

POISONER OF PEOPLE TALKS OF EXPLOITS

James Baker, 25, Admits He Poisoned Eight In Four Years

DETROIT, Feb. 21, (AP)—James Baker, 25, a former employe of the Guggenheim laboratory, New York, was being held Thursday for New York police after he was said to have confessed the killing of eight men in four years.

Baker's eight victims were dispatched by the methods of the Borgals—poison, and their homes were widely scattered about the world: Bombay, New York, Houston, the Philippines, and aboard a ship enroute to South America, according to the confession said to have been obtained by Detroit police.

Arrested on Farm Baker was arrested last night on a farm three miles west of Farmington, a suburb. He had been working on the farm since last summer and was arrested when police learned that he was wanted in New York. Taken to police headquarters, Baker made his confession to John D. Watts, assistant prosecuting attorney.

The killings, Baker stated in his confession, gave him a "funny sort of mental satisfaction."

Killed Night Watchman The specific charge on which Baker is held is the poisoning of Henry S. Gaw, a night watchman at the Guggenheim laboratory in New York, Dec. 28, 1928.

Baker told the officers he was born and received his early education at Warren, Ohio, leaving home when 14. He got a job on a freighter and sailed for several years.

Always Carried Poisons "I was always interested in poisons and usually carried some around with me," he said. "In 1924 I was in Houston, Tex. I happened into a sailor's restaurant and sat down beside a man. He had a cup of coffee in front of him. While he was looking away, I had a sudden impulse to put some poison in his coffee. He died almost at once. I learned afterward that his name was Honeycut."

Baker said that after this first experience he had other unexpected impulses to poison persons, "no one in particular, but just anyone who happened to be near."

Activities Worldwide In 1926 Baker said he poisoned a man in Hamburg, Germany, and in 1927 poisoned a Hindu in Bombay, India.

While going down the Atlantic coast on a vessel bound for Venezuela, Baker said he put poison in the coffee, causing the whole crew to become ill. Three men died, he said.

In the spring of 1928, Baker said he poisoned a man at Hollo, P. I., a small seaport town on Panay Island, one of the Philippine group.

The poisoning of Gaw took place shortly after midnight December 27, 1928, Baker said. Once again the poison was put in coffee. This time, Baker said, the toxin did not have the desired effect, so he placed some more on the barrel of his revolver and shoved it down the man's throat, holding it there until he died.

At this juncture Baker said two truck drivers entered the laboratory and he said he had intended to kill them but one of them pleaded that he had a wife and children.

INDIANS ACTED WITHIN RIGHTS WALKER STATES

Merely Acted as Other Groups of Citizens in Mass Meeting By LEVI WALKER, Beatty, Ore. Some recent observations having been made with regard to a late General Council of Indians held at a meeting at Williamson River, and particularly with regard to the matters that lie within the authority of the members of the reservation to consider in their Councils. It is contended upon the part of the people upon this reservation, they being citizens of the United States and of the State of Oregon, that certain rights are vested in them, that they may exercise the same as any other citizen, and that it is to say that the Federal Constitution makes a guaranty of the right to assemble together peaceably and exchange their views upon any and all public questions affecting their economic and general welfare, as well as embrace any religious dogmas for a belief, and that these rights are not privileges, but are inalienable as vested rights in their several citizenships.

appropriated for the purposes of defraying the expenses of such delegation, the suits pending in the Court of Claims and Tribal Council for these Indians was submitted to the General Council meeting, and that Mr. Levi Walker, the chairman of the said meeting informed the members present that no money could be taken from the appropriated fund of $10,000.00, as this money was to pay for the expenses of the boundary suits, expenses of delegates and Tribal Council changes.

That the secretary of the Interior informed the Klamath delegation that there was no law by virtue of which he could approve such a contract of employment of an attorney. That the information given by Chairman Walker was done solely for the good of the people and their delegation in Washington. That the business committee during the last fall made a request upon Commissioner Rhodes to frame up a set of rules and regulations by means of which to govern general councils, that he informed the committee that these rules and regulations were not necessary or required for general councils and assemblies of the Indians. That the Indian citizenry on this reservation contend as American citizens they have a guaranteed constitutional right as such citizens to peaceably assemble together and to discuss and to consider all matters of an economic and public character affecting their general welfare without any let Science has been longer discovering how to do it for tea. It requires a special process—so far a Schilling secret. Try it, and find what you have been missing all these years.

THERE'S MORE IN THIS THAN MEETS THE EYE

said the clever housewife, as she lifted the package of White King Granulated Soap. . . The fact is, there's more real soap in a White King package than there is in many a carton of soap flakes or bubbles twice its size! That's because White King Granulated Soap is pure soap—condensed—without "filler" of any sort, and it comes close packed in the carton, like powdered sugar. And a little goes a long way. A teaspoonful in a basin of water, a cupful in a tub is ample. No more! White King is good for the heaviest or most delicate washing—blankets, dishes, or lingerie. It is the safest, most economical soap made. At your grocer's.
