MERRILL-MALIN
PLAY ALTURAS
WINNING GAME

The Merrill-Malin town team played the Alturas town team at Alturas on Saturday night, Jan. 19th, in the new High School Gymnasium.

The team went to Alturas on the train as it was impossible to go in a car because of the bad roads between Malin and Alturas.

The line-up for Merrill and Malin was:
F-Parks.
Haley.
F-Kiger.
C-Fisher.
G-Caldwell.
Hendrickson.
G-Street.
Jackson.

Coch Fisher of Malin High school was high point man of the game by making 17 points. Kenneth Kiger was second with 10 points. Caldwell 4, Street 4, Hendrickson 4, Jackson 2.

The final score was 41 to 29 in favor of the Merrill-Malin town team.

Pep Organization
Holds Meeting

A meeting of the Pep club was held last Tuesday to sign the new constitution and to plan a way to use the money that was made last year. The money will be spent for a few Pep uniforms for some of the girls to wear at games to arouse pep in both teams, and also to wear when ushering at plays and entertainments put on by the Malin high school. The rest of the money will be used to fix up the room.

Jokes

HER HERO

Charles Zumr (home for vacation): Yep, I made the football team.

Irene Petrasek: Honestly? What part did you play?

Charles Zumr: I did the aerial work.

Irene Petrasek: Aerial work? What's that?

Charles Zumr: Why, I blew up the footballs.

Mrs. Street: My husband is away so much of the time I want a parrot for company. Does this one use rough language?

Clerk: With this bird in the house you'd never miss your husband.

SURE CURE

Doctor: A few leaves of lettuce without oil, a bran cracker and a glass of orange juice. Stick to that and your weight will come down.

Miss Judy: Well, that's fine, doctor. Now, do I take that before or after meals?

Grade School
Games Postponed

The games which were supposed to have been played last Friday between Merrill grade school and Malin grade school were postponed. They sent word by Mr. Peterson that they would not play because of the mumps.

EDITORIALS

Success

Why do some people succeed and some fail? We are all born equally, why do so many of us die failures? It is because of the training we give our minds. Some of us give our minds things which are really worth using, while some of us just lose along and have a few unnecessary principles into our poor heads and, consequently, fail.

The Creator did not furnish these minds of ours for such abuse. He intended us to make something out of ourselves with them. We are going to school to improve them so we can earn a living, and not to pass the time away.

A mind is a wonderful thing if we train it correctly. It is the best thing we have when we come into the world. Without a mind we could do nothing; with a mind we can do wonders. Since we have such a wonderful asset we certainly should use it to the best of our ability.

Think of all the time we waste doing what has no bearing on the development of our minds. We waste at least two good hours a day with useless pleasures that are oftentimes more harmful than beneficial. Why not try to send some of this time beneficially in the future?

And, when we have given our minds a strong basis on which to work, we should not only for ourselves but for others, also. A person gets twice as much pleasure from work done for someone else than that done for the benefit of himself.

When we go out into the world to work for someone else we usually think of our own ends, and not of our employer's. There is where we are in the wrong, we should think of the best way in which to do the work, and then we would be helping ourselves as well. Why? Because a man is more likely to employ one who he knows is conscientious in his work than one who is working for money alone. That is only natural, of course.

So train your minds in the correct way now, and when you go out into the world you may be assured of success.

One Semester to Go

The first semester exams have come and gone, or, in other words—school is half over. The past is gone and the future is before us. Let's try to do our best this last semester, and not take chances on a flunk.

A little harder studying will put us over the line in good shape and save us from worrying at the end of the term. If one learns as he goes it is easier. Things do not block up at the end. If one feels as if he is to flunk, his conscience hurts, the teachers are blamed, and trouble is caused.

Why take the chance? It doesn't pay. Let's make things easier on ourselves as well as the teachers. Let's study harder. Yes, it will help.

YOUTH AVENGES
FATHER'S DEATH

Enters Barber Shop and Empties Gun in Body of Man, Then Goes To Sheriff and Surrenders

TEMPLE, Okla., Jan. 29. (A P.)—Having avenged the slaying of his father with a gesture reminiscent of old time mountain feuds, Jim Graham was in the Cotton county jail at Walters, Okla., today, held without bond pending arraignment in connection with the killing of Harry Adair, convicted killer of young Graham's father.

Ordered From Poolhall

The elder Graham was slain last April in a poolhall after he had ordered Adair to leave the place. Adair, who, it was said, was intoxicated at the time, departed but returned soon afterward and without warning killed Graham with a shotgun.

Convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to 40 years in the state penitentiary, Adair was at liberty on appeal bond.

Yesterday he was in a barber shop here, his face covered with a towel, when Jim Graham, the son, stalked into the shop.

Died in Barber's Chair

Silently, the youth stood beside the chair until the towel was removed by the barber. Then, without a word, he pulled out a pistol, fired five times and strode from the room.

Adair died almost instantly.

Young Graham went from the barber shop to his car and drove to Walters, where he surrendered to O. C. Hopper, sheriff, who ordered him held without bond. He made no statement.

