WE can imagine that "feast of reason and flow of soul" which prevailed when J. D. Howard, Klamath geologist and expert on non-metallics, met up with John W. Kelly, of the Portland Oregonian...

REQUESTING the county court to make a survey for highway and new bridge over Klamath river by the Grange is an indicator of future needs. Just now the court has no funds, nor has it any method of securing funds to build either a new road or a new bridge. But the future awaits plenty of development, among which will be the Grange's suggestion of a bridge over the river to the south of the city limits.

PLAIN it is that the Link river bridge will not carry the traffic much longer. It is now taxed to its capacity and the very thought of having to force all traffic over one road and one bridge is not pleasant for very long in the future. Present growth will not permit it. And should anything happen to the Link river bridge on Main street, it is hard to think what would happen to the community. Yes, more bridges must come—just when we do not know, but come they must.
