Making This A Tough Spot

NO QUARTER FOR THE MARAUDERS

Our Relief Needs Presented

Our Reputation Is Important

THE Bonanza bank robbery, the slaying of an Ashland policeman, the wounding of a man at Florence, and a number of similar reports from Oregon points indicate the growing menace to life and property in the presence in the state of large numbers of transients.

In Klamath Falls, a sensible effort has been made to give the transients shelter and food for a brief period and hustle them on their way. Having gone this far, the Klamath Falls police department is justified in adopting a "shoot first" policy whenever marauders are found molesting property.

Machine Age On Klamath Farm

HOW far the machine age has taken modern conveniences to the farm, both for work and for better living conditions, is indicated in a federal census report just announced. This report shows that in Oregon there are 47,440 automobiles on farms, 26,557 telephones, 24,265 farmhouses with water piping.

The report comes closer home, showing that Klamath county farms boast 385 telephones, 491 farmhouses lighted with electricity, and 336 farms with water piped to the dwelling.

In Klamath county, automobiles recorded on the farm census rolls number 1,161; motor trucks, 360; tractors, 222; electric motors, 380, and gas engines, 324.

Modern farm methods and conveniences, obviously, are not restricted to the occasional "big fellow."

It's not too soon to be thinking about the yearly "mail early" warning.

GEMS of PERIL

CHAPTER XXXII The tall young man stood shyly turning his huge Panama hat in his big sunburned hands, and looking down at Mary with ill-concealed interest.

He spoke in a soft, southern voice that was somehow reassuring. "Miss Jupiter sent me to fetch you," he said. "He's waiting out at the Hilltop Inn and he cert'ly is mighty anxious to see you!"

His half-embarrassed grin was boyish and ingratiating, and Mary found herself smiling back and ready to go with him, before she thought to ask, "Which Mr. Jupiter?"

"I don't know that, ma'am," the young man responded respectfully. "He never said. Just Miss Jupiter, ma'am, was all he told me."

"Young or old?" Mary asked. "Describe him," she said. "You see, he has a son. Was there anybody with him? Did he give you any idea what he wanted to see me about?"

Unconsciously she had begun to adopt Bowen's kidding attitude—somehow it made things easier. Reluctantly she gave up, in fact, a broad screen veranda on which were bare wooden tables and chairs. At one of these, before she climbed out of the car, Mary caught sight of the stout, white-haired, but slightly wilted figure of old Mr. Jupiter, impatiently mopping his brow. What a joyful relief that it was he!

The young man toiled his car into the sideyard and helped her alight. Even as he greeted her, Mr. Jupiter rapped on the screen and called out, "Don't go 'way there, son! I got another errand for you in a little while!"

The young man added, got out and went on to the soda stand, and climbed indolently upon a stool, prepared to wait. He was well out of hearing. "It's all-fired hot to bring you all the way out here, Mary," the old man apologized, "but I got some things on my mind that I've just naturally got to talk over with you. Don't seem as if we get much chance lately."

This was putting it mildly, Mary thought. "Where are the others?" "I told 'em to let me out and go on," he said, his damp brow. "I've had about enough of this Florida climate for one day. But that wasn't it. I wanted to get back to town and have a word with you. We stopped this here feller going in the opposite direction, and he said he'd take me back to the hotel, so they went on—Bruce and Bates and—her."

"However, I changed my mind soon as I got out of their hearing and made him stop here, instead. Be just like Bruce to turn around and go back to the hotel to make certain nobody was taking the gold filling out of my teeth while I wasn't looking. I didn't want to be interrupted."

"Now, here's the first thing: you know anything about that De Loma chap that we met last night?" "Plenty," Mary said, grimly. "Why?" "You don't have to tell me he's a had one," the old man growled. "I ain't lived to be nearly 70 without knowing a rotten egg when I smell one. You know what I think. It wouldn't surprise me none if De Loma wasn't the guy we're looking for!"

