most completely covered by the drifting snow, and already dead.

There were no marks of violence, and apparently the woman had merely wandered from the ranch. No inquest will be held.

The body was found at 2:00 o'clock Thursday, and word was immediately sent to the coroner. The roads to and from the ranch were so burdened with snow that it was Friday before Coroner Osley returned to Lakeview.

Return Difficult

By the time Osley was ready to return the snow had re-covered the road, and he was forced to drive to Lakeview by the north end of Warner valley, over the Yellowstone cut-off, a distance of 110 miles.

Mrs. Barry is survived by her husband. The funeral will take place Monday at 9 a. m. in Lakeview.

BUDGET OF DISTRICT ATTORNEY EXPLAINED

Explanation of the apparent $3,050 increase in the published budget for the office of the District Attorney was made Friday. In the 1931 budget there was provided under the budget for the county judge and commissioners an item listed, legal and collection of delinquent taxes $2920. The district attorney received $5,520.10 for salaries, deputies and advertising tax collections.

District Attorney T. R. Gillenwaters took over the tax work formerly handled by an attorney hired by the county court. This year $1800 is budgeted for the legal advisor to the county court and collection of delinquent taxes. Gillenwaters handles the tax collections and the budget allows $8,070 for salaries, deputies and advertising of delinquent taxes. In addition the district attorney's office is budgeted for $1250 travel expenses and special investigator where a year ago it was $750, according to the published budget.

Considering the amount allowed a year ago for the county court under this item and the amount budgeted for the coming year there is a difference of $1120 for tax collection. Taking that amount from the increase in the district attorney's budget for the coming year there is an increase of only $1930, with an increase of $500 in travel expense expense and delinquent taxes the amount listed for salaries, deputies and advertising and collection of delinquent taxes is only $1,430 in the budget published.

MAYOR'S INTEREST GIVES NEW HOPE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21. (AP)—New hope for freedom has been given to Thomas Mooney by intervention of Mayor James Walker of New York in his behalf.

Mooney was permitted to receive a newspaperman for the first time in nearly two years today and once more the man who has served 14 years on charges of bombing the San Francisco Preparedness day parade in 1916 was cheerful.

"It is great news that Mayor Walker is coming," Mooney said. "I am hopeful that good will come of it. Maybe I'll get a hearing for the first time since I have been in San Quentin. Its been long.

"If I ever get a hearing before the governor the facts and merits of my case will free me. I am certain of that. They have denied me that right many times before, but I hope things will be right this time."

PRESSURE FELT ON STOCK MART

NEW YORK, Nov. 21, (AP)—The stock market made an unsuccessful effort to recover today from the setback of the previous session.

Rail shares led a fair rally during the first hour, but renewed pressure against U. S. steel unsettled the list later, and gains of 1 to 2 points, which had been widely registered, were lost. The close found a mixed assortment of narrow gains and losses. There were fractional recoveries from the lowest in the last few minutes.

Trading was moderately active, the turnover for the two hour session approximating 900,000 shares.

Blizzard Hits Idaho

Residents of Central and North Idaho were digging from under a blizzard that apparently swung into Montana, accompanied by temperatures as low as four degrees below zero. Although some mountain passes were piled with drifts four and five feet deep, highway crews took rotary and other plows out as soon as the wind subsided, and in most sections resumption of regular traffic was expected today.

Added to the death of two men and a woman Thursday night was the freezing of Mrs. Phil Barry, wife of a prominent Lakeview, Ore., sheepman.

Some fears were expressed for the safety of 30 road workers, last reported between Blue lake and Shuttle lake, Oregon, high in the Cascade mountains Thursday. It was pointed out, however, they probably had made some preparations against cold.

Elks Jamboree to Be Big Event At Temple on Saturday Night

Elks and their "stag" friends will herd together tonight at 9 o'clock at the Elks temple for a "smoker" and entertainment listed as a jamboree, the receipts of which will be used by the lodge in charity work. The jamboree replaces the Elks Western Nights of former years.

Wrestling, musical and stunt entertainment, a country store, cards and games are on the program and the "feed trough" will be open all evening.

Exalted Ruler Burge Mason will be master of ceremonies. Genial Jim Quinn will announce the wrestling card. Dr. L. J. Goble and L. E. Mead will be proprietors of the country store and will deal in hams and turkeys especially. Archie Rice and F. D. "Skinny" McMillan will be masters of the games and cards while George Cunning and Johnny Houston will be in charge of the entertainment.

