

Editorials □ News of Other Days □ Place Names □ Women's Features

Spotlight on Auto Deaths

MUCH WRITTEN ABOUT 1931 RECORD

Factor in Business Upturn

Appeal Sounded Where Needed

If written words bear any weight, 1932 should be a safer year for automobile drivers and for pedestrians.

It is agreed that the causes of most automobile accidents lie with the drivers, themselves. It follows, therefore, that with the drivers lies the choice that will lead away from such a record as that for the year 1931, so widely and wordily deplored.

Furthermore, the best way, and virtually the only way to reach that driving public is through the newspapers and the magazines. The tens of thousands of words that are being written, therefore, are directed at the very source of the situation which they deplore.

While the driving attitude of the public is the greatest fundamental factor in highway hazards, there are other, and important ones, to be considered. An American road-builders association, meeting in Detroit the other day, reached the conclusion that the motoring public has no intention of slowing down, and that eventually the highway engineers must build fool-proof roads.

If these improvements are made on public highways it will be the result of a strong public opinion. If they are essential to eliminating the mounting toll of automobile deaths, public opinion will ultimately demand them. No small factor in influencing that opinion will be the press, so those who are writing lengthy diatribes about the automobile accident records, still are sounding their appeals where they will do the most good.

Railroads Look Ahead

The railroads, which aren't beaten yet by a long shot, are considering a door-to-door delivery of passengers. They have, most of them, had door-to-door deliveries of merchandise for some time.

Under the new plan, you buy your ticket and a car picks you up at your home, delivers you to the depot, at the other end another car takes you from the depot to your home-destination or hotel. There is a small extra charge for the service.

If this plan goes into effect, it will enable the roads to get back some of the business they have lost to the bus and the plane.—News-Telegram.

JERRY and JOAN

By Cleo Lucas

CHAPTER XXXII

"You mean—" Joan stopped. Jerry stood there, fumbling with the shirt he had taken out of the drawer.

"You mean you're going away?"

Jerry nodded.

"You're going to leave me?"

"They were looking at each other now, tensely. Each wondered what the other was thinking."

Jerry nodded again slowly. "Oh, Jerry."

Joan came over to him. She was shaking all over.

Jerry dropped the shirt and caught her to him.

"Joan, you don't want me to leave you, do you? Tell me. If you do, I'll go. I thought it was the only decent thing there was left for me to do. I didn't want to go, honest to God, I didn't. But I didn't have the guts to ask you to forgive me this time."

Joan was crying.

"I'd die without you, honey, I'd die. It doesn't seem to matter how much you hurt me, I keep on loving you just the same."

"Oh, God! Jo, I don't know why I've been so dumb. Just a darn fool. I'm willing to admit it. Sometimes I think I must be off my nut, things don't seem real to me. I don't know how to act, I get caught somehow, caught with myself."

Joan ran her hand through his dark curls.

"I know, honey, I know, honest I do. Let's not talk about it."

Jerry kissed her lovingly.

"Shall we go to bed, honey?" he asked tremulously. He thought in his heart that God was good to him to let him have Joan.

"Yes."

"In your bed?"

When they slept together they always slept in Joan's bed. Because her bed was sweeter, Jerry had told her, on account of her having slept in it.

Joan put on her pajamas and then went out in the living room to see if Jerry had locked the door. He forgot it so often. She picked up some of the glasses and took them out into the kitchen. Then she decided to wash them. She didn't want them there in the morning to remind her.

Jerry had been so quiet. She wondered what he was doing.

She tiptoed to the bedroom door and peered in.

Jerry was sitting on the bed, his head bent over. Joan's little china clock in his hands. On the coverlet beside him were the broken bits of glass that he had picked up from the floor.

Joan was over beside him.

He laid the clock down and drew her to him.

She felt his eyelashes wet against her cheek.

"I think it can be mended, honey," he said.

Jerry felt guilty calling to see whether or not Joan was in. If she were, of course, it would be all right. He could put off his meeting with Claire until tomorrow. But Claire pestered him so much. Damn it all. Why did she have to leave that wrap in the first place? And why did she have to have it now? Couldn't she wear her coat? She had threatened to grab a cab and get it herself if he didn't bring it down right away. That would never do. Hence he was calling Joan and hoping she was not there. The operator rang several times without getting an answer and Jerry decided that it was perfectly safe to grab a cab and go out to the apartment.

There was something missing in the way he felt toward Claire when he met her later that evening in her suite at the Blinnrock. He was glad, whatever it was, that it was missing.

Claire came over to him and took the wrap.

"Why haven't you called me before now?"

He wondered why women didn't know that the reason a man didn't call them was that he didn't want to call them.

"Why haven't you been over?" she went on.

"I'm not coming any more, Claire."

Jerry said that very definitely. Claire turned up one corner of her mouth.

"I suppose the wife is laying down the law."

Jerry thought, "How nasty women can be about other women."

He said, "No, she didn't say anything. I just don't want to come. That's all."

"I needed the wrap."

"I'm sorry."

Claire walked over to the table and poured out a drink. She held it up to him.

"It's good Scotch," she said. He took it quickly.

(To Be Continued)

Klamath Names

ODELL CREEK (From "Oregon Geographic Names" by Lewis A. McArthur.) Odell creek is the name applied to the outlet of Odell lake. The stream flows into Davis lake. For many years there was considerable confusion about the names of the streams in the Upper Klamath river drainage basin. A committee of forest service officials codified the names, and the term Odell creek was chosen to indicate this stream. It has come into universal use.