Valid Claims Put Forth

COUNTY JUDGE FRED R. GODDARD will leave for Salem Sunday to confer with state highway officials in an endeavor to obtain additional appropriation for unemployment relief in Klamath county.

The plea of the county for a larger portion of the fund is valid. At present Klamath county receives $3,240 a month from the highway fund for this work, while the governor's committee argues that on the basis of highway mileage this county deserves one-seventh of the fund, or $15,000. The committee presents a reasonable argument that the relief needs of Klamath county have been under-estimated.

Klamath county is not asking for more than its share of the funds available. But it is asking that its full need be recognized, and apportionment made on the basis of such recognition.

Klamath Building Figures Cited

KLAMATH FALLS' moderate but steady construction activity continues to show up well in comparison with building programs in other Oregon cities and the Northwest as a whole. The Straus report for October again shows Klamath Falls leading the smaller cities of Oregon in building permits.

The total of $34,640 was slightly larger than the September figure for Klamath Falls.

the old man, so highly did he esteem the man's mechanical genius. "Well, I says to Tom," Jupiter went on, "this here's to be your car to fool with. Take it when ever you've got the time, and tricks with it. Give it every test you can think of, just as if you was buying a car for yourself. I want to know just what you think of that car when you're done with it. Take it apart, if you want to, though I know what's inside, and so do you. Eat with it, sleep with it, get to know that Lorimer car as well as you know the Jupiter car. And when you've got an idea about the two makes of car, come to me and tell me where the difference is."

"Well, Tom, he's just like a kid with a clock to take apart. You never saw a happier man. Only—here's what I didn't know till just now—today, in fact—what Tom went and did was buy a second-hand car and pocket the difference!"

"Yeah, that's Tom. He's a little on the sly order. Instead of paying the full price for a new Lorimer, Tom began watching for bargains. A few days ago he found what he wanted—a car that looked brand new—turned back to the dealer after it hadn't been driven more than a couple of thousand miles—and not a scratch. Yes, there was a dent in the left front fender, but Tom took it down to the factory and got it ironed out and painted over. Nobody would notice—and it gave Tom a $1000 cut in price. He says not, but I know—I know the price of cars. Well—"

"Anyhow, I sent for Tom to drive down here. Don't know as I mentioned it. Don't like riding round in rented cars with these wild drivers. Feel better with Tom at the wheel. Well, he got here last night, and this morning, when he brought the car around to take a look, what was it but the Lorimer? I gave him the devil for it. I said: 'Tom, you know I don't want to be seen in that car! But it seems he never thought. When I said 'Drive down,' he thought what a chance it would be to try out his new plaything on a long drive, and the change in climate, and all, so off he runs in it."

"Well, I rode out in it this morning. Nobody likely to see me down here, nobody that knows me, that is. 'Sitting back there with nobody to talk to but the Loma, I got to looking at the finish, the pecking the upholstery, and so on, and look what I found!"

He held out a folded sheet of paper, his hand trembled until it was hard for her to seize it.

"Mary, I don't know if you remember the familiar handwriting: 'I. O. U. $15,000 Edward Harkness, Junior.' 'Take it easy, now. Don't get upset,' Jupiter warned her as the whiteness of her face began to frighten him. She pulled herself together."

"How did this get in the car, I wonder?" she asked, levelly—holding the sheet of paper which was like a message from Eddie himself.

"Well—it was a second-hand car. Looks like it might be the car that The Fly used coming and going, and maybe later on the one that ran your brother down," Jupiter offered.

"Tom swears there's been nobody in this back seat till this morning," he went on to Jupiter. "Tom, no harm in my telling you, I'll say that fer him."

When they got back to town, driven by the obliging young man in whose pocket now rested the first $50 bill he had ever seen, none of the motoring party had returned. Not until she entered the lobby did it enter Mary's mind that she had not telephoned Bowen.

Hastily she called the number he had given her, but he was not there. No one knew whether he had been there or how long ago that there he was—he has the audacity to eat—and drink—and—breathe—oh!"

