although the Oaks gathered eight in the long run. The Stars hit the ball for a total of 11.

"The" Boone's prolific bat work raised the stock of the Missions at Sacramento, where the Senators met defeat 6 to 2 before a very small crowd. While Boone's homers came when the bases were empty, they would have brought victory anyway, inasmuch as Merton Nelson allowed the home team only a pair of markers, although the boys did get a dozen clouts.

Released by the Seals a few weeks ago, Johnny Walters now of the Ducks pitched against his former team mates at Recreation Park at San Francisco yesterday and defeated them with ease by a score of 8 to 2. Walters held the San Francisco team, to but eight hits, and was rarely in any danger. Bates of the Ducks swung himself a bit out of joint when he took a vicious lunge at the ball while at bat, and was forced to leave the game because of a wrenched shoulder.

Los Angeles scored its fourth victory this week over the luckless Seattle Indians by defeating them 8 to 3 in the California city. Red Roberts had a little difficulty pitching his mates to a win over the league tall-enders. Barbee of the Indians and Shulmerich of the Angels flogged out home runs.

RAIN AND OPEN DATES CHECKED MAJORS FRIDAY

Only Two Games Were Played—Double Header.

Rain and open dates limited major league activity yesterday to two games in Pittsburgh, but even this curtailment failed to prevent the Cubs from drawing closer to the pennant. The Bruins themselves had two games washed permanently from their schedule in St. Louis as the Robins held the Pirates to an even break. This turn of events left the Cubs in need of only eleven victories in their remaining twenty-three games.

the same number the Athletics runs in the fifth, giving the flock just enough leeway to ease out ahead by 4 to 3 at the finish. Watson Clark won his fourteenth victory, but had to have the help of Johnny Morrison in the ninth, when, after several earlier rallies had failed the Pirates threatened to tie. Jess Pette was right in the second clash, and Moss, McWeeny and Moore were not, so the buccaneers had little trouble in winning by 8 to 1. The Pirates collected 13 hits.
