Says Governor To Senator

(George Putnam in the Salem Journal)

THE fact that Henry L. Corbett has resigned as state senator because of his candidacy for the governorship, that Senator Bennett, also a candidate, refuses point blank to resign and that Senators Hall and Bailey also show signs of clinging to their togas, raises a nice question of senatorial ethics, if not an issue for our great constitutional solons to debate.

If any senator still hanging on to his senate seat, should be elected governor, his resignation after election would put his district to the expense of a special election, the nominations being made by party organizations, for the constitution bans two lucrative offices being held by the same person.

And this raises the interesting question of whether or not Governor Norblad resigned as senator when he became governor, or whether he is still senator, as well as governor. A still more interesting feature would be what Senator Norblad said or will say in his letter of resignation to Governor Norblad and what Governor Norblad said or will say to Senator Norblad in accepting the same.

As data is not available, we asked Bill Delzell, who was secretary to Governor Pierce and is therefore familiar with official etiquette and he states that the text of the communication probably reads as follows:

My Dear Governor Norblad:

I am herewith tendering my resignation as Senator. I find that excess baggage is liable to interfere with my connections with the Capitol Express.

Sincerely,
AL. W. NORBLAD, Senator.

P. S. Knowing me as you do, it is hardly necessary to assure you of my warm personal interest in your success and hearty support of your administration.

A. W. N.

Supposed text of the Governor's acceptance:

My Dear Senator Norblad:

It is with much reluctance and many misgivings that I accept your resignation as Senator. I am familiar with your record and it is one of which you may well be proud. Gus agrees with me. The state is under great obligations to you, Senator. I know of no member of the legislature for whom I entertain more admiration. Al, they are going to miss you in the Senate. Thanks for your kind words. I am counting on you in the coming campaign.

Very sincerely,
AL. W. NORBLAD, Governor.

P. S. I shall appreciate any suggestions as to a campaign slogan.

Doubtless this correspondence will serve as a model for the use of the other senators in the contingency of election, though of course much more eloquent testimonials from the governor to the senator would be forthcoming, for each of them, particularly Senator Hall, has a much more flattering opinion of his own invaluable services to the commonwealth than Al Norblad could possibly have. That is what makes them self-starters.

The commission investigating the worth of the 18th Amendment has at last reported that Willie should be spanked for stealing jam.

The reason most people fail is because they are ashamed to practice on rats while waiting to shoot an elephant.

It's hard to tell whether great men read detective stories for relaxation or because they were licked for doing it as kids.

If a man really loves his dog, it doesn't mean anything except that he has no children.

TRYING TO MEASURE ETERNITY

From Sir James Jeans' "The Universe Around Us": Take a postage stamp and stick it onto a penny. Now climb Cleopatra's obelisk and lay the penny flat, postage stamp uppermost, on top of the obelisk. The height of the whole structure may be taken to represent the time that has elapsed since the tarth was born. On this scale the thickness of the penny and postage stamp together represents the time that man has lived on earth. That elapsed since the earth was born, represents the time he has been civilized, the thickness of the penny representing the time he has lived in an uncivilized state. Now stick another postage stamp on top of the first to represent the next 5,000 years of civilization and keep sticking on postage stamps until you have a pile as high as Mount Blanc. Even thickness of the postage stamp quite representation of the length of the future which, so far as astronomy can see, probably stretches before civilized humanity.

A STIGMA DISAPPEARS
NEW YORK TELEGRAM: The horrors of a surgical operation before the days of anesthetics and antiseptic surgery are well known. The greatest surgeon of the sixteenth century was Ambrose Pare. How did he perform an operation? He bound the limb with a cord to check the flow of blood and numb the part as much as possible. Then he applied the knife and saw and afterward plunged the bleeding stump into a pot of boiling oil to cauterize the wound. Today we are free from such crude and brutal methods. Thanks to the progress of anesthetics tic methods since the days of Dr. Morton nearly a century ago we now have painless surgical operations.

SATURDAY'S ANSWER

The progress in painless mental surgery has been slower. The pain of the surgical operation before anesthesia was matched here by the social stigma and the sense of shame attached to commitment to an institution for mental and nervous patients.

