

Mantle of Snow Comes with Dawn of the New Year

Although Stores and Offices are Closed, Hello Girls, Milkmen, Theatre and Other Employees Stick to Task.

New Year's day dawned on a snow-white Klamath Falls this morning. Prospects for a day of rest were ahead of many men and women, and they merely turned off the alarm clock and went back to bed for another "snore," while it was "just another day" for many workers who must continue at their task through the day.

The milkman pulled out of the garage at the same early hour this morning as any other morning of the year. He was a little heartened by the knowledge that the milk bottle he placed on Klamath's back porches was of a standard grade, since the new milk ordinance officially went into effect today.

The "hello" girls must continue at their work today. No holidays are granted them and they must continue day after day giving Klamath people phone service.

Theatre employees worked today, beginning early this morning cleaning out the local theatres. Their work will keep them busy until the last entertainers leave the show houses this evening.

Bus drivers, trainmen, garage crews and a host of workers in other industries that cannot declare a holiday, were kept busy throughout the day providing transportation and other necessities to residents of the city.

And to the newspapermen it was just another day—copy to be written, stories to get—with perhaps an earlier start of the presses to make everyone feel happy.

YOUNG STOCK BROKER JUMPS TO HIS DEATH

NEW YORK, Jan. 1. (AP)—Lee Adam Gimbel, stock broker, was killed instantly yesterday when he fell or jumped from the sixteenth floor of the Yale club. He was 35 years old.

After examining the body and Gimbel's effects in his quarters in the club, Dr. Raymond B. Miles, assistant medical examiner, said Gimbel "either jumped or fell" from his window.

Police at the East 51st street station where the body was taken said that a note had been found by the medical examiner indicating Gimbel's intention to commit suicide. Detectives assigned to the case said later that they knew nothing of such a note. Relatives of Gimbel denied that any note had been found.

Gimbel, who was a Yale graduate, was a partner in the stock brokerage firm of Satorious and Smith. Previous he had been vice-president and a director of Gimbel Brothers, operators of department stores but severed his connection with the company in 1928.

He and his brother, Louis S. Gimbel, were heirs to a fortune of several million dollars left by their father.

GRANDSON OF BUSCH KIDNAPPED

Huntleigh village in St. Louis county.

"I left the house with Adolphus beside me in the car," Yowell said. "I drove down the private drive toward Lindbergh boulevard and then slowed down for a turn. As I turned south on Lindbergh a negro standing at the left of the road tried to wave me down, but I didn't stop. He then got on the running board and ordered me to get out. I did so. I said, 'come along, Buh', as I saw the negro was going to take the car, but he refused to let the boy get out of the car.

"He then jumped into the driver's seat, took the wheel, and drove rapidly away. I hurried back to the Orthwein home to give the alarm. The negro made no remark that would indicate he knew the identity of the boy whom he was kidnapping.

Five blocks from the Orthwein home a negro and a boy were seen by bystanders to get out of the Orthwein limousine and get into a smaller car. The Orthwein limousine was found deserted at that point.

Friends of the family said they could offer no possible motive for the abduction other than ransom. They said the Orthweins had not employed any negroes for some time.

The Orthwein boy, an attractive youngster, is a skilled horseman for his age. He has won several prizes at shows. He attended the country day school, where he was "an average boy in every respect," according to Principal Robert H. B. Thompson. His father is vice-president of an advertising agency, a member of the exclusive Racquet club, and a graduate of Yale. His mother was Clara Busch.

Mr. and Mrs. Orthwein were preparing to receive guests when they learned of the kidnapping. Mrs. Orthwein became hysterical, and today was under the care of a physician. August A. Busch, after a brief visit to the Orthwein home, went to police headquarters here, where he conferred with Chief of Police Gark and Chief of Detectives Kaiser.

NEW YORK NURSE

MISS EDNA WANNENBERG says no one can take course of Sargon without being greatly benefited.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1. (AP)—Young 1931 was swept into the metropolis this morning on a wave of noise as his decrepit old predecessor was booted out of town.

The new year brought at least temporary prosperity to the city's confidants and to the army of street hawkers with tin horns and other noise making contraptions for sale.

Several of the city's six millions remained quietly at home beside their radios, but other millions yielded to the impulse to go places and do things. To thousands, places meant Times Square, Broadway, the Battery, and the connecting thoroughfares.

The mecca of other thousands was a place where there was music, dancing, paper hats, ice clinking in tall glasses and a good stiff cover charge. Such were night clubs, hotels, restaurants, and speakeasies.

Those who found the advent of the third decade of the twentieth century less a fete than a time for contemplation and prayer attended the watch services in scores of churches.

The celebration began early and carried on with unabated enthusiasm well into the morning. The crowds which packed themselves into solid masses of humanity in New York's favorite rendezvous, Times Square, and other spots were noisy but orderly. The police department had 1000 extra men on the street, but their task was chiefly handling traffic.

One accident resulted from the use of firearms for noise-making. Miss Hazel Francisco, 35, a nurse, was shot in the shoulder while in a crowd at Seventh Avenue and 34th street. The wound was not serious.

The new year's welcome apparently did not inspire federal prohibition agents to unusual activity. A squad of 30 made five raids yesterday and arrested 18 persons for liquor law violations but no raids were reported during the midnight ballyhoo.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover received the cabinet members in the upstairs sitting room and were accompanied by them to the blue room, where the diplomatic corps was presented by Ambassador Teles, dean of the corps.

Associate justices of the supreme court, senators, representatives and delegates in congress gathered in the east room and followed the judiciary.

After the president and Mrs. Hoover had rested briefly, the public began filing slowly through the historic portals.

Four Year Old Boy Drunk on "Syrup"

EVANSTON, Ill., Jan. 1. (AP)—Master Vincent Page, Jr., 4-year-old, likes maple syrup.

This explains why he climbed high to a pantry shelf, while his mother wasn't looking, took down a bottle of fluid that looked like maple syrup, drank about half a pint and then started reeling.

His mother decided that he was entirely too young to be doing that sort of thing and hurried him to a hospital where the alcoholic liquor was removed. Vincent recovered.

ARRESTS TOTALED 84 DURING DECEMBER

Police arrest docket at headquarters shows 84 arrests made during the month of December, and 1,457 collected in fines.

On New Year's eve and early New Year's day six arrests had been made. Five of those haled into headquarters were charged with being drunk, and the sixth was charged with breaking glass on the street.
