AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PINE TREE One of the most romantic eras of history was the reign of Napoleon Bonaparte, and a story in which he plays a prominent part is of necessity interesting. It is particularly colorful when the plot involves the love affair of a beautiful American girl who nearly loses her chance for happiness through the intervention of her beloved's brother, who is none other than the great Napoleon.

The girl in question, Dolores Costello, who became famous in John Barrymore's "The Sea Hawk" and "When a Man Loves." The man? Conrad Nagel. Napoleon is played by Paquale Amato. The girl's father is Marc McDermott. You will see John Miljan, Betty Blythe, Michael Vavitch, Andra de Segurina, Paul Panzer, Carlissa Selwynne and many more.

The picture in which Dolores Costello is starred is "Glorious Liza," a Warner production, directed by Alan Crosland, and it will be shown at the Pine Tree theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

If you love romance, you will love "Glorious Liza." If you are interested in historical fiction, you will find it in this production with a sugar coating. If you are interested in the Napoleonic era because of its colorful costumes and settings, the scenes in this picture will be a feast for the eyes.

The story, in brief, is this: Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, on a visit to America wins the love of the most beautiful girl in Baltimore. In the face of opposition from his brother, who is planning a marriage between Jerome and the Princess Fredericks of Wurttemberg, and afterwards anticipates making him King of Westphalia, Jerome marries Betsy Patterson and takes her to France to effect a reconciliation. Of course, Napoleon interferes, and there the real drama begins. The picture is full of suspense and thrills, and it is the most interesting because it is the true story of two great lovers of history.

Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, who make an admirable screen team, are hooked to play in many more Warner pictures together.

It is a strange fact that it was a costume picture, "The Sea Hawk," that made Dolores Costello famous, and since that time her costume pictures have been her greatest successes. And now we have another one.

AT THE ORPHEUS There is no feature of our national life that has developed so rapidly or so enchained public imagination as the air mail service. Only a few years ago—less than five—it was being tried out by the post office department on a few short routes. Now it spans the continent in every direction, functions with the unfailing regularity of railroad mail trains and is accepted almost as a commonplace.

But the romance that attaches to the aviation of the flyers who pilot the great planes with their tons of mail has never faded and it is this that has contributed to the popularity of "The Air Legion," FBO's thrilling epic of the air mail service, showing at the Orpheus theatre Sunday and Monday.

The powerful dramatic story, in which Ben Lyon, Antonio Moreno and Martha Sleeper portray the featured roles, includes a gripping psychological presentation of a young pilot who develops a streak of "yellow" in his battles with the elements and is saved from himself by an "ace" flyer of war days, his rival for the love of a charming girl. Bert Glennon, himself a wartime flyer, directed the photography for FBO and in the cast are included John Gough and Colin Chase.

AT THE LIBERTY A trained "skunk" proved more effective than a six shooter! This is demonstrated by Rex Bell in his latest Fox Films' thriller, "Taking a Chance." Rex, in the story, is a stranded cowboy actor who hitches his star to a preacher who finds that preaching the gospel in a hard-boiled cow-town is not at all what it is cracked up to be. But Rex has his bar of tricks: When his guns fall him he takes his last stand. And that is his trained animal, with the ferret nose and white tipped tail. And lo, the bad men scatter in all directions.

That is just one of the humorous situations in "Taking a Chance," one of the fastest-moving Western dramas, filled with action, at the Liberty theatre Sunday and Monday.

Playing opposite Bell in the leading feminine role is lovely Lola Todd, and others included in the cast are Richard Carlyle, Jack Henderson, Jack Byron, Martin Cichy and Little Billy Watson.

AT THE PELICAN Ken Maynard's latest Western at the Pelican, starting Sunday for a run of two days, offers plenty of diversion for the film fans.

The plot is constructed around the difficult journey of a wagon train loaded with freight from one lonely outpost to a still lonelier one.

The journey is made more difficult through the machinations of the villain, played by Tom Santachi. He owns the rival freight company and expects to profit by the failure of the honest haulers. Maynard is just right as the hero. He is good looking and the way he brings gasps and applaus from the audience. Next to Ken comes Taran, his horse, who really does the best acting of anyone in the cast. The dialogue sequence and several of the old time cowboy songs in this picture prove good entertainment and makes the picture a super western.
