Japan Rises to High Place in 75 Years, Has All But Foreign Trade

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of six timely stories on Japan of today, and the island empire's amazingly rapid rise from a primitive land to a first-class world power in the short span of 10-odd years.

By ROBERT TALLEY

NEA Service Writer. (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.

A CROSS the map of the Orient falls the menacing shadow of a race of little brown men—the Japanese. There are about 60,000,000 of them in Japan proper. On the average they are only five feet three inches tall. They have almond-shaped eyes, coarse black hair and very little, if any, beards. About 220,000 are Christians-the rest are mostly Buddhists or Shinto ancestor-worshipers. Theirs is an island empire, corland corresponds to Europe. They are progressive, aggressive, smart, well educated and inspired with a pride of race that becomes a mi-fanatical form of patriotism. The teachings of centuries have made them so. made them so.

They have the third largest nay in the world, being excelled only by England and America. They have one of the largest and best equipped armies in the world. Their industrial system is a marvet, their great merchant fleets sail every see, their railroads carry a large part of Asia's commerce, their mills and facturies are as modern—and as cturies are as modern—and as tensive—as any in the world. They have everything that any tion could want, except one nation could want, except one thing: Foreign trade. They must have foreign trade to live. Without it they will starve. No matter what the cost, starve. No matter what the cost, this island empire of commerce and industry must have sources of raw material for its factories and forsign markets as an outlet for the good it makes.

True, the choice part of this island empire is arowded, but there is still lots of room in the underwiced historiands. It draws from feeds on and sells to the cast, weak land that is China. The Chinese fearful of being gobbled up by this modern and aggressive little neighbor, declared an economic boycott against Japan's goods. That act cut at the very lifebleod of (Continued on Page Three)