Combined Team
Go To Lakeview

Last Saturday the Merrill town team and the Malin High School basketball team went to play Lakeview. Those making the trip from the high school were: Mr. Street, Mr. Fisher, Frank Kamarad, Mervyn Wilde, Willie Rajnus, David McComb, Enoch Petrasek, Claude Layman, Edwin Stastney and Paul Petrasek.

AT THE VOX

JOLLY BLANE

"For I'm just a vagabond lover, In search of a sweetheart, it seems,

And I know that some day I'll discover her—

The girl of my vagabond dreams."

Thus runs the chorus of Rudy Vallee's first contribution to the lyrical art. This also became the inspiration for his first screen vehicle, "The Vagabond Lover," now showing at the Vox theatre.

The story was written and adapted by James Creelman, Jr. It is an exact counterpart of Vallee's life, his hopes, ambitions, discouragements and final success. It provides a vehicle that brings out every musical talent of the radio and night club idol.

The Connecticut Yankees, like the strolling minstrels of old, followed Rudy to Hollywood and into the Radio Picture, "The Vagabond Lover." Not only do the members of the orchestra have acting roles, but they furnish the musical background for the all-talking, all-singing opus.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE PINE TREE

Nick Lucas and Myrna Loy in a scene from "Show of Shows," a Warner Bros. production.

"The Show of Shows," Warner Brothers Vitaphone musical screen revue, which comes to the Pine Tree theatre today, is not only the most ambitious talking picture production ever undertaken by Warner Brothers as a producing studio, but it is the most pretentious production ever brought to the talking screen.

The cast contains 77 of the most prominent stars and featured players on the screen and the most brilliant array of talent ever assembled for a single presentation. We see and hear them singing, dancing and clowning, all in a composite screen musical revue offering the most widely diversified entertainment ever assembled in one picture.

The gorgeous ensembles and rhythmic dancing are brand new and entirely original. Staged by two of the greatest masters of the dance, Larry Ceballos and Jack Haskell, these numbers far supersede anything ever dreamed on the stage and far excel anything so far attempted in the talkies.

AT THE PELICAN

Stepin Fetchit, who was named for a race horse, recently decided to try his luck at the Tia Juana races. He chanced to visit the well-known Mexican track on the day that 14 races were on the card and placed a modest wager on every event, but he cashed one of them.

The horses were at the post for the 14th race and Stepin, with hundreds of others, was breathlessly awaiting the well-known cry, "they're off."

Stepin, lazily turning to his companion, drawled, "Thass thust call mah hoss has had today."

The horse the colored comedian bet on won the race and Stepin was jubilant, but his joy was turned to grief when he made the distressing discovery that he had lost his winning ticket.

The role of Eli, keeper of the seals, is entrusted to Stepin in "Big Time," a romantic all-talking Fox Movietone drama of back

"The Most Skillfully Pitched Game I Ever Saw"

Billy Evans Tells of Great Part that Psychology Played in Charley Robertson's Perfect Victory Over Detroit Tigers.

By Billy Evans
I have umpired in, perhaps, a dozen no-hit games covering 17 years. While a no-hit game is a secret ambition of every major league pitcher, it is an observation that such contests are not necessarily master feats. I have worked no-hit games in which the pitcher regarding the feat showed just ordinary stuff, but was favored by the breaks. I have often seen the opposing pitcher in such a game demonstrate far more ability, only to be beaten.

Fate plays a certain part in every no-hit game. Fate can frown as well as smile, for I have seen many a pitcher robbed of a no-hit record with two men down in the ninth, only to have a "fluky" hit go safe.

Yet, there is one no-hit game that is indelibly written on my memory. It was a superb bit of pitching against one of the hardest hitting teams in the annals of baseball. Detroit was the victim, and Charley Robertson, then just a recruit pitcher of the White Sox, turned the trick.

It was in the spring of 1922, Robertson was comparatively unknown; the Detroit club was regarded as a pennant possibility. There came to the majors with Robertson a rumor that he "doctored" the ball.

In the first four innings Detroit slugged hit a half dozen balls hard but always directly at some fielder. The Tigers were peeved. Unable to get the ball safe, they began to look for an alibi. The contention was raised that Robertson was "doing something funny" to the ball.

From the fourth inning on the Tigers paid far more attention to taking issue with the legality of Robertson's pitching than trying to hit the ball. The White Sox recruit merely smiled, tossing the ball to the umpire for inspection every time the Detroit batters complained.

Realizing the value of psychology and knowing the Detroit club was paying close attention to his every action, Robertson decided to play on their emotions.

Often, before delivering the ball, he would carefully scan the cover. Occasionally he would hold the ball in one hand and pass the other hand over the cover as if testing its weight. He did any number of other foolish things further to excite the curiosity of the Tigers.

How well he succeeded in his efforts is shown by the box score of that game. Detroit was blanked without a hit or run, not a man reaching first base. The Tigers didn't hit a ball hard after the fifth inning.

That was a great exhibition of pitching, principally because it was a no-hit, no-run game in which not a batter reached first. However, the remarkable part of that game was the fact that Robertson's pitching improved the more the Detroit club sought to harass him.
