Today In Klamath's Theatres

Moran and Mack in the Paramount Picture, "Anybody's War"

From the novel, "Two Black Crowns in the A. E. F."
Folks who learned the inside story of the Early Bird and the "Who Cares About That?" When they saw and heard Moran and Mack in the blackface comedians' first picture, "Why Bring That Up?" will now learn the inside story of the Sad Fish.
For the intimate facts about these delicious verities will be generously dispensed by the first-voiced comedies in one of their amusing arguments during a sequence of "Anybody's War," their newest release, which comes to the Pine Tree theatre for three days, beginning Tuesday.
"Time and tide waits for no man," declares Willie Crow (Moran).
"Whuh-whuh-whuh who cares about the tide?" queries Amos Crow (Mack).
"It means a lot to a fish."
"Well, why not let the fish worry about it, then?"
"That's just the trouble—a fish can't worry."
"Good old fish I ever met looked worried."

AT THE PELICAN

There are more laughs in an Oakie grin than the whole hyena family could muster in a life-time of laughter. There are more laughs in Jack Oakie's "Sea Legs" than in any Oakie picture to date (and I recall "The Social Lion," "The Sap from Syracuse," "Let's Go Native"). It's a swell sea caper with the Oakie well-acted.
"Sea Legs," which opened its two day run at the Pelican theatre last night, gives Oakie everything he needs for his mirth-making. It has a cargo of comedy lines it would be hard to beat, anywhere. George Marion, Jr., along slinger de luxe, wrote them. It is equipped with a series of hilarious situations. I'm thinking particularly of the moment when Oakie wakes up from a heavy sleep to find himself stranded and shipwrecked on a strange name aboard a ship he never heard of before, and of the moment Oakie discovers the ship is packed with girls. And "Sea Legs" is manned, and womaned, with a great fun-producing cast. Harry Green, Lillian Roth, Eugene Pallette and others.
"Sea Legs" takes Jack Oakie into the navy of a tiny republic of which no one has ever heard. He's shanghaied to fill the berth of a young millionaire slacker. Harry Green is the wily lawyer who arranges the situation for Oakie, and the ship is home to a dozen of the captain's beautiful daughters, from which Oakie selects one to take care of his heart. Forced to continue under the imposed name, Oakie finds much compensation in trading on his principal's name, but the whole affair gets him into a ticklish situation and results in an impromptu battle between two opposing sailor groups. In these rippling situations, the happy bit of the hour waxes eloquent and joyful. He sings two really catchy song numbers, both of which contain many a chuckle. "It Must Be Illegal" and "A Daisy Told Me." And I'm telling you, Catch Jack Oakie's "Sea Legs." Roll all over the deck laughing.

AT THE RAINBOW

If any of you harbor the least doubt that Paramount's new show would attractions don't live up to that slogan, just attend the Rainbow theatre, and thrill to George Bancroft in the all-talking action hit, "The Mighty".
Secondly, "The Mighty" possesses rare qualities, action and a logical story.
Bancroft is the post war gunman who laughs at the law and throws a draft summons in the waste basket. Four M. P.'s put him in the army and overseas he goes as Private Green. His natural instinct for gunning finds him emerging from the war a full-fledged major and a national hero. He is very impatient to get back to his old haunts.
In a city where he stops to see the family of an over-seas buddy, he is offered the position of commissioner of public safety and accepts, to further his own interests. Either Bancroft is the girl who knows his past, yet loves him. He soon rides the city of all gangsters, and then assembles his own gang for a grand coup. The gang becomes restless, and decides to go ahead without their chief.
Then comes the most stirring bit of action you've seen in years, Bancroft at the head of over two score of mounted motorcycle officers to overtake a powerful gang of bank robbers. If there is a drop

LONDON.—That England is really feeling the pressure of business conditions is shown in a recent advertisement inserted in a Plymouth newspaper by a man. It follows: "Gentlemen, quiet, literature, income failed, suitable employment unobtainable, would call daily to wash up clothes, and other household duties." It was headed, "An S. O. S. to ladies who can't get mads."
