Rewards For Safe Driving

INCREASING numbers of automobiles incur increasing difficulties in handling traffic. Especially is this true in the smaller cities where traffic regulations are still largely in the hands of the car drivers themselves. The larger cities have solved the difficulties to some extent through one-way traffic, stop and go signals and other devices, but a town the size of Klamath Falls, for instance, a city in the making, ofttimes has traffic congestion that results in injury to some of the cars caught in the jam. Some of these injuries may be due to the carelessness of one driver, as is often witnessed in the interrections at Seventh and Main or Eighth and Main, and perhaps many other corners, or they may result from the fact that so many cars collect in one spot that a fender or front wheel gets rubbed in the effort of the driver to free his car of the crowd.

So long as traffic regulations are up to the car drivers it is essential that they exercise every effort to avoid accidents, and it is to the credit of the automobile driving public that such caution is practiced. Public interest and safety might prompt some such movement as is being promoted by the Vienna Automobile club.

This club proposes to give diplomas and plaques to automobile drivers who drive so carefully over a period of years that they have no accidents and pay no fines for violating traffic regulations. Owner drivers and chauffers who escape mishap for five, ten or fifteen years will be suitably decorated by the club for their carefulness.

That's not a bad idea for American automobile clubs to consider. No doubt traffic conditions in the average American city are ten times worse than in Vienna, as far as congestion is concerned, and our highways carry many times the number of cars found elsewhere in the world. In these times the driver who uses the highways and streets regularly and avoids mishap deserves a medal. Some so-called smart drivers manage to escape accidents, but frequently their actions on the road cause others to meet with mishap and for that they should be remembered, not with a medal, but in the slang of the day—crowned.

Although careful driving has its reward in the lack of accidents, the day is fast approaching when some public recognition will have to be given in the interest of safety and when that time comes it will not be a bad idea to keep the Vienna movement in mind.

With the report that Shakespeare's sonnets may be filmed, chances seem bright we shall yet hear some good English in the talkies.

Most unpopular of all Swiss movements is the substitution of hot coffee for brandy in the reviving of lost Alpine climbers. Perhaps this is another tariff reprisal.

Michael, ex-boy king of Rumania, will soon join the army as a corporal. To be sure, he has lost some authority, but prospects are good he'll make a top sergeant some day.

It is only fair to warn orators who plan to regale Admiral Byrd with warm toasts of welcome in the future that he has just been presented a sword by the state of Virginia.

Bringing a familiar exhortation up to date: Glide, Kelley, glide!

FROM OVER THE NATION

THE SWING AROUND THE CIRCLE

Kansas City Star: "One great trouble of President Hoover in dealing with congressmen," an experienced political correspondent in Washington remarked recently, "is that he doesn't speak their language and they don't speak his. So he doesn't interest them and at best a lot of them don't care whether his administration succeeds or not."

Which, being interpreted, means that the president is not politically-minded, that it is an effort for him to be interested in political considerations that are so vital to the average member of congress, and that it is difficult for him to attract enthusiastic political support.

Yet no one, not a politician, can talk for ten minutes with Mr. Hoover without being impressed with his ability, his breadth of view, his earnestness and his devotion to the ideal of bettering the national life. People generally are not politicians. It ought to be exceedingly valuable, therefore, for the president to make a swing around the circle, explaining to the "folks back home" what he is trying to do.

The mobilizing of public opinion behind him would impress the politicians in Washington that it would be good politics for them to co-operate with the president instead of trying to make his administration a failure.

WOMEN SAFER AS DRIVERS

Philadelphia Bulletin: Analysis of fatal motor accident statistics for 1929 in Massachusetts by the committee on street and highway safety appointed by Governor Allen puts the woman driver in a highly favorable light. While women hold 14 per cent of the drivers' licenses issued in that state, they were drivers in but 5.5 per cent of the fatal mishaps. Their record was almost three times as good as that of men.

To get an accurate measure of the relative driving capacity of the sexes data would be required as to the annual mileage covered by the average representative of each. But observation will back up the suggestion of the Massachusetts figures that whether or not women are as skillful drivers as men, they are as a rule safer.

