TODAY IN KLAMATH'S THEATRES

AT THE PELICAN

Advance notices from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot at Culver City indicate that officials of that company are more than pleased with the results of the first all-talking feature picture starring Van and Schenck, the pair who during the past 29 years have sung and wisecracked their way over practically every vaudeville circuit in the country.

The picture, which is called "They Learned About Women," will open a two-day engagement Sunday at the Pelican Theatre. Beanie Love supports the featured pair in a story dealing with two baseball players who desert the ball diamond for the vaudeville stage.

In some respects the story resembles the life of the well-known vaudeville entertainers who actually were ball players before they entered upon stage work.

Inasmuch as their only previous film experience was in a number of singing shorts, Hollywood interests have been wondering how Van and Schenck would make out when it came to playing straight roles. From all indications, they have made out extremely well and in all likelihood will join the rest of the Broadway stage stars who have shaken the dust of New York from their shoes and are now scanning the Hollywood real estate pages for lots and houses.

Briefly the plot of the new film concerns Jack and Jerry (Joe Schenck and Gus Van), big league ball players who fill in winter seasons sinking in vaudeville. Both of them love Mary (Beanie Love) but she is engaged to Jack who subsequently is "vamped" by a chorus girl (Mary Doran). Broken-hearted, Mary promises to marry Jerry when the partnership is split up by jealousy. The chorus girl romance founders, however, and Jack returns to find the really loves about to marry his erstwhile pal. At the crisis of a World Series game, a dramatic sequence brings the original lovers together again.

People who were present at the "shootings" of the baseball scenes taken in Wrigley field with hundreds of people cheering in the grandstands, testify to the realism of the sequences. A number of professional players worked in the picture and Jack Conway and Sam Wood, the directors, had every play faithfully reproduced on the field, allowing the players to play ball without any acting. It was stated that situations frequently arose in the playing of the game that were not in the original story but remained in the picture because they were filmed and recorded as they actually happened in order to give the picture genuine atmosphere.

Mike Donlin served as club manager in the filming of the baseball scenes. The original story was written by A. P. Younger and was adapted to the screen by Sarah Y. Mason. The dialogue was written by "Bugs" Baer, New York columnist.

Playing minor roles in the picture are Eddie Gribbon, J. C. Nugent, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Tommy Dugan and Benny Rubin. Van and Schenck introduce 19 new songs in "They Learned About Women," which were written by Milton Ager and Jack Yellen, composers of "Ain't She Sweet?" "I Wonder What Became of Sally," and other popular songs.

AT THE PINE TREE
Grant Withers and Loreta Young, Hollywood's newest flying newbies, are co-featured in "The Second Floor Mystery," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone mystery comedy-melodrama which comes to the Pine Tree Theatre Sunday.

Several months after the young screen stars met, their engagement was announced. Shortly after their flight by plane to the parson's was flashed across the country. "The Second Floor Mystery," based on the Earl Derr Biggers novel, is a thrilling thriller-story said in London. An American boy and girl become involved in a series of mystifying events which provide both comedy and melodrama.

H. B. Warner, Claire McDowell, Crawford Kent, John Loder, Claude King, Judith Vanell Sidney Bracy and many others are included in the cast. Roy Del Ruth directed. Joseph Jackson prepared the screen play and dialogue.

AT THE LIBERTY
Hoot Gibson adheres to his policy of "change of pace" in "The Mounted Stranger" stirring Universal action picture coming to the Liberty Theatre Sunday.

Gibson is carrying out a consistent policy of variety in making the thrilling pictures that have placed him on the pinnacle of western stardom. In his various pictures he is portraying the romantic west, in both its old and new phases.

He broke with the old western picture tradition by introducing automobiles, motorcycles and airplanes when he thought they added interest and excitement. He was the first western star to make use of airplanes in his pictures.

In "The Mounted Stranger" Gibson returns to the old west of horses and gun play. The scenes of the action are laid in the great southwest, down near the border.

The picture has a continuously exciting plot, laid in a most colorful setting. Many of the most effective scenes were shot in the wild and awe-inspiring wastes of the great Mojave desert.

Gibson plays the part of a hard riding, hard fighting young cowpuncher, who single-handed sets out to "get" a gang of bad men who had murdered his father. Despite the grimness of this central purpose, there is ample romance, to say nothing of Gibson's special brand of western humor.

Charming Louise Lorraine plays opposite Gibson in the picture, which was directed by Arthur Rosson. The film is based on Henry H. Knibbs' famous story, "The Riding Kid From Powder River."
