Services for the late Robert D. Cheyne will be held Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Klamath Falls Elks temple with officers of the Elks lodge officiating.

Archdeacon J. Henry Thomas will officiate following the lodge ceremony.

R. E. Patterson will present two vocal solos accompanied by Mrs. Helena Joyaux at the piano. He will sing "The Old Rugged Cross" and "The Vacant Chair."

Mrs. Marjorie Olds will sing "Whispering Hope" accompanied by Harry Borel on the violin and Mrs. Joyaux at the piano.

Following the services vault entombment will be made in the family plot in Linkville cemetery under the direction of the Earl Whitlock Funeral Home.

The chamber of commerce will be closed from 2:30 o'clock until 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon out of respect to the late Mr. Cheyne and his family.

Mrs. Cheyne and daughter returned Thursday from Redding where Mr. Cheyne had been injured in an accident 12 miles north of Redding early Tuesday morning when the car in which Cheyne and Leon Crawford were riding struck a tree head-on.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford returned from Redding late Thursday evening. Mr. Crawford has not yet recovered from his injuries and is suffering from the shock of Mr. Cheyne's death.

charge. Sam Laughlin of Salem had been appointed to succeed Baile. Hoss refused to concur on this motion.

Other actions specifically ratified were the dismissal of Mrs. Leocra Kay Roberts, head of the state blind employment institution at Portland, and the consolidation of this institution with the blind school at Salem, with Walter R. Dry as head of both. Hoss concurred in this action.

The purchase of the 22 new automobiles for the state police department, which have already been delivered, was also approved. Hoss and the governor concurred in this action, with Holman casting a favorable vote today approving the negotiations, but still registering dissatisfaction with the type of car.

All other actions of the board of control, whether one-man or two-man meetings, where proxy votes were cast, were approved unanimously by the board.

To Remodel Building
Authorizing for remodeling the old administration building at the state tuberculosis hospital at Salem, was voted. Dan J. Malarky Jr., Portland architect, was elected to draw up plans and specifications for the remodeling and modernization of the structure. The building is one of the oldest institutional buildings in the state.

Secretary of State Hal E. Hoss, just before adjournment, made a statement to the board in which he said his request for an opinion as to the legality of proxy votes was not done with a view to embarrass Gov. Meier, but because as state paymaster he had to "place his finger upon the authority for every item."

The governor accepted the statement with the remark "that's all past now," but Holman demanded of Hoss why he had not raised that question years ago. "You conducted business that way under the Patterson regime, and why do you wait until the governor is ill to bring up the issue?" Hoss said proxy votes had not been a factor prior to this time, to the best of his knowledge.

The meeting was the first attended by the governor since he was taken ill August 24, and was held in Portland on his return. The governor said if this meeting was declared illegal, "we will call another one." Hoss said after the session, he had no intention of asking an opinion on the legality of today's meeting of the board.

second, to show the true purpose of these falsehoods and the people who are interested in propagating them."

The President said last night that after the investigation was made he would expect a public apology and a correction of "many of the misstatements." Earlier, the navy league had accused the chief executive of an "abysmal ignorance" of naval needs and an effort to "starve" the navy.

Condemned Man Writes Story From State Prison Chamber

Editors Note: In the following story James Kingsley, from a death cell at the state penitentiary, related part of his past life and his thoughts as he awaited execution on the gallows. He was hanged at 8:30 a. m. Friday, for the murder of Sam Prescott, Ashland, Ore., policeman.

By JAMES KINGSLEY
Written for United Press
STATE PENITENTIARY, SALEM, Ore., Oct. 30. (P)—I had my name in papers from coast to coast, headlined in many cases. I have never relished the publicity. The many purported news items have always had someone else's story other than my own until now.

Within a dozen hours my life will have been snuffed out. Visitors throng to my cell. They want to see me and talk to a man who is condemned. The paramount question so many ask me is "What would you do with your life if you were granted your wish?" I would atone for my crimes by using the mistakes I have paid so dear for, to keep others from doing them. That is the least I could do. I cannot bring life back, but I can keep someone else from taking a life.

Was Agnostic
I came within five days of hanging last April. I did a lot of serious thinking. I saw aged men around me who have been here from 19 to 25 years. I talked to some and they all say I am lucky to go out the short way. If that is the case, why not let them hang themselves? It is because they live in hope. I was at one time an agnostic.

from various sections of the state. Warden Lewis declared that Kingsley had been a model prisoner during his incarceration in the prison, and had not requested any special or unreasonable courtesies.

Refuses Faith
Kingsley refused to accept any religious faith, although Father Keenan of the Salem Catholic church, spent much of the night with the prisoner.

"I am ready to go," were Kingsley's last words to Warden Lewis, who talked with him a few minutes before the execution.

SALEM, Oct. 30. (P)—The execution of James E. Kingsley, 25, today was the first at the state penitentiary here since the double hanging of Ellsworth Kelly and James Willos more than three and half years ago. Kelly and Willos were executed for the murder of prison guards during the sensational penitentiary break in 1925.

