National and Local Markets

MARKET FOR EGGS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

PORTLAND, Feb. 21, (AP)—Increasing movement of eggs into coolers has followed the recent settling of sale of cold storage pack eggs by the Pacific egg producers in convention in Portland.

Not only has there been an increased demand for eggs to go into storage, but the market has acted much better, although receipts continue to show seasonable increase.

The action of the P. E. P. in boosting the price about 25c per dozen over the opening a year ago, suggested the general improvement in trade.

Now with the storage input season under way, the trade here in resale was being made mostly by storage rejects, which were good eggs, but not suitable for long keeping in store.

First outdoor grown tomatoes of the season from this country were also received from Imperial Valley. They sold $4.00 per four basket crate, and were of excellent quality. Mexicans were also very good.

Strength of the veal market with sales of country killed supplies of 10c was confirmed. Hogs were around 9c for tops generally, with yearling lambs at 15c per lb. Beef demand was strong, with a ready call for bulls to 5c per lb.

With an acute shortage of offerings, market for spinach was sharply higher here, and especially for Walla Walla offerings. Sales were being made at $1.00 to $1.15 per box for fresh arrivals.

New Hawaiian potatoes are moving at $1.75 for 30 lbs.; Floridians were held steady.

Trading in the butter market was about steady here, although a little easier in spots. However, interest reports suggested no burdensome surplus anywhere along the coast.

Premiums were being paid above established quotations for live chickens as a result of continued shortage. Killers were unable to even secure material supplies out of Western Washington.

Moderate trading was confirmed in the market for turkeys here. Dressed supplies were reaching the trade in small volumes, with quality just fair as a rule. There was no change in the price.

Several crates of 12 baskets each of strawberries from the Imperial Valley were reported and sold at $3.50 to $3.75 per crate.

PRICE OF WHEAT AVERAGES LOWER

CHICAGO, Feb. 21 (AP)—Wheat prices averaged lower today, with delivery dropping under 5c cents and May corn under 50 cents for the first time since Dec. 29. Evening up for a holiday tomorrow, however, advanced prices a little at the last.

Some selling of wheat in Chicago appeared to be against purchase at Kansas City. Washington developments regarding proposed new restrictions on grain exchange dealings continued to be sharply watched.

Wheat closed firm, at the same as yesterday's finish to 3/4 higher, corn unchanged to 3/4 up, oats unchanged to 3/4 up, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 7 cents.
