Hay Fever Sufferers Find Help in Chiropractic

Hay fever is an acute inflammation of excessive heat of the mucous membranes lining the nasal passages, as a general rule, and in some cases the inflammation extends down as far as the bronchi. This disease is characterized by a thin, watery discharge from the nose, and the mucous membrane lining of the nasal passage is so swollen as to make breathing very difficult.

The upper portions of the respiratory tract are so swollen from the inflammation existing that breathing is very difficult, especially through the nasal passages, and the patient often resorts to mouth breathing.

The discharge from the nose is of a thin, watery, acid character, and is almost continuous in its exudation from the mucous membranes lining the air passages of the nose, owing to the acute inflammation and congestion, is very sensitive, and as a result of this sensitiveness the patient sneezes very frequently.

Hay fever is also known as "croup," "hay asthma," and "autumnal catarrh." Hay fever, in its most pronounced form, generally makes its appearance in the late summer, generally the latter part of July or early August, and with most sufferers terminates about the first part of October. It is commonly supposed to be "caused" by the irritation produced by the pollen of some plant, weed or flower. This commonly supposed "cause" varies from the so-called "ragweed" in certain sections of the country, from the "rose" in other sections, or the dust from freshly cut hay or weeds in other sections, this supposed cause depending on the character of the neighborhood and the fauna of that neighborhood in which the patient resides.

The pronounced stage of this disease begins with sneezing, the same as with an ordinary cold; the eyes become easily irritated, tears flow easily and continuously; the eyeballs become inflamed and the eyelids become congested and reddened. There is almost a continuous watery discharge from the nose. Because of the irritation produced by the extreme sensitiveness of the mucous membranes lining the nasal passages, and the consequent sneezing, breathing is very difficult, and the patient is very restless and irritable.

In the eastern states the treatment prescribed is usually to go to Maine or up in the mountains, while in the middle western states it is to go to Colorado or Michigan or Wisconsin.

The great majority of sufferers, however, cannot afford the time from business or the money to take a vacation of several months for the purpose of riding themselves of the supposed "cause" of this disease. Chiropractically, the cause of this disease is a subluxation at the fourth cervical vertebra, lower cervical or upper dorsal. That is, the most frequent subluxation found in cases of hay fever is the one found at the fourth cervical. The nerves going to the affected portions of the upper air passages of the respiratory tract leave the spinal cord at the fourth intervertebral foramina, leading out on each side of the spinal column.

As stated before, medically this disease is considered practically incurable, and the medical treatment is given merely with a view to removing the irritating symptoms of the disease. But from a Chiropractic standpoint, the prognosis is very favorable, and recovery is nearly always the rule. The Chiropractor seeks to adjust the subluxated vertebra that all pressure is removed from the spinal nerves, thus permitting the free and uninterrupted flow of the vital forces from the brain to the mucous membranes lining the upper air passages of the respiratory tract. If the disease is of long standing, then it may be a matter of some months before vital force will flow unobstructed and unhindered to the mucous membranes lining the nasal passage. In this class of cases, where the patient has had this condition through several years, the patient should begin taking adjustments some weeks or months before the usual time.

MOB ATTACKS STIR FILIPINOS

Gangsters Chieftains in Manila Make Threat Against Americans in Retaliation.

MANILA, Jan. 27. (AP)—Anti-Filipino riots in California, which have caused widespread discussions in Manila, today had brought threats from Manila gangsters against Americans. Authorities, however, gave prompt assurance that Americans were in no danger and measures would be taken to prevent any retaliatory outbreaks.

Police on Alert. Police Chief C. E. Pitta announced that precautions were being taken to guard cabarets and strategic points in the city where isolated attacks were possible against individuals but expressed confidence that there would be no outbreaks. Labor leaders joined in the assurances.

Would Attack Guards. The Philippine Herald, leading nationalist daily, reported that chieftains of Manila gangs had already held several "conferences" and that cooperation in their "vindication" plan had been decided upon. Soldiers and sailors were to be the special object of the gangsters' attention, the paper said.

