VITAL ISSUES AT STAKE TUESDAY

Main Paving Situation Bad

Concrete Shoulder Plan Advanced

THE advent of winter's wet streets brings up more definitely the problem created by the deplorable condition of the pavement along the sides of Main street from Third to Eighth or Ninth. Cars, driving into the rough area, splash water from the depressions far out over the sidewalk, and a condition, bad enough in dry weather, becomes much worse.

This is a situation which we should begin to think about. It must be remedied, of course, by owners of the abutting property, and for this reason one hesitates to urge expensive improvements.

Mayor Cofer has a plan which calls for construction of a concrete shoulder, eight or ten feet in width, which would extend out far enough to provide concrete base for the parking space along the street. This, he believes, would provide a permanent improvement, for it is the parking of cars in the soft asphalt that causes the present condition. The mayor believes this improvement could be made without serious charges against the property involved.

Medford Game a Good One

DISAPPOINTING to Klamath fans as was the outcome of the Klamath-Medford football game Saturday, it certainly was not a lost day at Modoc field.

Two thousand fans were there. They sat in spacious, well-arranged bleachers. They saw a fine exhibition of high school football. They saw the best team win, but by a margin of superiority close enough to make the affair a real contest throughout.

Our reaction is this: we have a fine plant, a fine team and fine coaching. And Klamath Falls is well on the way toward becoming football-minded, which is a healthy sign.

Our Building Permits

KLAMATH FALLS stood second to Portland in Oregon building permits for September, 1931, it is revealed in the survey made by S. W. Straus and company. The figures for the larger Oregon cities follow:

Albany, $700; Ashland, $2,895; Astoria, $4,980; Corvallis, $4,980; Eugene, $25,901; Klamath Falls, $33,955; LaGrande, $1,035; Marshfield, $4,485; Portland, $532,020; Salem, $32,671.

Our total, of course, is not large, but it is satisfactory in view of conditions and comparatively it is pleasing. We're getting along.

GEMS-of-PERIL

CHAPTER X. Mary had fed her starving hopes on his persistently optimistic stories. When they stopped, she felt alone as the champion of a lost cause. Mr. Jupiter was preoccupied, living withdrawn from all contacts except his daily consultation with the private detective.

That the murderer was just about to be caught. "Solution of Jupiter Murder Mystery Near," said the headlines, and "Kane Promised Quick Justice for Killer of Multi-Millionaire's wife." This sudden change of attitude amazed her.

Kane greeted her as usual. He was walking up and down, looking out the window, now and then pausing to look at her expectantly. That air of his puzzled her; it had from the beginning. He sat down opposite with an air of "Well, what have you to tell me?"

"Oh, sure," he said. "We never had a chance from the beginning. Nothing much we can do but wait." "But you kept telling the newspapers that you were about to find the murderer?" she reproached him. Disappointment made her bold. "Why did you say that, if you didn't think so?" Kane struck the newspaper contemptuously with the back of his hand.

"Oh, you've got to give 'em something to chew on," he said. "Far as I'm concerned, the case is closed. We don't know the whole story, but we know enough." "Everything that could be done has been done," Kane said. "If the jewels ever turn up—or if we find the car, we'll have positive evidence. Nothing to do but wait."

Mary suffered a feeling of vast disillusionment concerning the processes of justice and that great institution known as "the police." She had believed in "the Law" as she had believed in God, and in Inspector Kane as his prophet. And here he was, helpless, like any other mortal.

She did not realize it, but in that moment was born the great scheme that was later to take possession of her. The idea of seeking a personal vengeance on her brother's killer, who, she was sure, was Mrs. Jupiter's murderer, too, came later in all its details. But the genesis of it was right there, in the chilling discovery that in deep extremity the only one to be depended upon is one's self.

Perhaps Kane felt her criticism, for affability gave way to grievance. "Police work is not so simple as some people think, Miss Harkness," he told her. "It's hard enough at best, and when people put stumbling blocks in our way—well—if you'd been frank with us about your brother coming to the house that night, we could have had the story out of him at once—and the case settled. It's too late now. We can do nothing but let the matter drop."

Slowly the implication of his words came home to the girl. "What do you mean by that?" she asked. "You mean you think Eddie came in—and killed?" Kane looked at her keenly. "I meant only what is self-evident from the facts in the case," he said. He made a restless movement of dismissal. "I don't think we'll get anywhere thrashing this out any further, Miss Harkness. You come and see me again any time you like. If I have anything to report, I'll be glad to tell you." Mary said, "Tell me what you meant!" implacably. "Well, what do you think?" he burst out. "What are the facts?" He held up two massive fingers and ticked them off, one at a time. "Your brother had opportunity, and he had motive. What does it matter that he never did such a thing before in his life. How do you know he didn't? What do you know about him, anyway? Before she could answer, he added with an air of wisdom: "Nobody on earth knows less about it than his sister. Unless it's his mother, maybe."

