

Governor Meier Swings Veto Axe on Two Measures

Act Providing for Filling Vacancies in Senate and House Killed. Also Vetoes Act For New Prison Parole Board.

SALEM, March 12 (AP)—Executive disapproval of the legislative act providing for the filling of vacancies in the house and senate from any district, by the county court in the district where such vacancy occurs, and the act creating a new parole board, was announced by vetoes of these two acts. Governor Julius L. Meier considered both acts "unnecessary and not constructive legislation."

The filling of vacancies by county courts was proposed in a senate bill introduced by Senators J. E. Bennett and Sam Brown. As a result of the condition arising in Marion county just prior to the last session, when two legislative members succumbed after the general election, their places were filled by appointment by the governor under a special legislative act. The defeat of this bill leaves the matter as it was prior to the legislature, where vacancies are to be filled by special election.

Had Threatened Veto
The parole board bill, introduced as house bill 433 by the joint ways and means committee, would have provided for an increase in the board from three to five members, eliminating the secretary to the governor as a member and replacing that position with a penitentiary warden. The governor declared during consideration of this measure that he would veto the act.

Bills signed by the governor last night included the new game code, which was buffeted around the legislative halls during a major portion of the session, and was not finally approved until the last night of the session. The code was once defeated by the senate, but passed upon reconsideration after amendments eliminated objectionable features were made. The bill was further amended in the house.

Signs Game Code
The bill of 62 pages provides a new code for game and fishing regulations.

The first salary bill approved was that increasing the annual salary of the state labor commissioner from $3,000 to $3,600, requested because of the added duties of the office by the consolidation of the child labor commission and the industrial welfare commission under the bureau of labor. Other bills included the "paw brokers" license provision, appropriations for the Oregon National guard and Camp Clatsop; organization and regulation of fire insurance companies, regulation of health and accident insurance policies, appropriation for a fireproof vault at the state capital, appropriation of $3,900.556 for 11 state institutions, the bill operating the state welfare commission, and appropriations for homes for neglected children and wayward girls.

Fifty-eight measures remain for executive action. The governor has until tonight to sign or veto these measures. In the event neither action is taken the measures will automatically become laws without his signature.

"would have killed me," she sobbed in answer. Her account of the shooting as given to police in a formal statement, follows:

Quarrel Begins
"After dinner my husband started drinking whiskey. I understood to go to bed, and returning to the salon started to read an Italian paper. He, infuriated, said that my desire to read that language was because I had an Italian lover. This started the quarrel.

"I went to bed, but I took the precaution of putting the revolver I bought three months ago under my pillow because he had threatened me before. He was only half undressed when he started talking about an Italian lover.

Grabbed Her Throat
"Suddenly, leaning over my bed he seized me by the throat. I managed to escape him and seized my revolver. I fired it once full into his face and then three more times. He staggered to the other room and I followed him and then fainted behind him.

"When I recovered I awakened the janitor and told him to notify the police.

Friends of Nixon-Nirdlinger and his wife, who was Miss Charlotte Nash of St. Louis, said that he was undoubtedly loved by his wife very much, but was most jealous.

Yesterday morning he engaged detectives to trail her, explaining that he did not intend to use any information he might against her, but simply wanted to know what she was doing.

His body is being held at the morgue, and while she is being held by police, no formal charges have been filed.

Governor's Veto Axe Descends On Money Measures

Authority Questioned
Executive action on these two appropriation bills has aroused considerable comment over the state as to the probable constitutionality of the act, although no definite opinions have been expressed, and state officials do not believe the matter will be taken to court. Attorney General I. H. Van Winkle said today he had not been asked for a written opinion on the matter from the governor's office. He would not voice an oral opinion on the issue. Van Winkle stated he had discussed the matter orally with representatives from the governor's office, but said he was not at liberty to disclose such conversation.

Explains Disapproval
Governor Meier, it was stated at his office, disapproved these bills on the ground that the legislature took from him his prerogative of single item veto by placing the entire appropriation in one sum, and that it was the view of the office that because of this situation, the governor had the right to veto such items. The secretary of state announced his office did not contemplate any action other than to file the measures as approved and vetoed.