The person who needed such treatment was branded a "lunatic" and regarded as a thing apart from decent society. His relatives were viewed with mingled pity and suspicion. The institution which received him shared the stigma. It was known as a "lunatic asylum," and was closed with prisons, jails and almshouses. After the mental surgery, if any, had been applied in the asylum the recovery of the patient was hampered by the whappings and sideways glances of neighbors.

Evidence that all this is passing is afforded by the mental treatment bill now going through the British parliament. According to the provisions of this act, "The very word 'asylum' is to disappear. Institutions for the care of the mentally afflicted become hospitals. Lunatic becomes mental patient. The principal idea is that treatment of mental disease, being like that of other diseases, any idea of shame and stigma must be obliterated."

In our country the work of the national committee for mental hygiene has produced similar results and we are being freed from the medieval vestiges of the "lunatic" and "asylum" era.

Mental and nervous disease, which once savored of charlatans and of bars and chains, has become a problem of scientific medicine and humane social service. Psychological insight and humane understandings have here achieved what anesthesia and antiseptics have performed for the advance of surgery.

ELWOOD, Ind., Jan. 20, (AP)—Edward Wekin, 13, was shot and killed today by his brother Earl, 16, while they were at play. The boys, imitating soldiers, were both armed. The younger lad with an air rifle and the older boy with a shotgun. They pointed the weapons at each other and Earl pulled the trigger of the shotgun, thinking it was unloaded. The charge from the shell struck E'war' in the chest and he died within a few minutes.

DAILY LETTER ON AFFAIRS AT U. S. CAPITAL

The Hoover-Johnson Feud Breaks Out Again, and Senator Johnson Does Not Get the Worst of the Feud—An Interesting Story Behind a Presidential Appointment.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Anyone who has ever seen the stocky form of Senator Hiram Johnson of California probably suspects that he would be a hard man to bowl over. And that's the way it seems to work out.

The gent who collaborated in the latest attempt to do that to Hiram have once more been boomeranged by their own person's colleague. Senator Samuel W. Hays, who has been Hiram Johnson's colleague, Senator Samuel Morgan Shortridge, there is a fourth gent involved, one with the alliterative name of Alf Otfe-dal, one of the best minds in the prohibition enforcement service.

Briefly, the Otfe-dal story is that the president, with the agreement of Senator Shortridge, appointed Alf to replace one of Johnson's political friends as collector of internal revenue in the San Francisco district and that it was found that Otfe-dal was a resident of Maryland and not of the San Francisco district as required by law if he were to take the plum. But it's the background of the story and the incident's place as a high spot in the long-standing Hoover-Johnson feud that make it worth a few chukles.

He Thives on Hatred

The past presidential aspirations of Hiram have a tragic history, but as senator from California and a tough customer locally he has always thrived and still does, despite the hatred of presidents. As one of the loudest anti-league senators he survived the Wilson antipathy. He fought vigorously for the Republican nomination in 1920 and was licked but survived Harding, the winner. In 1924 he made a wild quixotic attempt to grab the renomination from Coolidge and in the primaries lost even his own state.

Coolidge didn't forgive him and Johnson received no more patronage. In fact, sometimes perfectly terrible persons were appointed to federal jobs in California in order to avoid taking care of any of Johnson's friends.

But Cal went and Miram remained. The latter's feud with Hoover had been simmering along all these years, ever since he had given Herbert such a bad trimming in the California primaries of 1920. Now Hoover was out after the presidency in 1928 and in the same year Johnson was up for re-election. Well, it would not do either any good if they sank their teeth into each other at such a time, so they didn't. Hiram agreed to support Herbert and Herbert's friends loudly conceded that Hiram was a good old guy, after all.

But the Johnson support turned out to be theoretical. Apparently the Hooverites expected him to go roaring through the progressive strongholds of the midwest for the national ticket. Instead, he stayed in California and roared only for himself. He never mentioned Hoover, although explaining that he was for "the head of the ticket" because of party loyalty.

Meanwhile, the Johnson men in federal offices maintained a sublime indifference to the presidential race and allowed their employes to wear Smith buttons. Senator Shortridge, of course, whooped as loudly for Hoover as his voice would permit.