How to Reduce Colds and Their Costs This Winter

One of Family's Biggest Problems Met With Vick "Control-of-Colds" Plan

Actual Test of the Plan Is Offered By Local Druggists On a Trial Guarantee.

To most families this winter, the high costs of colds are an extra burden. Loss of time, health and money are involved. To reduce the drain of this burdensome family "Cold-Tax" is the purpose of the Vick Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" — to lessen their number, severity and duration.

Plan Follows New Discovery The Vick Plan is made possible with Vick's Nose & Throat Drops. Based on a new idea for "preventing" colds, this new Vick discovery is companion to Vick's VapoRub, the modern way of "treating" colds. Each aids and supplements the other for better "Control-of-Colds."

1.—Before a Cold Starts Watch yourself whenever you have been exposed to anything that you know is apt to give you a cold, such as—

Contact with others having fresh colds—crows, stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, public places—a night on a Pullman or a dusty automobile ride—sudden changes in temperature—inhaling smoke, dust, gas—excesses in living, such as over-eating, smoking or drinking, which reduce body resistance—after a hard day when you are over tired.

Then—if you feel that stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages, Nature's usual signal that a cold is coming on—use

Earlier Days

January 19, 1914

That work is to be started this spring, extending the Oregon Trunk from Bend to a connection with the Klamath end of the Klamath-Natron cut-off is a rumor that is going the rounds of Crook county and Klamath county. So far it has not been refuted.

Fish expert A. J. Sprague came in last night from Portland on his return from Denver and Salt Lake to secure trout for Oregon waters. He leaves tomorrow for Spencer Creek, to join Deputy Game Warden Ramsby and Stout in preparing the hatchery there for receiving the eggs.

A gathering of the faithful will be held in the rear of the Palm Cigar store Sunday afternoon to discuss the baseball situation for the coming season, and to devise ways and means of raising a sum sufficient to equip the team with uniforms, purchase halls, bats, etc.

One of the most enjoyable affairs religious or otherwise, ever given in this city was started last night in the commodious banquet room of the Grace Methodist church, when the Fathers and Sons banquet was held.

Ye scribe advises people living in this community to be careful about being belated at night. Either carry your headgear in your hand or have it securely fastened by a good string, especially when the wind is blowing a gale. We know of a certain party who mourns the loss of a good sombrero because of the violent winds.

Fashion Tips

Modern specialists recommend beauty masks for modern ladies' faces.

As a matter of fact, the oldest beauty remedies known are beauty masks. They, like many of the masks of today, were compounded of herbs, oils and clay.

No ancient beauty, however, possibly could need the refreshing aid of a beauty mask the way the hectic modern woman does.

If you are going somewhere, and want to look top-notch, try out this type of beauty mask. You can buy masks all ready to apply, with directions. Or you can make your own, which takes more time and trouble but likewise has more interest for you.

The simplest mask you can concoct is the egg face mask. Break the freshest egg you can get, sep-

A Mother's Recommendation

Darrington, Wash. — "One and a half years ago, I was very thin and felt bad all the time," said Mrs. Annie Mae Emory. "The doctor said I could never have a baby, but a friend told me of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I began taking them and now I have a fine baby. He was so strong he walked at 11 months—is the joy of our lives, and I never felt better in my life."

Every package of Dr. Pierce's medicine contains a symptom blank. Fill it out and mail to Dr. Pierce's Clinic Dept., 255 1st St., N. Y. for free advice. Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Prescription

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. © 1932 BY NEA SERVICE, INC. "So you see, it's the farmer who's making us suffer."

arate the white and yolk, beat the white up slightly and apply it thickly all over your face and neck, using upward strokes. A little brush is the best thing to apply it with. If you have some white of egg left, give your face a second coat when the first one dries.

Now use your brush and paint your face and neck with the yolk of egg. Lie down the minute this is applied and go to sleep for an hour, or rest for an hour, whether you sleep or not.

At the end of that time take a soft piece of linen or wash cloth, dip it in water that is almost hot, and sponge it off. Slap on some of your most fragrant and rich nourishing cream and go over your face and neck with it. When you wipe that off, you are ready to face the world with a light heart. For your face will be so refreshed you just can't help feeling happy to see yourself looking so well.

We Observe—

Remodeling operations are in progress on K. Sugarman's store at the corner of Sixth and Main. The merchant friend who "ain't mad at nobody" will have a new store front that will be thoroughly modern and a credit to the community.

Some People Say—

Being broke is one of the stepping stones to success.—Albert Payson Terhune, author.

The attitude of congress toward debts is like that of a man who in a continuous poker game who feels he is a stronger player if he begins to play with last night's 10's in his pocket than he would be if he had torn them up.—Senator Moses of New Hampshire.

If all those who just happened not to suffer this year would just be friendly and neighborly with all those who just happened to have had luck, we'll all get along together.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover. After all, we can't control love.—Dorothy Lee, movie actress.

Ask any teacher of cooking which one she uses —and ask her why Schilling

Advertisement for K. Sugarman's remodeling event, featuring 'All Prices Greatly Reduced' and 'The Inside Entrance Opens On Genuine Bargains—Use It.' Includes the slogan 'I Ain't Mad At Nobody'.

Large advertisement for Lucky Strike Cigarettes featuring a portrait of Mary Astor and the slogan 'I play safe by sticking to LUCKIES'. Includes text: 'It's toasted', 'Your Throat Protection—against irritation—against cough', and 'TUNE IN ON LUCKY STRIKE—60 modern minutes with the world's finest dance orchestras and Walter Winchell, whose gossip of today becomes the news of tomorrow, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening over N. B. C. networks.'