Corbett Commands Confidence

THAT'S the way the Salem Statesman expresses its stand in the primary campaign which is rapidly drawing to a close. The Statesman, while probably forming an opinion early in the campaign, has reserved expression until a late date in order to give each candidate an opportunity to place himself before the voters. Like countless voters throughout the state, the paper has remained undecided until of recent date and having decided upon the candidate best suited is now urging the people to consider his merits.

Commenting upon its choice for governor, the Statesman says:

"The primary campaign is drawing to a close. The republican voters of Oregon who have remained in very large numbers quite undecided whom to vote for for governor must come to an early decision. They have had rather an unusual opportunity in recent months to see and to hear the various aspirants for the honor. The Statesman feels that several of the six candidates would fill the office with honor to themselves and credit to the state. Like the individual voter we have been observing the candidates in action, scrutinizing their records and studying their proposals; and have come to our selection. The choice which the Statesman makes is Harry L. Corbett.

"That which has determined our selection and recommendation to the republican voters of the state is a factor which we have not seen touched on in the political discussions thus far. It is the element of confidence. We profess to find in Mr. Corbett a dependability which gives us assurance as to what he will and what he will not do, which inspires us with confidence; and that is a quality in a candidate that is of supreme value. Put it thus: Corbett commands confidence.

"With Mr. Corbett as governor the voters may have confidence that the business affairs of the state will be competently and honestly handled; that appointments to office will not be chiefly a political matter. They may have confidence that Mr. Corbett is sufficiently acquainted with the machinery of government and the workings of politics, and sufficiently independent in his judgments and firm in his decisions to be governor himself. They may have confidence that he has stamina enough, to withstand the pressure of selfish special interests and the clamor of the political pack. They may have confidence that the development of Oregon will be fostered in every sound way without mortgaging future prosperity by worshipping at strange gods. They may have confidence that Mr. Corbett has a wide and intimate knowledge of the resources and problems of the state, and a broad acquaintance among the people in all sections. They may have confidence that Mr. Corbett will fill his office with dignity, with clean department, and without snobbery.

"We are not here discounting the talents or qualifications of the other candidates. But we endorse Corbett for governor because he gives us in higher degree than the others, confidence in his personal and political integrity, in his character, ability, good judgment and courage."

A prize fight has been set to music for broadcasting. The theme songs, most likely, will be "Pugliacci" and "Hearts and Cauliflowers."

Still, setting a prize fight to music is not such a novel idea. Boxers in the ring waltz and fiddle between stanzas and very often rock each other to sleep.

EDITORIALS FROM OVER THE NATION

BUSINESS AND SERVICE

Kearney, Neb., Tribune: Recently while looking over a copy of the Nation's Business we were somewhat surprised to find the following editorial:

"Having scolded business for its timidity let's scold it for its hypocrisy and protest once more against the abuse so common among business men of the word 'service.'"

"The primary purpose, the proper purpose, the right purpose of business is to make money. A business that isn't making a profit isn't much of a business and a business that isn't planning to make a profit isn't a business at all.

"Why should business be so afraid of the profit motive, so prone to prate of 'service,' as if the end and aim of business were to do good to others?"

This utterance, coming from a magazine of national prominence, was rather depressing. The emphasis upon service, which has been growing in recent years, had seemed to us to be one of the hopeful signs of the times, and for the editor of this business publication to apparently wipe all this out with one fell swoop of his pen seemed to say that this progress had been all in vain.

But a few days later we noted another item which restored our drooping spirits. This time it was a quotation from an address made by Harry B. Fleharty, a prominent Omaha attorney, before a group of Omaha retailers. According to the World-Herald, Mr. Fleharty said:

"Business all through history has been an agent for human betterment. When it becomes perverted and strays from this ideal, it has no place in the commercial world. * * * Business for profit only must be destroyed."

In our judgment, the emphasis placed upon service is entirely correct. Service is the most prominent idea in all lines of activity. We expect our teachers, our ministers, our physicians, dentists, newspapermen and others to provide service. Is it too much to ask that all lines of business serve?

The marxist writer's contention that business should return a profit is well taken. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." Every business should be profitable, and should charge a high enough price for its wares to insure an adequate return to the owner or operator. But, as Mr. Fleharty points out, when profit becomes the only motive, the business needs to be examined to see what is wrong.

