who said he represented the Philadelphia federation of men's Bible classes, argued the prohibition law was the "supreme common sense of the majority." He presented letters endorsing the dry statutes from a number of business men in the Quaker City, the group including Samuel Robinson, president of the American Stores company; Edward G. Budd, president of the Budd automobile body works, and David Tapon, a steel manufacturer. G. Henwick Hogz, a carpet manufacturer.

Anti-Dry "Fanatics"
Presiding both Hood and Stagg the committee had heard anti-prohibitionists described as "fanatics" by Carlton M. Sherwood, executive secretary of the citizens committee of one thousand of New York city. Under questioning by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, he mentioned William E. Borah, republican, Idaho; Senator Carter Glass, democrat, Virginia; Wm. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as members of the board of directors of the organization. The discussion also touched upon the policy of the Dollar ships, with LaGuardia asking if these ships did not carry here in violation of the law.

"Do you know," LaGuardia went on, "that young Dollar asked Senator Copeland (democrat, New York) to keep me from repeating that charge because it would damage his business if he had to close the bars?"

Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri, asked that this part of the testimony be stricken from the records, saying it was untrue, as he had traveled on six Dollar ships.

LaGuardia, however, insisted the presence of bars had been admitted.

Wet Plank Hurt Smith
Another witness, John A. McSparin of Furness, Pennsylvania, testified he had sought to keep the prohibition issue out of the democratic national convention at Houston, Texas, but the party had forced it in, and that he did not support a candidate "running on a straight issue" who had received so few votes in the electoral college as did Alfred E. Smith.

Sherwood submitted the following statement from Captain Robert Dollar:

Captain Dollar Quoted
"I am of the opinion that business and whiskey do not mix and that any big business man who tries it is sure to fail."

Sherwood also submitted a statement from Ralph H. Burnside, president of the Willapa Lumber company, Portland, Oregon, reading:

"My judgment is that over two-thirds of the business men with whom I associate sufficiently to know something of their personal habits, do not violate the prohibition law."

HINDY FAVORS DEBT MEASURE

one thought, "deutschland uber alles," was looked upon as one of the most important documents in German history and as great force in reunifying the German people.

Couldn't Refuse Signature
After explaining he could not refuse his signature as failure to sign would precipitate a grave crisis in German business, industry and finance, the president said:

"Many who wrote implored me well-meaningly not to darken the name of a former leader of the German army by endorsing these laws. To this I reply: I spent my life in that great school of devotion to duty, the old army, and there learned without reservation by my question, every thought of myself had to be submerged completely. For this reason the idea of getting out from under by a plebiscite or by resigning the presidency could gain no foothold with me."

The president concluded with the following appeal:

"I appeal to all Germans to clasp hands, irrespective of parties, for co-operation in the common task. Almost sixty years ago when the reich was founded, I was one of those who experienced the joy which filled every German breast at the final achievement of unity. I cannot think this spirit has disappeared and has given place to continuous inner political disunion. Despite, and on account of the exigencies of the times, it behooves us to come to ourselves and to reunite in one thought—deutschland uber alles."

LONDON, March 13. (AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald was stated in authoritative circles tonight to have been encouraged by today's developments at the naval conference.

These same quarters said that while the situation undoubtedly was grave, the conference has not entirely reached a deadlock. Henry L. Stimson, head of the American delegation and the British prime minister held a further conference this evening.
