IMPRESSIVE SIGHT GREET'S PRES. HOOVER

U. S. ARIZONA, March 21. (AP)—The impressive sight of two warships along the rail greeted President Hoover this morning on the third day of his vacation voyage to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The destroyer DuPont came alongside with its band playing and its crew dressed in white to give the president a greeting before it sailed. The destroyer Taylor, which turned back to Norfolk. The DuPont, detached from the United States fleet for its new duty, came northward at high speed and circled the Arizona.

President Hoover and Secretaries Hurley and Welbur accompanied Captain Freeman this morning on the rounds of his regular Saturday inspection of the upper decks. They did not venture into the lower part of the ship, where the heat was intense.

The ship awnings had been spread overnight and the presidential party sought their shade. The sea was smooth, the weather fair and the wind gentle. Although the president is combining business with pleasure in his trip it is understood he plans no commitments on future policies there.

The president is looking forward to an opportunity to visualize conditions and after his study it is possible administration policies may be reshaped, looking forward over a period of years to complete self-government.

The impression holds aboard the Arizona, the trip can be taken as presaging more direct attention to insular problems. The president will make no speeches except for brief talks in reply to greeting ceremonies. The president, after dinner last night with some newspapermen and officers he invited to eat with him, sat on the front row at an open air movie of a detective story. A thousand officers and men were packed back of him on anything they could find for seats.
