

CHICAGO USES SCRIP TO PAY HER EMPLOYEES

School Board President
In New York Trying To Raise Money

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. (AP)—The city today began paying off some bills and some employees—in scrip. Tax anticipation warrants, bearing the signatures of Mayor Thompson and Deputy Comptroller Victor Peterson, were made available to policemen, firemen and other employees who expressed a willingness. There was no general issuance of the warrants, however. Those who wanted to be paid with scrip were obliged to appear at the comptroller's office and request them. The problem of cashing the warrants rested entirely with those who received them. In cases where employees found themselves financially able to retain the tax warrants, they possessed paper calling for 6 per cent interest.

Teachers Wait

Although it was pay day for school teachers, they received no money. H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the school board, is in New York City, seeking money to meet the school payroll. The total now due the teachers, who have not been paid since Christmas eve, exceeds $4,455,000.

Issue of tax anticipation warrants in the manner begun today has been opposed by the Strawn citizens' relief committee on the grounds that small denominations probably at a discount, thereby hurting the city's chances of selling larger blocks of warrants to the committee's rescue pool or to banks.

Stores Accept Warrants

Several department stores have indicated they will accept the warrants at face value. It also was believed that many banks will do likewise, as courtesies to veteran clients, and that others will arrange to make cash loans with the warrants as security.

City Controller George K. Schmidt was to confer today with Herbert C. Heller, head of a New York investment house specializing in tax warrants. Heller was understood to have a plan for disposal of warrants in large blocks, but it was not indicated what it was.

Governor Petitioned

New efforts to have Governor Emerson call a special legislative session to afford relief to city and county were made yesterday in separate petitions by policemen and firemen's organizations, and by the owners' real estate board. The governor has previously declared no special session will be called unless a workable plan of relief is presented to him by a responsible group of citizens and officials.

To Watch Shysters

A detective squad was assigned today to the city hall with orders to watch "commission shysters," who might try to purchase tax anticipation warrants from city employees at less than face value. Police heard that offers as low as 50 to 75 per cent of the scrip's face value were contemplated. Arrests would be made on the technicality that the intended buyers were not licensed.

The first issue of tax warrants for the year was accepted yesterday by a firm in payment for removal of ashes and rubbish. It was for $40,000.

CENSUS ROBOTS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Census robots will do the work of many men during the 1930 census in the United States. It is expected that within one month there will be completed by these machines the work that formerly took a year to do. They can sort cards by age, sex and race at the rate of 12,000 a day, and can tabulate cards carrying as many as 60 items at the rate of about 25,000 an hour.

About 800 people used the reading room of the British Museum every day.

Common Interests Bind U. S. And Italy at Naval Parley

By MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Writer

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Signor D. Grandi, tall, flashing-eyed, black-bearded, young soldier-lawyer, who is Italy's Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and the rest of Mussolini's merry men have been thrown into the arms of the American delegation.

There is an Italo-American sentiment cordial, which is one of the finest outstanding things of the great Naval Conference so far as it has gone. Subsequent events may come to modify this state of affairs, but at present all is serene. And, by the same token, there is also a sort of Italo-British honeymoon also.

There are many reasons for this turn of events. Even before the machinery of the Naval Conference was put in motion, there were various things that put the Mussolini government and that of the United States in good humor with each other. Italy made no unusual difficulties over American immigration restriction laws, even though Italians were pretty hard hit by them. It so happens that Mussolini would like to keep his fellow-citizens as Italians and is, therefore, inclined to keep them at home, or as immigrants into Italian possessions.

Another point of cordiality is that Mussolini, in a most businesslike way, got together with the United States in the matter of funding and repaying Italy's war loan to America. Once the papers were drawn up, he saw to it that his Parliament and his government promptly ratified the agreement, without any quibbling and without any shrieks, about an American race of Shylocks, such as was the case in the French Parliament, before the government won ratification by a slender majority.

Marches With Americans

But it is on the high spots of the Naval Conference itself that Mussolini has seen fit to march with the two great English-speaking powers.

Mussolini, like President Hoover and Premier MacDonald, wants to see something come out of the Naval Conference, which will enable the nations to cut down instead of building up their naval strength and thus take some tax burdens off the people. The money that might be saved he wants to use in building up his country in an industrial and economic way.

Agrees on Submarines

Italy at once agreed with Great Britain when MacDonald advanced the idea of doing away with the building of big capital ships. And Washington has since indicated a desire to reach a decision on the same question. Italy has come around to the American and British thesis that submarines should be abolished entirely. It has been counted on to line up with the opposition, composed of France and Japan. But far-seeing Italian statesmen and naval men have visioned good reasons reversing their attitude.

The two possible enemies Italy sees are France and Jugoslavia, a country which is in close relations with the French. Jugoslavia has ports on the Adriatic and Jugoslavian submarines could work great damage to Italy's great and growing mercantile marine. So could France, basing her "subs" in the island of Corsica and the great port of Marseilles.

Italy, therefore, has more to gain than to lose if the "subs" could be abolished. As France and Japan are utterly and entirely opposed to this, Italy will be found lining up with America and Britain in an endeavor to limit the number and size of the submarines.

One Point of Opposition

The one point upon which Italy will make her most decided stand is that she must have absolute naval parity with France. She points out that at the Washington naval conference she was given such parity in battleships and air craft carriers, and the French saw no objections. She claims now an equal parity in cruisers, destroyers and submarines. In fact, if submarines are to be continued, Italy claims it is vital that she shall have cruisers and destroyers in sufficient numbers to destroy enemy submarines in Mediterranean and Adriatic waters.

Rivalry of Nations

The French, not only so far have stubbornly refused to hear of Italian parity in these smaller warcraft, but have plainly intimated to America and Britain that France reserves to herself the right to build as many as she needs for her security. If France builds, Italy will want to build. But Italy is not as rich as France. She does not want to undertake the great financial burden. She will, therefore, throw all her strength toward securing a program which will not mean building more ships, but building less.

The only French point the Italians go up against is that Italy is a Mediterranean power solely, whereas France has sea coasts on the Atlantic and on the English Channel as well. The prospects are that the meetings of the Naval Conference are going to be enlivened by some tall sparring between the two great Latin powers.

YOU'RE INVITED TO THE SILVER JUBILEE!

A GREAT occasion for the family silver! Instead of polishing tarnished pieces, try this: Put the silver, with a tablespoonful of White King Granulated Soap, in an aluminum pan, and let it come slowly to a boil. When it comes out—Presto!—the tarnish is gone!

The explanation is that the tarnish adheres to the aluminum. But pans are easily cleaned—and silver is hard to polish.

And that's only one of many uses for White King. It washes anything from lingerie to blankets, in hard water or soft, thoroughly, gently and economically. It is condensed. A little goes a long way. Try it today. Sold by grocers everywhere.