Perhaps the best statement uttered along this line was made by a keen observer of human nature who lived nineteen hundred years ago. He said "Whatsoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whoever shall be first shall be your servant, even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister." His teaching that greatness and success come through service has been found to be fundamentally sound.

EXPIRING

Some joker has said that in Mexico it isn't the term that expires, but the man holding the office. In our United States too often the men holding the office expires without ever quite realizing it. Once safely in office he sets aside 50 per cent of his time for the task of perpetuating himself in his job, and drifts through the other 50 per cent of his time, thinking little and doing less. It is hard for many men to stay faithfully by any job when they don't have a boss to watch over them. Too bad, when we elect men to office, we can't elect somebody else to boss them or at least watch them and see that they work.

Jackson Charged With Auto Theft

Harold Jackson, employe at the Weiserhauser mill, was arrested at the plant yesterday by Patrolmen Coon and Totten, and is now detained in the county jail, facing a charge of larceny of an auto.

According to the police, on May 2, Jackson took the wheels and back part of an auto belonging to Irving Weiser of Beatty, which was parked near the Miller packing plant on the Greensprings road. Jackson told officers he had wrecked his brother's car, and not having cash to have it repaired, took the parts which he needed from Weiser's machine.

Slump in Foreign Trade Helps to Account for Present U. S. Business Depression, but Exporters Are Fighting Hard to Regain Lost Sales Overseas.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, May 13.—American business men are fighting hard to regain the foreign trade which has been lost in the last few months.

Exporters, which slumped along with the general business depression in this country, are vital to American prosperity, if they were eliminated completely between two and three million employes would be forced out of work, according to business students. The slump in exports was itself responsible for the idleness of a large number of the unemployed in recent months.

Edward N. Hurley, president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, observes that concerns in this country interested in exports have been applying themselves vigorously since the first of the year to stem the decrease in foreign trade and turn the trend backward toward former levels. The situation is only now beginning to improve.

Hurley was the wartime chairman of the Shipping Board. He is a veteran manufacturer and an authority on industry and economics. He was interviewed while here to attend the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"I wrote to each of our 742 member concerns in the American Manufacturers' Export Association, and had replies from 55 or 50 per cent," he says. "I found that 119 presidents or vice presidents of these companies were abroad, promoting the developments of foreign markets.

"It is going to take a lot of digging and fighting to get back where we were in foreign trade because we are faced with unsettled and unfavorable conditions throughout the world. But many of our manufacturers seem to be on their toes and appear to know what to do to overcome the obstacles.

"Here are some figures which will give you an idea of what foreign trade means to the people of this country.

"Of 2000 members of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association we found that 900 were engaged in foreign trade, manufacturing and selling their wares in the world's markets.

"Those 900 employ 400,000 men, of whom 50,000 are working directly on foreign orders. If you assume that each of the 50,000 workers has an average of three other persons in his family that means that there are at least 200,000 persons in Illinois depending upon and profiting by foreign orders—depending on exports for work and subsistence. That is a rather low figure, I believe, and of course in some other states the percentage of workers dependent on foreign trade is larger.

"The more foreign countries to which we can sell the better off we will be when a slump comes.

"The recent lull in business has not been merely local. Our foreign trade fell off because of various unsettled world conditions and heavy unemployment in many of the larger nations, such as Great Britain and Germany, Argentina, Brazil and other South American countries were having their business troubles along with the nations of Europe."

Hurley is undertaking to get more American manufacturers to operate under the terms of the Webb-Pomeroy act which permits them to act in concert to promote business and fix prices of their products in foreign markets.

Under that law an association of competitors may be formed which can arrange to sell in any country of the world at the same price. The measure was passed to help our business men meet the competition of the European cartels. It also permits such an association of competitors to ship in and hire a single representative to go abroad and study market possibilities for the benefit of all.

BISHOP ADMITS GETTING FUNDS

Canon Says No Report Made Because Law Doesn't Ask It

WASHINGTON, May 13. (AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., wired Chairman Caraway of the senate lobby committee today that he personally had received and disbursed practically all funds of the Virginia Anti-Smith committee in 1928, but had made no report to congress because it was not required by law.

At Church Trial

The telegram was sent from Dallas where Bishop Cannon is facing church charges because of his anti-Smith activities. He said he would appear before the lobby committee as soon as possible.

He will be questioned on testimony by Representative Tinkham, Massachusetts, and E. C. Jamieson, New York capitalist.

