

JAPS LAUNCH GREAT DRIVE TO END FIGHT

the Japanese flank failed and the Chinese lines broke. Honjo, the dispatches said, went up to Ansoni, 15 miles south of Taitshar, crossed the Chinese Eastern railway, took over a suburban town a mile and a half outside the walled city, then moved into Taitshar.

This brought him definitely into the sphere of Russian influence and fears were expressed that Soviet Russia might be drawn into the conflict.

This battle, beginning early in the morning, took the Japanese to Taitshar—after dark, word from the front said, it was won in bitter cold weather with a wind out of the Arctic sweeping down from Siberia across the front toward Manchurian plains.

Great Offensive On Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 13.—The entire Japanese military force in the Noman river area was launched against General Ma Chao-shan's Chinese army today in a smashing offensive which the Japanese hoped would end the conflict in Manchuria.

By noon the Japanese forces had gained distinct success. The cavalry had completed an encircling movement around the Chinese right flank and the Chinese had failed in an engagement with the Japanese right flank.

The cavalry movement opened the way for an infantry attack which broke through the Chinese first line and pressed on northward despite stubborn resistance.

A bitter northerly blast swept across the battlefield out of Siberia, seriously handicapping the Japanese air attack.

Russ Attitude On Jap Move Worries

quarters today as evidence of an aggressive military spirit and contrary to the conciliatory attitude of Japanese spokesmen and their government.

While seizure of the headquarters of General Ma Chao-shan was not entirely unexpected, officials had hoped that the Japanese government would halt the advance of General Honjo's army and bring about an early retirement into the railway zone.

Inasmuch as Taitshar is on the Chinese Eastern railway, which is under joint control of China and Russia, apprehension was aroused as to possible Soviet action against the Japanese.

The news was received as 12 of the council's members were preparing for a private session. It was understood they planned to question Ambassador Tachibana of Japan closely with a view to discovering whether Tokyo's demands included those treaties which the Chinese government has declined to ratify on the ground they were imposed by military.

The Chinese view was that the Japanese propose to establish a puppet government "such as they are claiming to have set up at Mukden and Kirin. Thus the three of the ancient provincial capitals of Manchuria would, according to the Chinese, be under control of the Japanese military and the administrative control of Manchuria would be virtually complete.
