SALLIES

We may not all have the blood of the noble red man in our veins, but I think all of us are enjoying these last glorious days of Indian summer.
Have you thought that perhaps this year we have a little more in common with the "Vanishing American" than formerly, from one standpoint at least: The Indians had no money. They used a system of exchange, whereby they bartered skins of animals for arrow heads, baskets for blankets. Possibly you're in the same boat as the Indians: You have property, but no money. Take heed from the Indians and arrange to swap what you have for what you want.
Incidentally, it's heap big wisdom to use the "Exchange" columns of the Herald and News classified page to make the deal. That's free advice—and I'm no "Indian Giver."
Yours for RESULTS
SALLY.