Well, you can imagine that there wasn't any more of a place for Johnson at the pie counter under Hoover than under Coolidge. The next thing anyone heard in the old feud was Johnson's mighty blast from the Senate floor accusing Hoover of inconsistency, cowardice and whatnot on the tariff legislation. And after that the White House dinner incident, when Johnson was the only member of the Foreign Relations Committee not invited.

Before the dinner party, however, Hoover had appointed Otfe-dal, which meant firing Johnson's man, Collector of Internal Revenue John P. McLaughlin, with Shortridge's approval. Johnson wired to Washington asking the Senate to withhold action on Otfe-dal until he arrived here and hurried on, as he said, to find out who Alf was.

It turned out that Otfe-dal had once been head of the Pacific coast intelligence service of the Internal Revenue Bureau and later in charge of baffling the rum runners out that way. The California Anti-Saloon League had supported him for prohibition commissioner but he had to be content with the assistant commissioner'ship.

The Mystery is Unsolved
It is still a mystery to this day why Hoover appointed Otfe-dal in particular to McLaughlin's job. Neither Johnson nor anyone else could learn.

But what Johnson did find out was that Otfe-dal had taken up a residence in Maryland and declared his intention to vote there in 1928. Customs collectors, the law says, have to be residents of the district and state where their offices are located. That left nothing to do but withdraw the appointment, a very sad state of affairs for everyone but Johnson and McLaughlin.

Now, if Hoover still wants to land one on Johnson's chin—as he probably does worse than ever—he must clench his fist, haul off and swing all over again.

HOW to punish "flaming youth" for pranks that are unreasonable seems to be a burning question of the present moment. In an editorial headed "Is spanking obsolete" the Duluth, Minn. Herald states that students who chartered a street car for some social function behaved terribly, wrecked and damaged property and made themselves a nuisance to the public. That newspaper says "There seems to be a number of high school students in Duluth who need punishment that is best administered by parents" meaning the old-time spanking.

No longer is it fashionable for parents to spank children, and they "span" the rod and spoil the child."

Quarrel Ends in Death of Couple

CLARKS FORK, Idaho, Jan. 20, (AP)—Officers were seeking today for the motive which last night impelled James Howard, 48 year old sheep herder, to argue with his bride of two months, shoot her to death and then take his own life. A constable found Mrs. Howard's body in a cabin at a tourist camp after he heard two shots. Mrs. Howard, with a bullet from an old-time 45-90 Buffalo gun through her breast, was found dead, and in another cabin, 50 yards away her husband's body was found.

Neighbors said the couple had quarreled intermittently for two days before the shooting but they were unable to tell what they quarreled about.

Houston's opera house has been selected as the place in which to hold the debate between the Jackson and Klamath county high schools next Friday evening.

In circuit court today the work of the cases with the assistance of a jury was resumed by taking Elmer O. Boardley against the Klamath Lake Navigation company. The plaintiff claims $36.65 for supplies and repairs on the steamer Klamath, about $20 of this amount being a claim for supplies assigned to the plaintiff by the plumber, E. C. Greeley. E. L. Elliott represents the plaintiff and C. M. O'Neil the defendant.

At a meeting of the printers of this city held last evening in the W. O. Smith printing office, the final steps were taken toward the establishment of a Klamath Falls local of the International Typographical union.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Life" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 19.
The Golden Text was, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon were the following from the Bible: "I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments . . . for he is thy life, and the length of thy days" (Deut. 30: 16, 20).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The way is straight and narrow which leads to the understanding that God is the only Life. It is a warfare with the flesh, in which we must conquer sin, sickness and death, either here or hereafter—certainly before we can reach the goal of Spirit or life in God" (p. 324).

WICHITA, Kas., Jan. 20, (A.P.)—Where formerly the newspaper's influence was through its editorial columns, it now has its greatest effect through its advertisements, William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, told members of the Kansas Press Association at their annual banquet last night.

"Advertisements tend to make people dissatisfied with what they have and wish for better things and the race is benefited," Mr. White said. "As a nation we are building through advertising instead of government and it is proving a better way."
