PUBLIC WORKS BARS ERECTED AT U.S. CAPITAL

With the bars going up against further submission of public works projects, Klamath county finds itself with one major job, the armory, approved and a mature application filed for the Southern Oregon Railroad company (Bonanza railroad). It is understood the new ruling against submission of applications carries with it the implication that projects already proposed even though tentatively will still be considered. The city works proposal is thought to come under such a head.

The Southern Oregon Railroad company involves a proposed expenditure of $278,607.00 a total of $399,607.

The railroad application was filed at the state public works office in Portland several weeks ago, where it has been under examination by the State Engineer C. C. Hockley. It was announced February 14 by a representative of the company that adjustments had been completed, and the application was in readiness for submission to the state advisory board.

Taps Timber Belt
The Bonanza railroad construction has been pending for several years. It will tap a large body of timber east of Bonanza where the Walker-Hovey interests have extensive holdings of timber. There also are several hundred million feet in this territory owned by small holders, and in forest reserve. The proposed railroad will be approximately 18 miles long and serve the Bonanza and Langell valley farming area, much of it irrigated and in a high state of cultivation. The project has the endorsement of industrial interests of the territory, and is generally indorsed by the granges and other organizations of the county.

The project was recommended early last year amongst others, as a work project in connection with unemployment relief and endorsed by the county relief board, the director being instructed to formulate a plan to aid in securing the construction of the railroad.

After several months of preliminary survey and research, a formal application was prepared and submitted to the administration of public works under provisions of the national industrial recovery act, providing for loans to private corporations. It is expected to qualify the project for a loan under the conservation section of the act, and sustained production of timber under the plan of the president, which is a recent addition to the lumber code, its backers claim. The project if approved will give employment to 225 men for several months in construction work, and will be followed with employment for a like number in logging operations after the road is completed in addition the railroad will provide a means of delivering a constant and dependable supply of logs to several lumber plants, insuring a greater stability of employment for several hundred workers than now is possible under present conditions of log delivery to mills. The preparation of the loan application has presented many difficult problems of procedure to be solved, as the applicants had no precedent to follow.

R. E. Bradbury has had charge of the preparation of the application since the inception of the project, which he recommended as county unemployment relief director. The Klamath armory project application was also prepared and negotiated before the administrator of public works largely under Bradbury's direction. This project has received favorable comment as it had been declared not feasible without special legislative enactment by several authorities on public works projects.

The armory project was evolved largely to give employment to skilled labor, and will employ an approximated average of 250 men in direct labor on the structure for six months, in addition there will be a large number employed indirectly, it is said.

Klamath Pine Will Be Used At White House

Klamath Falls will be represented at the White House in Washington, D. C. for many years, it became known Friday.

The representation from this far western city will not be in the human form of senators or representatives, but something more lasting than one lifetime.

Eight thousand lineal feet of ponderosa white pine window sills and door jams will be sent this week from the Swan Lake Moulding company to a contracting firm at the capital city which is doing some remodeling on the White House.

Lumber company officials here believe there is no such pine which will match with that already used in the building, nearer Washington than Klamath Falls.

Three-fourths of the world's cotton is produced in the United States.

Lucerne is another name for alfalfa.

CREDIT DIRECTORS DISCUSS PROGRAM

OREGON PAGEANT PLANS PROGRESS

Directors of the newly formed Klamath Production Credit association held their first meeting at the county agent's office Wednesday. Officials of the Production Credit corporation of Spokane attended the meeting, presenting articles of association, by-laws, charter, and other necessary documents. Those attending from Spokane were W. E. Williams, vice president Production Credit corporation, and H. B. Howell, field representative.

Following the adoption of the articles of association and by-laws, the following officers were selected from the board: president, William Kittredge, Klamath Falls; vice president, E. M. Hammond, Merrill; executive and loan committee: William Kittredge, E. M. Hammond, E. A. Geary, U. E. Reeder, A. R. Campbell; manager who is also secretary and treasurer, Lee S. McMullen, formerly field representative in this district for the Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane. Mr. McMullen will report to Spokane at once for instruction and information, and upon his return will bring all necessary forms and application blanks so that the association can be ready to receive loan applications from the first of March. A special committee was appointed, consisting of E. M. Hammond, A. R. Campbell and Lee S. McMullen, to make the necessary arrangements for office space and facilities.

This organization is one of eight production credit associations established by the Farm Credit Administration in the state of Oregon to take care of production loans, for both livestock operators and crop operators. It should be of great importance in the Klamath basin in providing ample credit for all agricultural production activities, according to officers. It should increase feeding operations now under way in this valley as heretofore loans of this type have been made either through the Regional at Portland or through the Spokane office. This association loans for production purposes, only, and does not loan on real property.