"He is The Fly," she said. "We're as sure of it as we can possibly be. I've been wanting to tell you—and afraid of it. It's awful, when you think about it—that there he sits—he has the audacity to eat—and drink—and—breathe—oh!"

"You know," he began, "or rather you don't know, because they don't anybody know but just me and one or two others, that there's a Lorimer car belongs to me."

Mary's eyes widened at this revelation. It was the very thing she wanted most to know about, but she had choked on the question whenever opportunity arose to ask it.

"I had Tom buy it for me. I kept it secret. Bound to be talk if I bought any car not put out by the Jupiter Motor company, and I thought it was just as well not to let the Lorimer people be able to say I had by one of their cars to get any place. "But the fact is," he hesitated, and Mary fairly twitched with impatience, "the fact is—now, you keep this to yourself, Mary—but the Lorimer car is a darn good car, and it's been cutting into our sales to the point where it's not funny anymore. Now, I know all about the Lorimer car. They haven't got so much as a washer on it that we haven't got, or can't put, on a Jupiter. But I'm damned if a lot of people don't prefer it to the Jupiter. Now why?"

"I says to myself, 'I'm going to find out. So I gave Tom $500 cash to buy a brand new Lorimer. You've heard me say Tom's the best mechanic alive, and he is. That's why I keep him. He isn't trustworthy in all ways—I've found that out. But I'd rather have him on my car than some honest lunkhead. And if he wasn't lacking somewhere he'd be down at the plant getting $20,000 a year, instead of wearing my liver and sleeping over a garage. Breathless as she was with eagerness for him to get on to the point of the story, Mary could not help recognizing that the faults of Tom were a real heartache to method has not been considered as yet a suitable method for routine use. This should not, however, interfere with the prompt administration of Pasteur treatment to any human being who might have been bitten by a dog even suspected of rabies. It is known that flies spread disease. Hence preventive medicine is concerned with the control of flies, insects and similar parasites. Preventive medicine is also concerned with the question of narcotic addiction and the production of disease by the use of drugs of various types. Attempts to control such conditions are made through legal control of the drugs which may cause harm. Authorities in the field of preventive medicine urge periodic physical examination for detecting disease in its early stages and thereby make it possible to bring the disease under control. Many diseases are associated with occupation. Hence employers are told about the possible dangers which may exist in the industry and means are provided for prevention of disease.

1/2 cup pure apple butter; 3/4 cup vanilla cream; chopped nuts. Whip cream and fold in apple butter. Spread each wafer with this mixture, placing one on top of another, until all the wafers are used. Cover outside of the roll with cream mixture, sprinkle with chopped nuts and place in refrigerator for about three hours. Cut in diagonal slices and serve. Creole Pork One small can cream of tomato soup; 1 small can cooked spaghetti; 1 pound ground raw pork; 1 tablespoon butter; 2 onions; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1/4 pound grated cheese; 1/2 cup grated crumbs. Chop onions fine and cook with ground pork until brown. Drain off excess fat and add cooked spaghetti, cream of tomato soup and cheese. Turn in crumbs and butter. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven—350 degrees F.

Food Chats

The lament "I am entirely out of ideas and feel as though I never could plan another meal!" is a common one among housewives. Making out the menu often seems more difficult than the actual preparation of the food. It is no wonder when we stop to realize the number of meals that must be prepared day after day for the family that has many likes and dislikes in food to be considered. Ethel M. Hall in order to help you with the perplexing problem, "what to have for dinner tonight!" these dinner menus for three dinners have been carefully worked out. Each dinner is well balanced, moderate in cost and planned to include the fruits and vegetables now in the market—often for Oven Baked Sausages Kidney Beans Browned Potatoes Apple Sauce Cold Slaw Chilled Fruit Cup Cookies Coffee

Chill Cow Carne One tablespoon butter; 1 pound ground beef; 1 onion; 1/2 teaspoon chili powder; 1 medium can oven baked red kidney beans; 1 small can cream of tomato soup; 1 teaspoon salt.