Kingsley was sentenced to death by Judge H. D. Norton of Jackson county following his conviction of first degree murder charges for the killing of Sam Prescott, Ashland police officer. Prescott was shot and killed January 24, 1931, when he stopped Kingsley's car since the double hanging of Ellsworth Kelly and James Willos more than three and half years ago. Kelly and Willos were executed for the murder of prison guards during the sensational penitentiary break in 1925.

Governor Refuses Plea
At a speedy trial Kingsley was found guilty and sentenced on February 9 to hang April 3. On March 27, one week before the date for the execution, he was granted a stay of execution on an appeal to the Oregon supreme court. He was resented September 23 after the supreme court affirmed the lower court.

Had Long Record
During the past two weeks Kingsley addressed a communication to Governor J. L. Meier, requesting a hearing. This was granted him and last week he presented his case to Miss Beatrice Walton, secretary to the governor, who submitted his statements to the governor. Meier refused to interfere with the administration of justice.

At the time of his arrest Kingsley was a fugitive from the Colorado reformatory school, where he was sentenced September 15, 1930, on charges of grand larceny. He escaped from there October 21, of that year. Prior to that time Kingsley had served time in the Monroe reformatory in Washington for auto theft. He was sentenced July 11, 1928 for 18 months but was paroled. He had also been arrested other times at Gray's Harbor and at Seattle from 1922 to 1927.

The address of Kingsley's relatives were unknown to penitentiary officials. An uncle, Kingsley had said, was a member of the Seattle police force.

separate cell, away from the other inmates. It will be the one used by Warren Stark, a 14-year-old Everett boy, who served part of a sentence for arson here before being transferred to a reformatory.

A medical examination and mentality tests will be given him within the next few days. He will have no young playmates, only prison employees, to watch him in his daily exercise. An

HOZEL IS BURNED

FLYING PERMITS INCREASING
The commerce department has issued 4674 student pilot permits as compared with only 2334 issued last year. An increase of slightly more than 11 per cent in passenger air traffic has been reported.

SOCIAL FORCES OF COMMUNITY THOMAS' TOPIC

"Social Forces Which Mold the Community," was the subject chosen for an address presented before the Rotary club Friday by Ven. J. Henry Thomas.

"The community is a result of thought, not of mere material things," declared Archdeacon Thomas. "Communities are built up by a common unity, and all communities are indicative of the thought guiding and directing their various lives."

"There are fixed social forces in the main typical in all communities," Ven. Thomas continued, "and these are: 1. Physical. 2. Acquisition. 3. Social wants and desires. 4. Intellectual desires. 5. Moral and righteous desires. 6. Moran and righteous wants and desires."

Klamath Falls, in the past six years, has reached the fourth level, that of intellectual desire, according to Ven. Thomas. In the early years of the city's growth all forces were concentrated on the first three social planes enumerated by the speaker, namely, physical, acquisition and social wants and desires.

The speaker quoted the city libraries, schools, churches and music as examples that Klamath Falls has reached an intellectual level, and declared that only as communities become conscious of a desire for development on the higher planes are they likely to grow in these directions.

The greatest deficiency in the local community is found on the plane of morals and righteousness, according to the archdeacon, who pointed out that many men by their living ex-instructor will give him school lessons. Over the state various comment came from different persons on his sentence.

Ideas Vary
In Seattle, Judge Kenneth Mackintosh, former member of the Wickersham crime commission and one-time justice of the state supreme court, said he would undoubtedly remain a criminal and should "have been hanged."

Another point of view of the case was taken by the Rev. Father E. J. Flanagan of Omaha, Neb.

In a wire to E. J. Doyle of Astoria, one of the boy's defense counsel, he asked to be given custody of the lad.

"I feel he has never been given a chance," he wired. "Would you ask the court for clemency that this boy be given a chance now? I will take him to my home and be responsible for him."

McCully is reported to be favorable to the majority of the policies held by Chairman E. M. "Gene" Hammond and Director Sam Dehlinger. Elliott is the choice of many of the backers of J. L. Jacob and opposed to some of the policies now being followed in district affairs.

It was only a year ago that the backers of Hammond and Dehlinger secured the election of Hammond to the board and won control of district affairs.

Power Plant Issue
The bone of contention is delectable to the majority of the McCormick power site on the Klamath river, with those who were in sympathy with the former board's favorable policy wanting development as soon as possible.

The present policy of the board is to secure the site for the district from the government, and not to plan development until money is available for such a large project.

to back up the Tokyo government in its Manchurian position. The Shishi Doohikai, a social organization composed of members of the upper house of the diet, army and navy officers, scholars and merchants, passed a resolution protesting against the interference of any outside agency in negotiating a settlement with China. The resolution also advocated the retention of Japanese troops in Manchuria until the safety of Japanese lives and property is guaranteed.

The Japan justice corps, a reactionary patriotic association of 200,000 members, laid plans for a monster demonstration next Sunday. The reservists association and other organizations also are planning meetings designed to stimulate public opinion to oppose the league of nations' proposal.