All Elks in this section, whether members of the local lodge or not are invited to attend and expected to be present. Elks may invite their "stag" friends to the jamboree.

Roy Anderson, 180-pound former light-heavyweight champion of the world, and Roy Hill, 190, Topeka, Kansas, will wrestle in the main event on the smoker. Roland Warren, 150-pound engineer of Klamath, and Jack Renaw, 145, Salt Lake, will meet in the other match. Both will be 20-minute bouts.

The Klamath "Wranglers," Johnny Houston's quartet, and the Kiwanis chorus are listed on the entertainment program along with some other amusing features.

From the Crest hotel in San Francisco a letter arrived from Joe Bickerstaff, former matchmaker for the city boxing commission, who sends $5 for the show with best regards for its success. Joe says that many times at Tanforan track where he is employed the "best big little city in the West" is mentioned. He sends regards to his friends in the letter to McMillan.

TWO BANDITS INVOLVE 4TH MAN IN STORY

Low found $786.80, and suspicion was brought upon Wolf when he started paying up debts with bills.

Wilson and Nordstrom, according to officers, state that Wolf parked his car where the bandit car was found four miles east of Bonanza, and after the holdup brought them half way to Klamath Falls, where they hid until dark. Wolf came to Klamath Falls, returning that night and bringing the other three to a point south of this city, where they divided the money into four piles. Wolf pleaded that he needed $1500 for an oil scheme, and each of the others gave him $100 more.

Wolf had made inquiries in Klamath regarding freight rates on oil and gasoline.

Wolf was found to be the owner of a large car with a California license, the number of which was obtained by Deputy Sheriff Cy Combest the day of the holdup, and also taken by another motorist who followed the car into this city and thought there was something wrong.

Wolf's car was located near the Anchor hotel, where Wolf was later located and watched.

About 6 o'clock Friday evening the sheriff's office received a call stating Wolf was making preparations to check out of the hotel. Both Low and McMillan hurried to the hotel to investigate his departure, and to take him to the sheriff's office for further grilling.

Currency Discovered

A search was instigated at the hotel and $700 in currency and a shell fitting the gun taken from Nordstrom and Wilson at Sacramento were found. The currency was discovered under the mattress of Wolf's bed, but the suspect denied any knowledge of its presence, declaring emphatically that it had been "planted."

On the way to the jail, however, the captive began to account for the possession of the $700. He declared he had picked it up from outstanding debts owed him in the past.

Nordstrom, in his cell at the county jail, had heard Wolf's voice in conversation with the officials, and later admitted to Sheriff Low that he immediately recognized it as the voice of one of the partners in the robbery.

Partner Identified

Nordstrom asked the sheriff for the license number on Wolf's car which was a California tag, 1C1790.

"I guess you've got him, sheriff," said Nordstrom.

The sheriff then obtained a second and more complete confession from both Nordstrom and Wilson. Both men identified Wolf as their partner, but the new suspect continued to deny any knowledge of the robbery.

Nordstrom and Wilson said they first met Wolf in Sacramento the Sunday preceding the hold-up. Wolf talked to Wilson on a street corner in the California city, and propositioned him on the possibility of making a stick-up.

Wilson told him he would take the matter into consideration and then went off to consult Nordstrom. They made an appointment to meet again, and in the meantime the two young men, thinking Wolf might be an officer, began to check back on him. They looked up the registration of his car, and decided that everything was safe for the proposal.

Planned Robbery

The three began working their way north and stopped at Bieber to contemplate a robbery there. Wolf had purchased a gun in California, and because there was only one weapon in the crowd, they considered it too great a risk to pull the job.

The young men went into the Bieber bank while the older man waited outside. Both Nordstrom and Wilson, in their confession last night, said they lost their nerve.

The three moved on northward, and considered a robbery in another small town. Neither Nordstrom nor Wilson could remember its name. With only one gun in the party they considered this plot too unsafe, also.

Wolf, Nordstrom and Wilson, according to the confession of the younger men, arrived in Klamath Falls either Monday or Tuesday before the robbery — they failed to remember the exact day.

Secured Another Gun

Here they told Wolf another gun was needed, and Wolf went out and brought back a 32.20 revolver.

In planning the Bonanza robbery all three agreed it would be impossible to make a thorough job without obtaining the assistance of another accomplice. Wilson and Nordstrom went down to the Hoover camp, and picked up a man whom they identified by the name of "Slim."