Brown beef in skillet with butter and chopped onion. Add oven baked kidney beans and stir several minutes. Pour over this the cream of tomato soup and add salt and chili powder. Simmer for 15 to 25 minutes. The chili powder may be omitted if desired, and a dash of pepper substituted. Serve with baked potatoes.

Molded Supper Salad One and one-half tablespoons gelatin; 1/2 cup cold water; 1-3 cup boiling water; three tablespoons pure vinegar; 2 tablespoons lemon juice; 1-3 cup sugar; 1 teaspoon salt; 1 cup diced celery; 1 cup shredded cabbage; 1 cup cooked peas.

Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes and dissolve in boiling water. Add vinegar, lemon juice, sugar, salt and vegetables and mix thoroughly. Turn into a ring mold which has been dipped in cold water and chill. Remove from mold to salad plate, fill center with crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise salad dressing. Apple Butter One-half pint whipping cream;

Earlier Days

November 21, 1913 At a meeting of interested people last night, there was formed the Oregon and Nevada Mining company, which was recently incorporated for $1,000,000 under the laws of Nevada. The main office of the company will be at Reno, and the branch office here. The following directors were elected: O. W. Robertson, Charles Graves, A. L. Leavitt, Fred Houston and J. J. Keller.

Monday, November 22, the qualified electors will be called upon to say whether or not Klamath Falls shall have a city hall and jail properly equipped.

Miss Jeannet Marter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harter, was awarded the silver medal by the judges at last night's Silver Medal Contest held by the Merrill branch, Women's Christian Temperance Union.

A thorough investigation of the affairs of the Oregon Inland Development company, which placed on the market Orindale Addition to Klamath Falls, is being made by the federal district court at Portland. The promoters are being tried on charges of using the mails to defraud.

A dance and social will be given at Mallin Saturday night under the auspices of the Sokal Verein. The event promises to be well attended, a number of Merrilites are planning to be present.

Fashion Tips

Choose your cosmetics to complement your "type." Every one of us has a particular style of beauty which is original within ourselves and it should be "played up" in our makeup, coiffure, perfume and clothes. The small, naive type of woman should realize that her chief charm lies in being unsophisticated and innocently lovely. She should never strive for "dash" or exotic clothes and makeup. If you belong to this type, make the most of it! Dress your hair softly and becomingly around your face. Never pull it back into a tight knot—curls may be fascinating at the back of your neck. Very light powder, or even white, will be flattering and pinkish rouge and lipstick is usually best if you are blond. If you are a petite brunette, if you will, of course, use darker powder and rouge than a blonde but carry out the same ideas of unsophisticated charm. Perfume should be delicate single flower scents. Leave the heavy amber-scented odors to the types which are your opposites. There is the fresh out-door type of woman who is always full of vitality and who lends an air of healthy, normal, well-being to any room she enters. If you belong to that type, don't draw yourself in frilly, fussy clothes. You don't have to be strictly tailored but your natural charm will be enhanced if you stick to simple things. Your makeup should be light and never over-done. You probably won't need to do a thing with your eyes—why use eye-shadow and mascara if there is a healthy gleam in them anyway?

If you are a Spanish brunette or any other truly sophisticated type, don't wear too many sports clothes and remember that you can "get away" with a heavy, exotic perfume, so why not? As long as your cosmetics are the most becoming textures and shades and are applied correctly, you can use more makeup than any other type. However, every often it is fascinating to wear only powder, lipstick and eye-shadow, omitting the rouge.

Everyone belongs to some type. It may not be very definite and you may have to ponder for months trying to decide to just what type you belong, but when you do decide, stick to it! It's much more fun, and certainly more interesting, to be one thing rather than a pleasant but indefinite mixture!

Today's Recipes

There comes a time toward the end of the season when gardens and markets are filled with the odd and odds of the summer's crop. The individual garden may not yield enough of any one vegetable or fruit to warrant canning, but a variety of delicious soups, salad mixtures, relishes, chutneys and preserves may be made by combining the odds of some crops with the ends of others.

