Crater Lake's Rock Lady

"The Lady of the Woods," a figure cut in solid rock in the Crater Lake national park, continues to arouse the interest and curiosity of visitors and to be mentioned occasionally as an unsolved mystery, says The Oregonian.

Anne Shannon Monroe, Portland author, visiting Crater Lake park with a party of Mazamas nine years ago, came upon the rock form and wrote an article about it which appeared in The Oregonian. This led to revelation of the sculptor as Dr. Earl R. Bush, a physician in the United States health service, who at that time was living in Cincinnati.

Although the origin of the sculpture was thus explained with apparent authenticity by men who were at Crater lake at the time, the more interesting story as to its significance has never been told. In delineating this grief-stricken figure, was the sculptor simply testing his skill in a creation that conforms to the contour of the rock that he was carving or was he dealing with the symbolical? One theory is that he was depicting the spirit of the forest grieving over the destruction of Mount Mazama, the peak that in ages past towered to a vast height above the present lake-filled crater.

Congressman Garner hasn't said the last word about his plan for making five states out of Texas—He believes Texans eventually will come over to his side

By RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The country hasn't heard the last of House Minority Leader Jack Garner's proposal to divide up Texas into five states. Considerable argument—pro, con and derisive—has been ranging down in Texas. Next winter someone probably will arise in the state legislature and introduce a measure looking to the division, so Garner hopes. The idea was no passing fancy with him.

After that, he believes, there will be a well defined movement in favor of division growing up in the Lone Star State. At the same time the northern states will begin to get excited about the idea of giving 10 senators to what is now Texas—with only two senators—and Texas state pride is likely to breed more and more enthusiastic sentiment for the plan at home.

It's Up to Texas
The rest of the country is confronted with the fact that Congress, in a joint resolution in 1915, provided that: "New states of convenient size, not exceeding four in number, in addition to the said state of Texas, and having sufficient population, may hereafter, by consent of said state, be formed out of the territory thereof, which shall be entitled to admission under the provisions of the federal constitution."

Some Texans have demanded to know whether the sacred bones of old Sam Houston are going to be dug up and scattered around among the proposed five new states. Garner replies that Sam Houston was one of the original proponents of the division and was largely responsible for seeing to it that Texas entered the union with the right of dividing if so desired.

"Therefore the importance of having as many senators from a given section as possible is obvious. "The south hasn't ever had a fair break. New England states have had the balance of power. If Texas is going to continue to be one state we ought to combine the New England states into one. Five of the New England states have less than the population of Texas and less than one-third the area; yet they have 10 senators to our two. The 1920 census is likely to show that Texas has a population of 9,000,000.

OREGON STATE PENITENTIARY, Salem, Ore., June 12. (UP)—Just plain "horse sense" guides the administration of the Oregon state penitentiary and that accounts for the total absence of fights, quarrels, breaks and riots that have become almost commonplace among prisoners in the United States, according to Warden James W. Lewis and Superintendent H. W. Meyers, of the prison here.

Successful Administration
STATE RECORDS on file with the board of control show that the administration of these two officials has been a successful one in every respect. Under their administration, there has been no repetition of the several breaks and near-riots, numerous gang fights and knife slashings, that occurred during previous administrations. The production of the prison's industries has increased steadily and the men are as cheerful as can be expected in any penal institution.

Prison Overcrowded
"THE PUBLIC knows of the overcrowded conditions that prevail in our institution and realizes that we are sitting on a keg of dynamite here all the time," said Warden Lewis.

Modify Hazard
"WHILE overcrowding does exist and the fire hazard and danger to life is always present, everything possible is done to modify these conditions and keep the convicts in a pleasant, contented frame of mind.

THE OREGON state penitentiary is remarkable in one very important aspect of all prison life, the total absence of the "convict complex" among the inmates, according to some of the best informed penologists in the United States who have visited the Salem institution.

THERE IS absolutely none of that undercurrent of unrest and revolt, that feeling of suppression, and atmosphere of dangerous discontent. The word "convict" is never mentioned before the inmates. They are referred to as "the men."

IN NO OTHER prison on the Pacific Coast and in few of the United States are the prisoners permitted to make their cells so comfortable and home-like as at the Oregon penitentiary.

Daily CAPITOL News Letter

The organization of the Klamath Bar Association was completed at a meeting held last evening in the circuit court room, and presided over by Circuit Judge Henry L. Benson. Twenty-two of the twenty nine attorneys in the city were present.

Wilbur Fleishacker, president of the Anglo-London-Paris National bank of San Francisco, and vice-president of the Klamath Development company, accompanied by Mrs. Fleishacker, Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Ehrman, Albert E. Schwabacker and A. L. Langerman, arrived in the city last night and this morning with W. Paul Johnson, went to the Upper lake, where they will enjoy the fishing, all having supplied themselves with fishing licenses before their departure.

Miss Fern Hoagland returned from Bonanza last night, where she spent several days with friends.

Bill Watkins, a well known mountaineer of Southern Oregon, arrived in Medford this morning, says the Medford Mail Tribune, from Klamath county, by way of Arants Camp, Unley Creek and Prospect, being the first man to cross the mountains this year by way of the road to Crater Lake. According to Mr. Watkins, the road will not be open for automobile travel until July.

The people of Klamath Falls are beginning to awaken to the fact that there will be a gorgeous show in this city on July 4th, to be put on by the Modoc tribe of Redmen. The water carnival alone will surpass any exhibition ever attempted in this section.

of national circulation regarding the prison here, wrote: "Many of the cells had curtains to the doors, pictures on the walls, home-made tables and shaded lamps, and musical instruments were on the cot. How much better, thought I, than consigning the inmates to dark and dreary cells to brood over their misfortunes."

THERE IS plenty of employment for every prisoner in the industrial and institutional shops, or on the farms and fields. There is no dungeon, no prison odor, and no convict is given a diet of bread and water for any reason. The convicts are permitted to smoke or whistle or sing or talk while they work or play. There is plenty to eat and plenty of recreation.

And the convicts refer to Warden Lewis as "Square Deal Jim."