"You think that Eddie killed Mrs. Jupiter?" Mary was shivering uncontrollably. She sat stiffly, fighting for self control, cold fingers gripping tightly the gloves lying in her lap. "If she chided she would make a fool of herself and this man and his stupidity must be fought with other weapons than that. While she struggled to stop the tears that squeezed out and ran wetly down the sides of her nose, Kane went on "making his case."

"Eddie had to get his hands on $15,000, and do it in a hurry. We know that much. I had those boys in, those roommates of his. One of them was in an office building. He was the one who followed the races. He used to place bets for 'clients' in the building. Eddie made a little pile and was feeling rich, so he went down to the tracks and started playing the sport. He met some 'big shots,' and the boys didn't see quite so much of him for a while. But it wasn't long before he was back. He'd got hold of the long end of a 15-to-1 shot, and he'd won it."

"It must have surprised him some when the chap, whoever he was, demanded his money. That's the trouble with a kid like that playing for big stakes. When he loses, he's like a woman—he wants to get out of it. Every man hates a welscher. Eddie knew that, and he knew more than that—if he didn't come through quick, he was going for a good beating-up, at least. They've got fenny ideas around the race tracks about taking bigger odds than you can afford to lose."

"Evidently the chap Eddie picked up was a hard cookie. Maybe he needed the money in a hurry to meet obligations of his own. Maybe he was just sore and wanted to give the kid a lesson. Anyway, he put it up to the kid to come through, or— "In desperation, Eddie went to your employer and asked for a loan. Jupiter don't like kids much, does he? Maybe he had his hands full with that wild one of his own. Anyhow he offered him a job at $35 a week learning the automobile business. You can figure out yourself how long it'd take Eddie to pay off at that rate, even providing the guy would wait."

"Me and my sister-in-law has made up again. She's leaving her children with me all next week."

Health Talks. By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN. Previous to 1927, undulant fever in man was regarded in the United States much as one would have regarded other disease casualties. During 1929, cases of the disease were recorded in every state. Unquestionably this signifies a far greater number of cases than were actually recorded because of the confirmation of the presence of the disease depends on an examination of the blood that can be made only by a competent laboratory.

Thus, Walter Simpson announces that he has investigated the case of this disease around Dayton, Ohio, during the last two and a half years. The disease is probably much more prevalent than is generally believed, and a large number of cases can be found where a special search is made for them.

In the great majority of cases seen by Dr. Simpson, the taking of raw milk containing the organism of contagious abortion of cattle was demonstrated to be the source of the infection. Undulant fever is not sufficiently fatal to arouse great fear, but it can produce long enduring illness and great distress. It resembles such diseases as typhoid fever, malaria, tuberculosis, and influenza.

Most of the laboratories of the state departments of health are now able to make the examination of the blood necessary to confirm the diagnosis. This laboratory test makes almost certain the diagnosis in any suspected case. The treatment of undulant fever involves all of the methods usual in other conditions of similar character; complete rest in bed, careful control of the symptoms by the use of proper medication, and the occasional use of specific vaccines which seem in some cases to have results. However, the disease is characterized by periods when the patient gets better and it is therefore extremely difficult to evaluate the use of any certain measure in its control.

over your face and throat. Let it harden and then remove it with cleansing cream, or if the skin is inclined to be oily, with tonic. If you have exceedingly dry skin, you can omit the lemon juice and add a teaspoon of muscle oil.

There are circulation creams on the market which are excellent emergency "bracers" when your skin looks dingy, yellowed and tired. However, you must be very careful when using them not to get any of the preparation on your nose or around your eyes. If your skin is sensitive, put a little cold cream on under the circulation cream. Don't leave it on too long after it starts to "burn."

Don't forget that a fine emergency treatment which costs nothing is a brisk walk out in the open air. And remember, that dull, yellow skin and listless eyes can often be remedied by eight hours sleep every night for a week.

Office Cat. The Silver Lining. The melancholy days are here. When autumn leaves are falling, and from the woodland, high and clear, farewell the birds are calling; But melancholy quickly flies, and dreary thoughts we're spurning. For comes the thought of pumpkin pie and sausage, too, returning.

Old Doctor (to student)—What has become of your ethics? Young Doctor—Why, didn't you know I traded it for a Hudson? Harold—I see Mac is getting a divorce on his wife's fortieth birthday. Frank—Yes, he's probably changing her for two twenties.

Ferry—Every time I see you I think of a famous scientist. Jerry—Very kind of you. Who is he? Ferry—Darwin. Well, anyhow, in the old days when families gave big dinners the best table cloth wasn't burned full of holes. . . . The other kind is that he doesn't have to pay office rent. . . . How is it possible that some men can sleep soundly all through a hard concert and yet wake up in the middle of the night if the nightwatchman happens to whistle "Rock of Ages" . . .