There are exceptions to all rules. Some women are as reckless on the road as any man. Generally speaking, however, the woman drives more slowly, is less inclined to take chances in passing other cars, conforms more closely to traffic rules and keeps her head as well in an emergency. And it might be added that since most emergencies result from indulgence in hazards, women have fewer emergencies to meet.

GOB HUMOR

Detroit Bulls' Eye: Anofficer, inspecting sentries, came across a raw-looking yeoman.

"What are you here for?" he asked.

"To report anything unusual, sir."

"What would you call unusual?"

"I don't know exactly, sir."

"What would you do if you saw five battleships steaming across that field yonder?"

"I'd sign the pledge, sir."

A POOR RISK

London Punch: In view of the fact that it is now fashionable to insure any part of the body essential to one's profession, it is significant that so far no politician has done anything about his brain.

DAILY LETTER ON AFFAIRS AT U. S. CAPITAL

If Anyone in the United States Fails to Hear About the Bicentennial of Washington's Birth In 1932, It Won't Be Because the Nation Isn't Holding a Celebration.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, July 1—Preliminary ballyhoo has begun for the big national celebration in 1932 of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington. The chairman of the Bicentennial Commission is Herbert Hoover and its organization is made up of the highest officials and various distinguished citizens.

The announced purpose of the celebration is to bring about a "revival of devotion to country among the American people, with a renewed appreciation of what George Washington stands for in our national life." It is planned to "stir the patriotic impulses of every man, woman and child living under the protection of the Republic," and to carry the demonstration of such impulses into every church, school, home, organization and group.

Started Six Years Ago

The celebration was authorized by Congress and blessed by President Coolidge and as far back as 1924 all states and territories were invited to participate.

School superintendents, teachers' organizations and all types of educational authorities are formulating plans for participation by all educational institutions. An effort will be made to have a flag and a picture of Washington in every school room and there will be plays, pageants, programs, patriotic historical studies, posters and a tree-planting program to the end that every schoolyard may have its "George Washington tree."

"A great motion picture that will depict the life and activities of George Washington" will be offered to every civic, patriotic, educational, fraternal and religious organization in the United States, according to promises.

Ministers of the country will be expected to preach special patriotic sermons during 1932, according to announcement from the commission's executive offices here. Speaking campaigns will be organized for the radio, for state fairs, expositions and other meetings. Newspapers and magazines will be flooded with publicity material. Composers will write memorial music in honor of Washington. Music of the colonial period will be collected. It is even proposed to revive some of the more colorful dress patterns and to popularize patriotic figured prints among women for 1932.

Manufacturers of calendars, greeting cards, posters and general printing will be asked to feature George in illustrations and texts, while railroads will use George Washington memorial menues and hotels will be asked to do the same.

These plans for a vast national emotional orgy over Washington aimed at every man, woman and child, already have been outlined by the Bicentennial Commission. Many more plans will be announced and the general public is especially asked to write in any suggestions it can think of.

Nothing in the nature of an exposition or world's fair is planned for Washington, but large pilgrimages are expected here and plans will be made to take care of them. The commission stresses the fact that this isn't the District of Columbia's party any more than any other city's.

Capital to Be Beautiful

Nevertheless, the big public buildings program being carried out here is being pushed in order to get as much done as possible by 1932 and there will be a lot of new buildings and new landscaping to see. The program includes the series of new government department buildings along Pennsylvania avenue and the Mall, the new Supreme Court Building, an enlarged Congressional Library, and the Station Plaza development, costing in all about $150,000,000.

The bases of the Washington monument and Lincoln Memorial will be prettied up and the great $15,000,000 Lincoln Memorial Bridge across the Potomac will have long since been opened to traffic. The Mount Vernon Boulevard, now being constructed, will connect the capital with Washington's old home and it is billed as "one of the most inspiring thoroughfares in the world," running its whole length between rows of trees indigenous to the various states. There will be many other improvements hereabouts with the Bicentennial in mind, including a $50,000 restoration of Washington's birthplace at Wakefield, Va., as authorized by Congress.

EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO IN KLAMATH

The most important work of the Southern Pacific in Oregon, the Natron cut-off, the main line between Portland and San Francisco, is attracting attention all over the coast, and the interests of these two great cities are alive to the vast importance of the opening of this immense territory in Eastern Oregon to the markets of the two cities. Portland capital, in particular, has begun the development of the lands and town sites on the northern end of the line, just as California capital has already become heavily interested in the southern end in Klamath Falls and its vicinity.

The new hotel on the rim of Crater Lake is now about half completed, and the company expects to complete it and have it ready for occupancy at the beginning of next season.

The United States grand jury in session in Portland sent an appeal to Governor West to take a hand in enforcing the liquor laws at Toledo, Florence, Bly and Pendleton, where it is asserted that the Indians are offenders against the federal statutes and local district officers have failed to enforce the laws.

There was no business transacted by the city council at their regular meeting last night. Out of respect for the family of the late Fred T. Sanderson, and in acknowledgement of the services of the late ex-mayor to the city, the council passed a resolution to adjourn council for the evening, and ordered the flag to be displayed at half mast until Monday, July 8, on the city hall.

Tom Turnage, who was indicted by the grand jury on five counts for gambling and selling whiskey at Dairy, pleaded guilty to the charges and was fined $25 for gambling, and $200 on one of the liquor charges. The other three charges were suspended, it is understood, on condition that he close up his place of business at Dairy and does not offend again. The fines were paid.

Kiwanis Fellowship Dinner Held Monday Throughout Nation

"All Kiwanis Night" was observed by the Klamath Kiwanis club which gathered 'round the banquet table at the hotel Willard yesterday evening at 5:30 o'clock.

Following the invocation, those present stood silent for one moment of silent fellowship. The meeting opened with the singing of "America" and "God Save the King" in keeping with the spirit of internationalism.

President Percy Murray of the local club read a message from the president of Kiwanis International.

The fellowship song of the organization, "Onward in Kiwanis" was then sung by the club members.

Throughout the world the numerous clubs were meeting at the same time and holding similar programs.

An additional musical program was presented at the meeting here when George Myers, accompanied by Mrs. Myers, sang "Give a man a horse he can ride," and "On the shore," as an encore. R. E. Patterson, accompanied by Mrs. Wallace Uerlings, sang "Am I Dreaming" and "Etiquette Blues."

Dr. Arthur Eaton, pastor of the Christian church, gave the address of the evening on "The Kiwanian's Ideals."

Rev. A. O. Broyles, of the Emanuel Baptist church, assisted by Bert C. Thomas, was in charge of the program.

Contractors State Licenses Klein's Stand Affects Bids

SALEM, Ore., July 1, (UP)—State authorities do not look favorably upon the plan to license Oregon contractors through issuance of permits by the state, it was indicated here today by Roy A. Klein, state highway engineer.

OREGON CONTRACTORS are endeavoring to enlist support to an action requiring creation of a state office solely for the purpose of licensing contractors through payment of a fee similar to that paid by real estate operators, barbers and physicians, it was said.

Desire Many Bids

"WE DESIRE a wide and varied range of bids on state projects being planned," Klein said. "If contractors were limited in their bids through state licensing, many low bidders might be disqualified.

"SOMETIMES firms outside the state offer bids for highway construction projects. If, under the proposed system, such a firm offered the lower bid, which was accepted by the state, other contractors would force the company to become licensed, an action that might take six months," he said.

Do Not Favor Law

IT IS FOR this reason that outside agencies would fail to become licensed and bidding thereby would be restricted, compelling the department to accept higher priced contracts, Klein stated.

"WE ARE NOT exactly in opposition to such a law but we do not favor its enactment," Klein said. "It is doubtful if revenue derived by the state would be of importance. License fees would probably no more than take care of the cost in operating the bureau.

"I KNOW nothing of the viewpoint in regard to the law from the standpoint of building contractors. Perhaps such legislation might prove beneficial and justifiable to their profession as pointed out by those who favor the law's enactment," he said.

ALL CONTRACTS now accepted through the state are examined closely and only reliable bidders are given awards, Klein said, so it would be needless to have this provision.
