PROF. COLLINS GIVES OUTLINE FOR NEXT TALK

Following his lecture of last week, in the course in Literature in England and America in the 1920's, in which he pointed out evidence of the break in literature of the 1920s with that of the twenty years just preceding, Professor Wilkie Nelson Collins, instructor in the University of Oregon evening class which meets regularly each Friday evening at 7 o'clock in the City Library, will tell of the definite things in novels, plays and poetry that writers in the 1920s think they have done to constitute this direct break. There will also be a rapid survey of the newer people who seem to count for most in the 1920s both in England and America.

"One good way of sizing up any generation is to find out what it cares for most in the traditional material that it uses," argues Professor Collins. The subject of his lecture on Friday evening of this week will be "Out of the Past," and he will talk about the shifts of emphasis in valuing old literary reputations that make the 1920's seem different from the naughts and teens of the twentieth century.

During the next two or three weeks he will discuss at some length the sensationalists, insisting that they color more than anything else all modern writing, and then he will take up the psychological novel and show its present intensified program and what various writers of the 1920s have done with it.

Those who missed the first meeting of this class but who wish to take the course should attend this meeting on Friday evening if possible. Enrollments in the course will be permitted as late as the third meeting on October 18, after which registration will be closed. There are no preliminary requirements for registration, but anyone interested may enroll.

MALIN DEFEATED BY WILDCATS

The Malin eleven was defeated by a score of 19 to 7 by the Klamath Wildcats on their home field last Friday afternoon.

Both teams played a fast, charging game. The Wildcats made practically all their yardage on double criss-crosses and line plunges. Malin made their yardage on passes and end runs.

Malin has another chance at the Klamath Wildcats, and think that, with lots of practice, despite the fact that the Wildcats have much the heavier team, they can give them a much tougher game.

As Klamath has so many men to pick from, they have it over the smaller schools in the county. They had about as many men in suit Friday as Malin has boys in school.

Substitutes—William Streeter, Enoch Petrasek, Jack Chapman.

THERE'S ONE IN EVERY SCHOOL

One what? Oh, various things. For instance: She who is always waiting for some one at the same place every day; or the crowd of girls gossiping about some good-lookgink senior boy; or the teacher's particular affinity who always gets to prepare his theme, or take his exams a day late; or the one who always comes to class a quarter of an hour behind and asks, "do I need an excuse?" (how the teachers love him (?); or the inevitable gum-chewer; or the one with the good clothes and tousled hair (it is rumored that he had halitosis); or the pretty girl who acts like a statue (and is just as intelligent); or the adorable young thing who is always surrounded by a flock of boys; or the healthy, hearty fellow who pokes you in the ribs or slaps you on the back whenever you pass him (he's very popular—oh, my, yes); or the cock-sure student with his arms full of books (we'd like to trip him); and that's not all!

"PEP" CLUB PURPOSE GIVEN

All the girls in the Malin high school who were interested in the reorganization of the Girls' Pep club, under the supervision of Miss Judy, held a meeting and elected a committee to form a new constitution. It has not yet been presented.

All the officers have been elected except the treasurer, who will be elected at the next meeting.

The purpose of the "Pep" club is to do something worth while for the high school each year.

BUILDING WILL BE COMPLETED

The agriculture building, which was planned three years ago by the agriculture class, will be completed by the end of this year.

The building consists of three large rooms, which will be used entirely by the agriculture class. There will be a blacksmith shop, a common work shop and a study room.

The agriculture class is also starting a new bus building. This building will house all three busses.

There are two groups of boys, each under a different leader. Each group has separate work to do.

FAREWELL ON THURSDAY EVE

A farewell party was given in honor of the Miksovsky family at the community hall Thursday evening.

The guests were entertained by games and singing, and later refreshments were served.

The Miksovsky family left for Texas Friday.

GLEE CLUB IS ORGANIZED

A glee club is being organized by Miss McAllister for the purpose of singing at entertainments given by the high school.

Miss McAllister is now trying out the girls for singing. They expect to put on at least one public performance of their own before the year is over.

MR. KALINA IN PORTLAND

A. Kalina is in Portland on a business and pleasure trip. He is expected to arrive home soon.

CANDY SALE HELD

The Malin grade school girls gave a candy sale Friday. The money is being used to buy a new volleyball.

EDITORIAL

Sportsmanship

The topic of sportsmanship has been overworked in many school editorials. Once more it must submit to being abused in order to teach certain classes of people what they should, but do not know.

Good sportsmanship. What does that mean? Does it mean the element of being fair and generous in sports?

It does, but it may be stretched to cover many other issues as well.

What, then, are some of these issues? Let us illustrate.

When on the volleyball court, is it an example of good sportsmanship to laugh and hoot at some less fortunate player than you? Or is it justifiable for a player to boss another? Or is it right for a substitute or a team player to get angry at the coach because she takes her off to give another practice?

Or, in another phase of the term "good sportsmanship," is it fair for a side liner to make stinging comments on a player, or try to make conversation with the players? Or, still another phase, is it fair and generous of the students to blame the teachers for everything that goes wrong? Of course it isn't!

First teamers! Why not help the less adept players. Work for your team, not yourself. "Bossy Player," reform into a suggester. A pleasant one, if possible.

Substitute! Reason it out! Doesn't a first teamer need practice as well as you?

First Teamer! Shouudn't a substitute get all the practice possible in the hope of making a player out of her?

Side-liners! What kind of a victory would it be, that was won by rattling the opposing team? It would be far better to bravely accept defeat than to unfairly obtain a victory.

Students in general—Look to your own vicinity if things are wrong. If you cannot better them for yourself try to help others.

What kind of a school would there be without co-operation. Let us all work together and have an unbreakable wall of sportsmanship around our various schools that we can be proud of.

Is Our Loyalty Absolute?

Are we really loyal in every way to our school? We are said to be. We have lots of pep and school spirit, we support our teams, and all that but are we actually loyal in every possible way? Perhaps we try to be, but isn't there another phase of loyalty we have not yet considered?

Yes, there is.

At the first of the year we all arrived again to find a much changed and improved building. The mars and scratches of former years had all been erased or covered, plaster had been replaced where some student had unthinkingly played a tattoo on the wall with his or her dainty heels. Desks, once marked or scratched by the absent-minded students, were varnished or refinished, and to all outward appearances we had a new building.

But already new marks are beginning to show. Scratches may again be seen on the desks, and new holes have been started in the plaster. Let's take greater pride in our school, students! Leave it as we found it. There are other classes to follow us. Let's bring them to a school we are proud of. Numerous ways of showing school spirit and loyalty may be found, but none could be more appropriate than keeping our building in good condition. Students, let's make our loyalty complete!

Six Weeks Exams

Six weeks exams again! Well, well, what a change! We haven't had any since last year. Watch and see all the nice angry faces throughout the school room, and listen to the conversation between the boys and girls: "I should have had a better grade in that exam." Or, "Gee, that teacher surely gave us a hard one!"

As the students say: This is not the worst week, because every six weeks there comes another, with each succeeding exam worse than the one before.

MALIN POTATO PRODUCTION

Jack H. Grafton, Klamath county produce buyer, is also the owner of the largest acreage of certified potato seed on the west coast. The potatoes, which are located about three miles southeast of Malin, are now being dug. They include Netted Gems, Burbank and Wisconsin Pride, among the late varieties; and Earliest-of-All, Bliss Triumph, Early Ohio, and others, among the early varieties.

Irishman (to a stuck up millionaire): "What kind of a dog is that you have?"

The millionaire (angrily): "He is half Irishman and half bull dog."

Irishman: "Be darn, if he ain't kin to both of us."