In accordance with the arrangements the boys were to enter the bank and Wolf was to drive the car in the escape. Wolf wouldn't let them use his own car, and urged the boys to go out and steal one.

Car Stolen

The old abandoned car found by the authorities four miles from Bonanza after the job was completed was picked up on South Sixth street here.

Before actually making the daring attempt to rob the bank, the four, at Wolf's suggestion, took a trip out on Wednesday to look over the situation. While they were there they selected the spot where Wolf was to plant his own car, and where he was to wait for the stolen car.

After leaving the car in which they robbed the bank, Wolf brought them all back into town.

At 11 o'clock on Thursday morning Wolf picked up Nordstrom, Wilson and "Slim" just below the jungles, and drove them to Bonanza in the stolen car.

Pull Job

They pulled the job about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and changed cars about four miles beyond Bonanza. Wolf brought all three a half-mile into Klamath Falls where they all stayed out in the brush to divide the haul and to lay low until the posse had scattered or grown discouraged in the hunt.

Wolf, driving his own car, came into town and left the three others in the brush. The old man returned about 9:00 o'clock that night, and carried his partners back to Klamath Falls as far as the jungles.

They parted company there, and Nordstrom, Wilson and "Slim" walked to Merrill, a distance of 19 miles. The three boarded a south-bound freight for Sacramento in the night.

"Slim" Disappears

Nordstrom and Wilson, originally partners, stuck together and were caught when they gave themselves away in a drinking spree. "Slim" slipped out of the picture, and no clues were advanced in the confessions to indicate where he might be.

Rex McMillan, deputy sheriff, first came to suspect Wolf when he found that his car answered the description of the sedan seen fleeing down the Lakeview road after the holdup.

McMillan checked with the police and discovered Wolf had been questioned in connection with a proposed robbery in which he was to participate with a pair of negroes.

Wolf Paid Debts

After this he watched closely and when it was found that he was beginning to pay off debts he had been utterly impossible to meet before, the indication that he might have been one of the bandits grew stronger.

McMillan recognized the gun taken from Nordstrom and Wilson at Sacramento, but at first failed to place its identity. He checked back with West's second hand store, where he had first seen the gun. McMillan declared he recognized the weapon through a chip in the handle.

The proprietor of the store was called and declared he was certain Wolf was the man who purchased the revolver.

McMillan first got a line on Wolf last Monday.

Trace Second Gun

Sheriff Low said last night he would check up on the purchase of the second gun in California to strengthen the chain of circumstances around Wolf.

According to Nordstrom and Wilson, Wolf had said he was without funds, and had been almost penniless for months. He told them he needed the money badly, and would go to any means to get it.

Although Wolf denied the confessions of the younger man, and completely discounted the story weaving itself about him, the boys are just as certain of the truth of their statements.

Sacks Matched

John Horn, cashier at the Bank of Bonanza, shortly after the holdup described the sacks used by the bandits in carrying away the money. Horn said they were like pillow cases, and the pillow cases in Wolf's room checked the description thoroughly. Nordstrom and Wilson also identified the bags.

Wolf told Sheriff Low he had a family in California and that two of his sons were moderately well-to-do, and would fight the case for him.

He had been employed by Walker and Hovey Lumber company last summer at Macdoel.

The confessions of Nordstrom and Wilson were taken separately, and both tallied perfectly, according to the sheriff.

The $700 in currency will be traced at the Bank of Bonanza today.

Sportsmen Will Nominate Monday Night at Meeting

The Klamath Sportsman's association will meet at the chamber of commerce Monday evening at 8 o'clock to nominate officers for the association for the coming year, President O. D. Mathews announced Saturday.

A discussion of the Upper Klamath lake bird and deer reserve will be held during the meeting and H. M. Worcester, federal game protector at Tule Lake sanctuary, and L. J. Goldman of the U. S. biological survey in the research department will speak.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21, (AP)—Japanese troops will be withdrawn "shortly" from the region of Taitsihar, Ambassador Debuchi of Japan told Secretary Stimson today at the direction of Tokyo.

Debuchi said some troops have already been withdrawn to Chenchatang and the others will be removed southward "in due course."

The ambassador had a 45 minutes conversation with the secretary on the general situation.

The diplomat reported he did not consider that the Soviet was disturbed over the Manchurian situation.

The Chinese Eastern Railway, Debuchi said, in which the Soviet has an interest, has been undamaged. The Soviet elements as a possible active factor in the Chinese-Japanese troubles, had caused considerable concern at the state department.
