Parrot's Disease Hits This Country

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13, (AP)—Surgeon General Cumming of the public health service Friday advised an avoidance of contact with recently imported parrots until officials complete an investigation of a highly fatal disease, several cases of which are thought to have been contracted from the birds in Maryland.

In response to an appeal from Governor Ritchie, two public health doctors have been sent to Baltimore and Annapolis to study the condition of three persons, critically ill with what is thought to be psittachosis or "parro's" disease," the symptoms of which are similar to those of pneumonia and typhoid fever.

Dr. Cumming said he did not fear an epidemic of the disease, since it is generally believed that it is transmitted only from bird to human being, and not from person to person. He urged, however, that contact with parrots and their cages be avoided.

The superintendent of a mine in the Pioche district, notified Las Vegas airport that a plane was heard overhead Saturday morning and probably landed in the mountains.

MISSIONARY RELEASED

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT and JOAN BENNETT in "The MISSISSIPPI GAMBLER" A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

There can be no further doubt about the star who has become definitely the most romantic personality upon the screen—for Joseph Schildkraut in "The Mississippi Gambler," the Universal all-talking production which opened at the Pelican theatre last night, unequivocally establishes his right to the title.

In a picture the very essence of which is romance and romantic drama, Schildkraut carries a glamor both of personality and of portrayal which marks that particular type of part as pre-eminently belonging to himself alone. As the Mississippi packet gambler of a few decades ago, he is at the same time the villain and the hero, and equally beloved as both.

It would seem at first difficult for an actor to achieve the sympathy of the audience in a part which makes him "trim" the heroine's father in a poker game; yet Schildkraut does exactly that. He carries his audience completely with him, no matter what he does, and, since the story is replete with fast-moving, colorful action, there is plenty for him to do.

After the gambler inveigles his victim into the poker game, unknowing that it is the father of the girl with whom he has fallen in love that he has fleeced, the unique "kick" of the plot unfolds with intense dramatic suddenness. It all hinges upon the girl herself, a ravishingly beautiful Southern belle, played by Joan Bennett, whose performance is in a class with Schildkraut's own.

Their love scenes together are marvellously beautiful, both in the action of the scenes themselves and in the romance of the period with which they have been surrounded. It is moonlight on the Mississippi—with the gently swishing waters, the mellow darky voices and all the rest of it, superbly photographed by Gil Warrenton.

Story, cast, direction, all are perfect throughout, with Carmelita Geraghty, Alec B. Francis, Otis Harlan and Billy Welsh contributing outstanding performances in support of Schildkraut and Miss Bennett. Reginald Barker directed the picture with his usual smoothness of narrative and dramatic skill, so that "The Mississippi Gambler" easily qualifies as perhaps the outstanding romantic picture of the season.

AT THE PINE TREE

Whether a woman is ever justified in sacrificing her own good name for the benefit of the man she loves is the difficult question asked in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," Warner Bros.' screen version of the Hough, Adams and Howard comedy success which Howard Bretherton directed and which is now showing at the Pine Tree theatre.

Pursued by so many insistent women that he has lost his head, the young football star, portrayed by Grant Withers, suddenly finds himself in a compromising position with Betty Compson, playing the wife of his host, at a Long Island house party.

John Davison, the host, who also is his employer, is about to batter down the door of his wife's room, when it is suddenly opened to reveal, not his wife but his pretty young secretary, played by Gertrude Olmstead, in Withers arms.

Thus, in order to save the man she loved, the girl of the picture has to shield the woman who is trying to steal him from her.

This highly dramatic incident is but one of the climactic points of the picture, whose background combines college life and the fast-playing sets of Wall street and Long Island.

The cast includes Vivian Oakland, James R. Kirkwood, Gretchen Hartman, Irene Haisman, Bert Roach and Gerald King. The situations and atmosphere that contributed so greatly to the stage success of the piece are faithfully rendered in the screen version.

AT THE LIBERTY

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur are together again in "All at Sea," which is now playing at the Liberty theatre as a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy feature.

After this famous pair of funsters made "Brotherly Love" they were saperated for a while Dane playing with William Haines in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and Arthur taking a vacation jaunt to Europe.

This new co-starring vehicle, which brings them together again, is from the pen of Byron Morgan, who started Dane and Arthur in joint comedies when he wrote "Rookies" for them last year. The new laugh-maker is a story of navy life.

Josephine Dunn, who was last seen in "Excess Baggage" and "The Singing Fool," is the leading lady, playing the role of a heart-breaker who causes the two gobs to stage a private war of their own. Alf Goulding, who has several comedy successes to his credit, among them "Excuse Me" and "Don't," directed.

The film is replete with thrills as well as laughs, a 16-inch gun target practice and a spectacular arsenal explosion furnishing hair-raising moments of suspense. There is also a thrilling and melodramatic fire, which calls out a mob of marine extras to quench it. During this sequence both Dane and Arthur make some spectacular rescues.

"The orders," Mr. Ford said, "were evenly distributed over the country, indicating a generally healthy business condition."

He added that "production schedules at Detroit and every branch plant in this country are being immediately increased."

Today's Markets

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 13 (AP) — Egg and butter prices steadied over the week-end and began the new week without changes. Demand for both products was better Friday and Saturday and fresh supplies were about even with the demand. Whether this was a temporary condition due to the cold weather and the lower prices, or whether it indicated a more permanent basis of values, depends upon developments within the next several days.

Fresh vegetables, especially of the root variety, were still scarce and firm in prices.
