Ear Is Modern Indoor Pastime
Mad Scramble for the Public

By George T. Palmer, Dr. F. H. Research, Director of Division of Research, American Child Health Assn.
It is a scramble. In fact it is the newest gladiator in the arena. Magazines, newspapers, pamphlets, billboards, dodgers, the movies, speakers, letters, souvenirs, calendars—all clamoring for the attention of the dear public. Attention is sought for special brands of clothes, toothpaste, hair oil, foods, ocean trips, cough cures, investments, automobiles, and cigarettes.

What chance in all this turmoil has authentic, unbiased advice on personal health to be heard? True there are some clear-headed, determined people who sense the value of instruction in health preservation and will seek it of their own accord without stimulation. There are others, however, who require stimulation. They expect and await stimulation.

The celebration of May Day as National Child Health Day may be likened to the ringing of innumerable bells throughout the land; rung so that they may be heard above the din occasioned by the everyday pursuits of busy lives.

These bells are saying "Don't forget. The health of the child is the strength of the nation. There are before you the seeds of future health. They will grow if planted now. It is harder for them to take root if the planting is delayed. Strong hearts, good lungs, sound teeth, keen eyes, dependable digestive machinery can be denied by what goes on in childhood. Stop, look, listen and act."

It is this kind of message that National Child Health Day is trying to make audible. And because this childhood structure of health is very important there are a great many organizations and people—national, state and local health and educational groups, officials and private, professional associations, the press, parents—joining together to make these facts known. National Child Health Day asks for attention—attention to the desirability of health and attention to dependable sources of advice for its preservation and cultivation.

It does not appear in the newspaper ads. It is drowned out by the orchestra strains sent over the air. But once a year at least May Day tries to tell the public that there is such a thing as the family doctor who can give worthwhile advice if it is sought. That there are physicians and nurses in the schools who are trying to help your children. That your state and local departments of health are in the business of strengthening your health.
Summing it all up, May Day is asking fathers and mothers to give these sources of advice a hearing, and to join hands with those who have but one article to sell, the health advancement of Uncle Sam's children.

SEEKS EARTH'S AGE
NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Under the direction of Prof. Alota F. Kovarik, Yale University research workers are to determine the age of the earth. Prof. Kovarik is experimenting with the chemical and radio-active analysis of large quantities of uranium and thorium. This process will give primary figures with which to work in determining the age of the globe.

FOR HER MOTHER
LONDON.—Pretty Ethel Kearman, 20, has offered to be the bride of anyone who'll pay for an operation "to save her mother's life." "I don't care if the man is 40, or what he works at, so long as he is refined and nice," this self-styled "very modern girl" says.