Tinkham Files Charges
Tinkham charged Jamieson had contributed $65,300 to Cannon for use in the Virginia anti-Smith campaign but that the Bishop had reported receipt of only $17,000. Jamieson said he had contributed $48,000.

Caraway announced that a reasonable time would be given the Bishop to appear.

Wagner's Measure On Unemployment Passed by Senate

WASHINGTON, May 13. (AP)—The senate today passed the Wagner bill to establish a national employment system and provide federal aid in setting up employment agencies in co-operation with the various states. The vote was 34 to 27.

The bill would create a new bureau in the department of labor to be known as the United States employment service.

It would authorize $4,000,000 for the next four years to be spent in establishing a national system of employment and in aiding states in setting up offices.

Fair Board Offers Premium on Wool

At a meeting of the Klamath County Fair Board May 8, it was decided to offer a special premium for best wool fleeces shown at the Klamath County Fair to be held this year, September 15, 19 and 20th. A sufficient premium will be offered in this class to guarantee a good exhibit. The Fair Board will reserve the right to select any or all of the fleeces shown to be used as a part of the county exhibit at other Pacific Coast fairs.

The Fair Board will pay a premium of 10 cent per pound over the going market price for wool for any fleeces they might select. In addition, it was decided to include in the premium list a special classification for a pen of 6 range lambs dropped after April 1st. This class is open for range lambs only. Four months will be awarded in this class, first premium carrying $25 prize, 2nd $20, 3rd $15, 4th $10. This should be of particular interest at this time to range operators.

Ambassadors of Good Will Busy

PORTLAND, Ore., May 13. (AP)—A full day of dinner engagements, church services and a public reception kept the four young Japanese "Goodwill" women busy here yesterday where they expressed their appreciation of the aid given the Japanese during the earthquake in 1923.

The four women, Misses Kimi Acino, sister of the Japanese consul here; Yoshiko Sato, Sumiko Tokuda and Kelo Nakamura, accompanied by Hideoaburo Yokoyama, Japanese newspaper man, will leave here Tuesday for San Francisco from where they will sail for home May 17.

The public reception was held at the home of Hiroshi Acino, consul, after the young women attended Mother's Day services at various churches.

EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO IN KLAMATH

A carload of machinery, including a well-boring outfit, has arrived for the Klamath Falls Water company, and is being installed near their pumping station on the Reames place on Conner avenue. It is stated that the well boring machine is capable of boring to a depth of 2,600 feet.

The company believes that artesian water can be secured at the location of their springs, and it looks as if they intended to make a thorough effort to secure pure water for the city.

After the announcement was made by the Herald that the proposed site for the new school house was some thirty feet above the water reservoirs of the city an investigation was made by President P. L. Fountain of the school board and Principal R. H. Dunbar of the city schools. These two gentlemen went to the site and with the use of levels discovered that the location was as stated, a considerable distance above the water reservoir.

The water superintendent of the local company states that water can be furnished by a pumping station and a survey is being made to determine the cost of furnishing water in this manner to the school. In the meantime the school board is split on the question.

City and county registration books close tomorrow evening. Up to date at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the total in the county was 2,269, which shows a gain of 40 since the closing of the registration books before the primary election.

In the city the registration books show a total of 1,041, or an increase since the re-opening.

Fire Insurance Stabilizes Credit

Without fire insurance, Credit—the medium and means of business expansion—would be almost wholly curtailed. Through the credit system, with the security afforded by fire insurance, loans are made to aid in building homes, mercantile and manufacturing establishments, and general commercial development. Insurance is indispensable to sound credit.

Without fire insurance, bankers, real estate men, contractors, building and loan organizations, and others who grant credit on future developments would doubtless consider the risks to be taken in making loans too hazardous to contemplate.

Stimulates All Activities

Without fire insurance "modern business," great cities, gigantic construction projects, large production, new sub-divisions to take the cities' overflow, would not have been possible.

Finance and insurance work together in promoting and encouraging the Nation's building activities and in support of the manufacture and distribution of goods, thus assuring continuous and increasing opportunities for employment to workers in all fields.

In the development and support of our great structure of credit, Stock Fire Insurance—as written by the 239 companies constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—has carried, and will continue to carry, the major load of the underlying responsibility at a price which on the average has constantly declined for more than twenty years.