Food Chats. By ETHEL M. HALL. Acquiring the menu planning habit will help make meal preparation and serving a pleasure during the following weeks. It really requires less of the housemaker's time to jot down on a pad of paper the menu for a week, than to face every day the same old question: "What shall I serve my family today?" The housemaker will also find that real economy results from planned meals because left-overs are actually included, and it is possible to follow the general rule of cooking once and eating twice and three.

The following menus suggest luncheons and dinners: DINNER. Baked leg of lamb. Lettuce, fresh carrot stick salad. Potatoes. French dressing. Rolls. Butter. Buttered toast. Baked apples. Coffee.

LUNCHEON. Casserole for spaghetti (using oil). Celery. Canned peaches. Small cakes. Milk. Tea. DINNER. Lamb pie (with carrots and green peas cooked separately), dried potatoes added to diced meat (baking powder biscuit top). Cabbage salad. Baking powder biscuits. Fruit custard. Coffee.

LUNCHEON. Cheese souffle. Tomato sauce. Toast. Lettuce salad. Milk. Tea. DINNER. Meat loaf with mushroom sauce. Baked potatoes. Buttered turnips. Vegetable salad. Lemon meringue pie. Coffee. LUNCHEON. Cream of Tomato soup. Meat loaf sandwiches. Milk. Tea.

DINNER. Baked ham, split, apricot sauce. Baked sweet potatoes. Buttered celery. Head lettuce. Pineapple upside down cake. Coffee. LUNCHEON. Scrambled bacon and canned corn. Apple celery salad. Pineapple upside down cake (left over) with pineapple sauce. Milk. Tea.

DINNER. Ham cutlets (left over). Creamed potatoes. Buttered onions. Asparagus tips-Green pepper salad. French dressing. Chocolate pudding. Cream. Coffee. LUNCHEON. Crab omelet. Grated toast. Whole Wheat salad. Banana Date salad. Milk. Tea.

DINNER. Oven baked pork chops. Baked potatoes. Scalloped corn and green beans. Lettuce salad. Apple pudding. Lemon sauce. Coffee. LUNCHEON. Cream of vegetable soup (leftover vegetables). Bacon sandwiches. Pear salad. Cookies. DINNER. Beef Stew. Vegetables and dumplings. Pickles. Seven-minute cabbage. Cornmeal muffins. Apple pie. Cheese. Coffee.

Earlier Days. October 27, 1918. W. C. Dalton today loaded on the cars at Midland 299 head of steers for shipment. These were bought by the Oakland Meat company. The price paid for the animals was $75.17 each. This brings the total value of the herd to $29,316.50.

Another fine shipment of beef sent out Saturday when Louis Gerber shipped 208 head to California. These steers were shipped in from Arizona last spring, and fattened in the Horroby country. Yesterday was a great day in the history of the Christian church in this city. The largest Bible school attendance in the history of the school was recorded at 158. The motto for next Sunday is 175.

At last the powers that be hint that shooting in the city limits must cease. This hint is almost too good to be true, but if there is no mistake about it the people along the Buena Vista water front near Shippington will thank the wardens and lay aside the pieces of old smoke stack in which, during the past five years, they have crawled for safety on Sundays.

There was considerable grain harvested on the Indian reservation this year, with the greatest part of the crop coming from Modoc Point the most valuable part of the reservation. Associated with this condition there may be insomnia and even mental confusion and delirium. The very name of the disease indicates the nature of the attacks of fever, because they come and go, intermittently and undulating, lasting from weeks to months. There may be pain in the abdomen, an enlargement of the spleen, tenderness in the bones and joints, and similar conditions, indicating the extent to which the body has been affected by the infection.

Fashion Tips. When you come home from a hard day at the office or from a nerve-racking shopping tour and know that you have but a few hours until you must don an evening dress and be a gay, laughing member of a delightful party, remember that there are emergency treatments for just such a time as that.

A half hour in a bath tub of warm water, to which has been added a pinch of your favorite soothing bath salts, will do much to relax your nerves and muscles and to erase the lines around your eyes and mouth. Cleanse your face and neck thoroughly with soap and water and a good cleansing cream before you take the bath.

There are several "home" preparations which you can put on your face to erase the lines and wrinkles. You may get a prepared anti-wrinkle cream if you wish. Smooth it on generously over your face and neck after you have cleaned them. Get into the steaming bath and allow the cream to remain on your face until you get out. If you top off your bath with a cold shower, you will feel fresher and more invigorated. Warm water is best for cleanliness, but there is nothing like a cold shower rinse to "pep" you up.

Another good emergency treatment for your face is an egg wash. Beat an egg to which has been added a teaspoon of lemon juice and smooth the mixture all over your face.

Now that Boxy Gills has been fined again for getting into a brawl it would seem that even if he doesn't drink there's a kick in his punch.

Makers Of Vicks VapoRub. Score Another Advance In Home - Control Of Colds. Vicks Chemists Develop the Perfect Ally to Vicks Vapo-Rub—Introduces New Idea in Preventing Colds and Makes Possible the Vicks Plan to Reduce the Family "Colds-Tax." FREE TRIAL PACKAGES.