Interested state officials searched records and supreme court opinions on precedents and rulings on partial sum vetoes, and found that in Oregon there had been no such precedent. Court opinions from other states, records reveal, generally opposed veto items, with few such vetoes being upheld.

Records Against Partial Veto
Opinions quoted included those from Illinois in 1915, which held such vetoes ineffective; Oklahoma in 1923, where a divided court held such executive action as a "futile gesture," and ineffectual, making the entire item valid. Other opinions were from Colorado in 1923, Arizona and Maryland. A Pennsylvania opinion in 1901 held that the governor had this right, by interchanging the words "part" and "item." The California constitution of 1922 permits the governor to exercise partial veto. The Oregon law has not been tested in the supreme court.

Some of the appropriation items vetoed by the governor, in addition to the $515,000 on the two items mentioned, included $40,000 for a new armory at La Grande; $30,000 for a mining and geological survey of state resources.

Oregon May Lose Plant
Among the more outstanding vetoes, in addition to the appropriation items, was senate bill 315 which would enable the California Oregon Power company to start construction on its proposed plant on Klamath river by transferring water permits to the new hydro-electric commission. The result of this veto, Evan Reames, attorney for the power company said, may result in the firm cancelling its $4,500,000 plant on the same river in California, just across the Oregon line.

DOUBT MEIER'S AUTHORITY TO VETO MEASURE

Did Governor Meier have authority to veto Senate Bill 315 in its entirety?

That is the question which has arisen in the minds of several Klamath Falls attorneys since yesterday afternoon when the Associated Press advised The Evening Herald the state executive had vetoed the bill, commonly referred to as the Klamath power bill.

Not a few local attorneys question his authority to veto the bill as a whole and refer to Section 13-A, article V of the constitution of Oregon which grants the governor authority to veto only single items in appropriation bills and any provision in new bills carrying an emergency.

Section 13-A, article V, says: "Single items in bills, vetoes. The governor shall have power to veto single items in appropriation bills, and any provision in new bills declaring an emergency, without thereby affecting any other provision of such bill. (Referendum amendment adopted Nov. 7, 1916, L. 1917, p. 7; referendum amendment adopted June 7, 1921, L. (special session) 1921, p. 6.)"

Another question is raised by President Arnold Bennett Hall today in his comment on the governor's action in reducing the appropriation for state institutions of higher learning from $1,151,000 to $681,000, a cut of $500,000. In his comment, which appears in an Associated Press store sent out from Eugene today, President Hall says:

"How could you veto part of the appropriation without vetoing all of it, since it was not divided into sections?" Section 13-A says the governor shall have power to veto single items in bills and any provision in new bills carrying an emergency. In the educational appropriation bill there was a single item, or lump sum, of $1,151,000. The governor has full authority to veto the entire sum, but President Hall questions his authority to veto a portion of it.

Senate Bill 315, which contained an emergency clause, was vetoed as a whole, when the law says the governor has authority only to veto any provision of a bill carrying the emergency—not the bill in its entirety.

cratic party and carry it over to the Hoover band wagon."

Norris said the same group of men will control both national conventions, will raise false issues and "then laugh at us."

Third Party Impossible
"Why should there not be a third party?" Norris asked. "I will tell you why I do not believe it can be done. 'We do not vote directly for president; we have an electoral college that is a fifth wheel to the wagon. The effect of it is to saddle the will of the people and make it necessary to first get a nomination.'

Reveals Roosevelt Bolt
"To have a party we must organize every congressional district in the United States. It would cost a large sum of money and the monopolies and trusts have all the money; the people do not."

Norris said even with the leadership of Roosevelt the people were unable to organize a third party that would function effectively at the polls.

The Nebraska senator advocated the abolition of the electoral college. He said if this were done and "the weary citizens" could go into the voting booth and see the name of the man for whom they voted directly at the national conventions could sweep this country "if the Democrats do as Rankin wants them to do and nominate a candidate as much under the domination of the power trust as Herbert Hoover."

Compares Power Rates
Norris cited the wide difference in power costs between the Canadian and American side of the Niagara river.