If thought is given to the predominating taste desired, almost any combination of vegetables may be used for certain purposes. Other uses require a careful study of flavors if satisfactory results are achieved.

An excellent soup mixture is made by filling a jar with layers of all of the vegetables available. Late peas, beans, carrots, corn, celery, tomatoes, okra and onions, turnips, cauliflower and cabbage can be used in countless combinations. The mixture is canned according to the usual hot-pack method, processing the cans for the period required by the vegetable needing the longest time. These soup mixtures are most convenient to have on hand for winter use. The following rule can be varied to suit your own garden.

Soup Mixture One cup small lima or green beans cut in small pieces, 1 cup diced celery, 1 cup corn, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 small onion minced, 1 sweet green pepper minced, 4 cups diced tomatoes, 2 teaspoons salt. 1 tablespoon minced parsley.

Prepare vegetables as for the table. The corn is cut from the cob, the tomatoes peeled and cut into sizes suitable for use in a vegetable soup. Combine and bring to the boiling point. Add salt and herbs for five minutes. Pack in sterilized jars, half seal and process in hot water bath for three hours or under ten pounds pressure for one hour.

Salad mixtures are canned in slightly sweetened vinegar. The vegetables are freshly and delicious when served in the winter with a plain French or mayonnaise dressing. Lima beans, small uncut string beans, carrots, red and green peppers, silver onions and cucumbers are particularly good for this purpose. With the exception of cucumbers which should be soaked over night in a salt solution, the vegetables are prepared as for canning. When vegetables are ready, pack them in sterilized jars and pour over a solution of the summer's crop. The individual garden may not yield enough of any one vegetable or fruit to warrant canning, but a variety of delicious soups, salad mixtures, relishes, chutneys and preserves may be made by combining the odds of some crops with the ends of others.

Klamath Names

CRYSTAL (From "Oregon Geographical Names" by Lewis A. McClure.) This name was originally applied to a fine clear stream flowing into Upper Klamath Lake near Pelican Bay. In 1925, Postmaster S. A. Brown reports that he thinks the stream was named in 1821 by G. W. Matthews and John Young, Crystal, as the name of the office was proposed by the first postmaster, D. G. Brown, in 1822, when it was established through his efforts.

SALESMAN ONCE GRAYHAIRED USES LEA'S TONIC--LOOKS YOUNG AGAIN

Marvelous Change Shown by Photos, Before and After Using a Famous Hair Tonic THOUSANDS BANISH GRAY HAIR THIS WAY "I started getting gray at twenty years of age and finally became so gray people often called me the gray haired chap, when they didn't know my name. It actually was a handicap as a salesman and made it hard to land a new job. Every body said I looked ten or fifteen years older than my real age, but I swore I would never use a dye. Finally three years ago some friends of mine began using Lea's Hair Tonic and I was amazed the way it worked for them. They urged me to begin using it too which I did. Gradually day by day my hair began changing back to its youthful color. Just like magic, it changed until folks who hadn't seen me for several months hardly could believe their eyes. I've since assessed the good word along to scores of gray haired friends. It is safe and easy to use and gives a natural youthful appearance to the hair that is great. I'm sending a photo taken of me when I was real gray and one taken afterward and you can see for yourself," writes W. W. Atkinson, Salesman, 8106 S. Hoover St., Los Angeles, Calif. The results Mr. Atkinson obtained can be equaled by anyone it seems in the easiest sort of a way at home. Just a drop on the finger tip, rubbed into the scalp here and there each evening begins stimulating the circulation and day by day notices a delightful change. Once the scalp is rid of dandruff—hair is growing vigorously and gray is gone,—just an occasional application each week or so keeps the scalp and hair in best condition, no matter how old one may be. Made by the nationally known Lea Tonic Co. it is sold by drug lists most everywhere now, $1. per bottle on positive guarantee that money will be refunded if results are not satisfactory. If your own druggist hasn't Lea's Hair Tonic send dollar bill, check, stamps or money order to Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood Md. For bottle return mail postage paid.