Protests Adopted. The chamber of commerce of the Philippines, a Filipino organization, adopted a resolution of protest against the recent anti-Filipino disturbances at Watsonville, Cal., during which a Filipino was killed. Several other student and civic groups also plan protest meetings.

A KNITTING PRIZE. LONDON—You've often heard and seen pictures of the Prince of Wales failing off a horse, playing some game or enjoying a social function. But you've never seen him knitting. He does, however, and three scarfs knitted by him recently were exhibited here at Queen Mary's Needlework Guild.

In a recent sale 600 vessels of the Scottish fishing fleet lost 31,000 nets, valued at more than $750,000.

Mechanical Injuries Cause Losses to Potato Growers

From a number of reports received relative to damage done by mechanical injury to potatoes, it is no doubt safe to estimate that the Klamath potato growers have lost during the current season from $50,000 to $75,000 due to this cause alone. During the digging period this is not particularly noticeable, but after potatoes are stored rot develops in the cuts and bruises, rendering many potatoes unsalable or at least reducing the grade from No. 1 to No. 2.

Potatoes have long been considered as "just potatoes," and consequently immune to damage and if damaged that they were salable just the same. Under present day conditions, where potatoes are graded and sold on the basis of grade, this is no longer true.

During the past year, where potatoes were sold out of the field at digging time, it was not uncommon to find fields running almost a straight U. S. No. 1. When the same potatoes were stored and sold during the winter months heavy culling was necessary, and in many cases from 25 per cent to 40 per cent of the potatoes that had graded U. S. No. 1 in the field had to be graded as No. 2, inasmuch as there was usually a difference in price between the No. 1 and No. 2 of $1.00 per cwt. This represented direct cash loss to the grower. In some cases the percentage of No. 2 had increased from practically nothing at digging time to as high as 50 per cent and 60 per cent when graded in the cellars.

Can Avoid Loss. While some of this loss cannot be avoided, nevertheless a large percentage of it can. During digging time the grower is generally rushed for time, and much injury is caused by speed. Present day potato diggers also contribute heavily to the loss. A part of this could be avoided by inverting the drapers and running the draper with a small engine, so that the speed of the potato digger would have no effect on the speed of the draper. Also, when the ground is particularly dry the digger should be set deeper, so that more dirt goes over the draper. This, no doubt, will require more power or more horses on the machine, but such power will greatly increase the growers' return.

Bruised in Handling. Potatoes are usually hauled from the fields in half sacks, and the half sack, being light and easy to handle, is in some cases juggled like cord wood. This causes bruises which later, in the cellar, develop into rot. Potatoes of high quality are a valuable product, and more care should be used in handling them from the field to the cellar.

Ventilation Factor. In some cases it has been noted that cellars are not properly ventilated and aired out during the fall of the year when the weather is warm. This is particularly detrimental where potatoes are piled deep, and causes rot development in the fresh cuts and bruises of the injured potatoes.

It is safe to assume that perhaps $40,000 to $50,000 a year can be saved in the future if more precautions are taken in the digging and handling of the potato crop.

THAT 37-CENT BUTTER. Friday's Herald contained an ad for Sanford & Co., quoting 10 pounds of butter for 37 cents. In a way, it was correct, for Sanford would sell ten pounds of butter at 37 cents a pound, or one pound at 37 cents, or 100 pounds at 37 cents a pound. It was plainly intended to quote butter at 37 cents a pound. Several telephone calls to this office would indicate that parties were either "kidding" this newspaper, or that they have a strange idea of fairness and justice.

PRISON BUYER. LONDON—Thomas Oakley of Luton has a passion for buying old jails. He recently bought from the government Knottford jail in Cheshire, and is turning it into a hotel. He has bought three other jails in Gosport, Derby and Worcester. The bricks from these will go to reconstruct his latest purchase.