"The average rate charge in Toronto by a public owned plant is one and one-half cent a kilowatt hour," he said. "Go home and compare that with your electrical bill supplied by the power trust."

"This power trust is actively in politics. It will have more to do with controlling the two national conventions than any other single influence."

After his speech, Norris was asked if he referred to Governor Roosevelt of New York in his statement that "we want another Roosevelt in the White House." The Nebraska senator smiled and said:

"I never thought about that."

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP)—Shorter working hours and a wider distribution of wealth were suggested today to the progressive conference as possible steps to a solution of unemployment and industrial troubles.

Robert P. Scripps, president of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, put the two-point proposal into plain words after similar suggestions had been voiced by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, whom the veteran independent, Norris of Nebraska, said he looked upon to lead in the independent movement after he had passed on, presented the problems to the conference.

In the general discussion, D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, said one-third of his organization was "walking the streets."

The three-day week was proposed, in addition, a six-hour day. Scripps said "shorter working hours than we have dreamed of" would be necessary.

With committees already set up to carry on their studies through the next session of the new congress, which the independents will hold, the balance of power, Senator Norris of Nebraska directed attention to a definite legislative program covering tariff, unemployment, power, agriculture and representative government. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin opened the discussion with a charge that "industrial, financial and political leadership" had broken down. He called for the conference to draft a program for the stabilization of industry and employment.

He offered no remedy, but said it was not enough to criticize. He contended over production of the nation's ill, and assailed proposals of industrial leaders for mergers and reduction of wages.

MEIER GIVES HIS REASONS

SALEM, March 12 (AP)—Governor Julius L. Meier, in commenting today on his appointment of Charles K. Spaulding of Salem to replace C. E. Gates of Medford on the state highway commission, said the move was in keeping with his business administration policy.

"I consider Mr. Spaulding a very good business man, and believe he will apply business methods to the highway department," the governor said. "The appointment is in keeping with my policy of making business appointments, and it is not a political one." The governor would not comment further as to reasons for replacing Gates.

The announcement of the appointment was made late yesterday, following a lengthy conference with H. B. Van Duzer, chairman of the highway commission April 1, 1927, by the late Governor I. L. Patterson. He was re-appointed last year by Governor A. W. Norblad, and his term had several years yet to run.

Spaulding has been a resident of Salem for many years and is president of the C. K. Spaulding Logging company. He is also interested in a pulp mill at Newberg and has other extensive interests.

Spaulding's first venture into politics was during the last legislative session, when he was appointed senator from Marion county to succeed the late Senator Lloyd T. Reynolds.

VOX THEATRE OPENS TONIGHT

of the theater shows unusual simplicity with the walls and ceiling finished in celotex of cream color. In the arrangement, this plainness is effectively set off by wall lights of rose and blue, and double ceiling fixtures with colorful shades of glass paper. These lights can be turned on red, blue or amber.

Probably one of the most noticeable features is the proscenium of the stage, especially designed by Charles Coscomb, architect, to represent a picture frame. The prevailing color scheme of gold, silver and wine-red is seen in the frame effect. Mr. Coscomb stated that this idea is original and could be used since the stage will be only a setting for the screen.

Seats 450 People
The theater will seat 450, including the balcony which contains 147 chairs. The balcony arrangement has been changed and the stairway is located in the center of the front part of the building. Colorful aisle carpets, corresponding with the color arrangement, have been laid.

The latest in RCA phonograph equipment has been secured, including a special balcony speaker which was recently perfected to provide a more clear sound-effect in the balcony. This speaker is located behind the screen, directly above the speaker for the lower floor.

Remodel Front
The front of the show house has been entirely overhauled, a new marquee constructed above the sidewalk. A neon sign was to be hung today.

Charles Coscomb, architect, was in general charge of the renovating work; decorating was done by the Olds paint shop; a ventilating system which changes the air every ten minutes, the heating system and all plumbing was installed by W. M. Lorenz; Link River Electric company was in charge of light fixtures and wiring; concrete work was done by W. C. Ewing, contractor; and linoleum and carpets were laid by Shonts and Squires.
