

BOOK OF CRIME IS CONCLUDED

olution Of Slaying Reached After 7 Months Work

NEWARK, N. J., March 21. (A P)—Seven killings in gang warfare that broke out with the slaying of Arnold Rothstein, New York gambler, were stripped of their mystery by Newark police today with the announcement of the identification of Eugene Moran, alias John Rice, as the victim of a "ride" whose flames enveloped body was found on the outskirts of this city, August 9, 1929.

Final Chapter Reached
Frank E. Brea, deputy chief of police, announced, was brought about in St. Louis, February 18, after seven months work by detectives. Moran's slayers having forfeited their own lives, Brea described his announcement as the "final chapter of a brutal, but thrilling book" of crime.

Find Charred Body
Moran's charred body was taken from a flame-wrecked automobile in the desolate marshland skirting Newark's east side. The automobile was without license plates and its engine numbers had been altered.

The teeth of the victim were photographed and circulars distributed to 40,000 dentists throughout the United States. Identification, however, came through a check of the registration issued for the fictitious numbers punched in the automobile's motor.

Engineered Robbery
It was Moran, the police said, who engineered the $205,000 robbery of Mrs. Hugo C. P. Schoellkopf in 1922. The gangster established relations with Rothstein several years later, Brea said, and was dispatched to Denver by the gambler to "take care" of one Eddie Diamond who had gone there for his health.

Use Machine Gun
Eddie and his brother Jack had a falling out with Rothstein. Moran and his henchmen turned a machine gun on Eddie and his automobile in Denver November 5, 1928, but Diamond escaped and died later of tuberculosis.

Cuts Down Income
Soon after the death of Rothstein, Moran, passing his father that the gambler's estate meant the loss of $1,000 a week to him, moved to Grantwood and later to Brielle, N. J. He disappeared in August.

Heads Lawyers in Wet Attack

The Eighteenth Amendment was illegally ratified. That is what a special committee of the New York County Lawyers' association, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Conahan, above, has decided. They will argue before the United States Supreme Court that national prohibition is in defiance of the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution, which safeguards the rights of states and individuals against "any expansion of federal powers."

Contest Starts For Selling Annuals

The Malin Union high school has started the yearly episode of selling annuals by opening a contest between the four classes for the purpose of selling the High School Annuals.

The contest was begun at noon on March 17, and will run for three successive weeks. The classes will report and turn in the amount of subscriptions they have obtained to the principal. Each class will be scored according to their rank—first, second, third and fourth. At the end of three weeks the classes will be scored for the whole number of subscriptions received. The class having the lowest score at the end of the contest will receive a day off for a picnic. If the total number of subscriptions is 275, the whole school will get a picnic at the end of the school year.

The classes are nearly equal in number and strength, therefore, very strong competition will be shown. Naturally in accordance with the old rule, "survival of the fittest," the strongest, most able, and co-operative class will win.

Girls' Team Treated To Show on Friday

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hundley treated the girls basketball team to a talkie show last Friday night for winning the semi-final game previously played with Henley at Klamath Falls.

Minstrel Show Is Given by Lis

A minstrel was given by the legion last Friday, March 14. It was a great success. Some features of the evening were songs sung by different persons. Many popular songs were played on the accordion. Dancing and jigs also were part of the entertainment, besides many snappy and funny plays. A large audience helped to make the minstrel a success.

MALIN'S BASKETBALL SEASON A SUCCESS

In spite of much illness and other misfortunes the Malin high girls' basketball team has had a fairly successful season, coming out second in the county.

The girls making their letter in basketball were: Anna Zumr, Lillian Hilland, Agnes Draxil, Marjorie Kos, Carrie Kucera, Eliza Kirkpatrick, Rita Hundley and Emma Kalina.

The outcome of the games was as follows:

Team	Won	Lost
Bonanza	4	0
Malin	3	3
Merrill	1	4

The semi-final championship game was played against Henley on the Klamath high floor. Malin was victorious with a score of 26 to 23.

Plans For Conference
The second conference of the Oregon Trade and Class Journal association will be held at Corvallis at the Oregon State College April 4. George F. Cornwell, managing editor of The Timberman, Portland, president of the association, and L. S. Jackson, editor of the Commercial Review, Portland, secretary, are cooperating with Professor Charles D. Byrne, head of the Industrial Journalism department, in arranging a program. It is planned to make the conference an annual affair. Editors and managers of trade and class magazines and papers in Oregon are members of the association.

Every one a distinctive creation of — JANET WALKER, Foremost Fashion Stylist

In this first showing of Spring frocks, anticipated for months by fashion-wise women, Janet Walker brings you an entirely new mode. For months she has been visiting the country's leading style centers, so that no detail of this new era of fashion sophistication should be missing in her selection for Spring, 1930.

Fashion Favors "Cheney Prints" for Spring

Tiny Floral and Dot Prints, Suede Crepes in pastel and street shades, created exclusively for Janet Walker, offer styles for every daytime occasion.

None of the fashion-important details for Spring are omitted. Cape effects, jabots, flounced sleeves and boleros suggest the Directoire Period. Jabots, bows and flares are important, and the longer skirt line is emphasized.

Each Model Styled According to Janet Walker Standards

And each model, in addition to its authentic styling, lives up to the Janet Walker standard of superior quality and fineness of workmanship—a combination which has made them a supreme value in smartness and economy.

And, as you probably know, each Janet Walker is designed according to our individual order and sold here exclusively.
