run between $3 and $4 per thousand, while the average before revision was about $5.85. The companies affected are the Forest Lumber company, Chillicothe Lumber company, Ewauna Box company, Big Lake Lumber company, Shaw-Bertram Lumber company, Crater Lake Lumber company and Kesterson Lumber company. These seven companies hold 13 contracts, including about 1,800,000,000 feet of timber and extending for a period of about 15 years.

The readjustment removes one of the chief obstacles to profitable timber operations in the area, and stumpage payments to the Indians under the contracts will run around $700,000 a year, provided NRA quotas permit cutting according to contemplated schedule. The agreement provides that prices can be raised when stumpage warrants Tuesday's action is regarded as of vital importance to the Indians and to the business interests of this area.

Crawford Helps Indians

The original contracts were entered into from 1922 on and when the depression hit in 1929 and 1930, the rigid stumpage price schedule became what was described by lumbermen as a prohibitory burden upon the companies.

There was no means of adjusting the prices except by congressional action, and in August, 1933, a bill was passed by congress permitting the modification of the contracts. Superintendent Wade Crawford of the reservation was instrumental in having a provision included that the Indians themselves must consent, in general council, to any modification. Heretofore, such negotiations have been carried on by the department.

Since August 16, a timber committee of the Klamath Indians has been meeting with the lumbermen. On the Indian committee, selected by the general council, are Selden Kirk, chairman; Charles Hood, secretary; Dico Crane, Boyd Jackson, Tommy Lang, Jessie Lee Kirk, Ida Crawford, Wimmie Foster and Eddie Cookman. Officers of the council are Selden Kirk and Boyd Jackson.

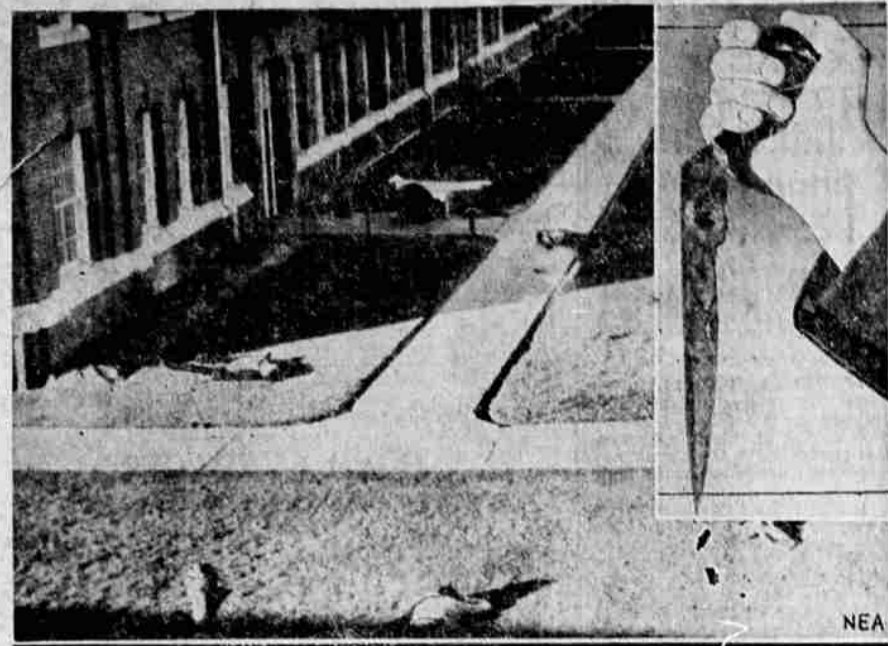

Representing timber interests was a committee of three, including Royal Shaw, J. F. Daggett and Huntington Taylor, who acted as spokesman.

Immediately upon passage of the bill last summer, the lumbermen offered a proposal. The Indians came forth with a counterproposal, and the government's representatives proposed a compromise which was finally acted upon favorably by all concerned.

Robert Marshall, chief of forestry for the Indian department came by plane to be present at the conference, and will remain here for several days. Marshall paid tribute to Crawford's administration of the affairs of the reservation. The forestry chief took an active part in assisting the negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

Trail of Death Where Prison Break Was Foiled

Here is the end of the fatal Washington State Penitentiary break Monday, in which long-term prisoners started a riot in an effort to gain freedom. Tom Woods, an alleged ringleader, fell when guards fired from the south wall, but he was only shamming. He's shown in the foreground. The other two bodies are those of dead convicts. # Preliminary Hearing for Manning Delayed Until Next Friday

Klamath county people and feel sure he can be given a fair trial in this county. That is all we want. Furthermore, we do not feel it ask and all the state should ask would be fair to put the people of the county to the expense of paying for an outside trial, unless conditions absolutely demand it.

Roberts and Vandenberg visited Manning in his county jail cell Wednesday morning. Roberts was expected to return to Medford Wednesday night or Thursday.

Reliable reports were heard Wednesday to the effect that the state is investigating the possibility that Manning left his Underwood building office after Horan was fatally shot and before he called the county jail to give himself up. The timing of the shots is believed to be an important factor involved in this theory.

It is also reported that the state believes it knows the subject of Manning's and Horan's conversation prior to the shooting, and that there has been questioning of individuals believed to be in nearby rooms at the time.

Defense attorneys reiterated their original statement that Manning has a "perfect defense" and that they do not believe the case should be "tried in the newspapers."

Two Turn Against Factor Kidnapers On Witness Stand

CHICAGO, Feb. 20. (UP)—Two more witnesses violated the first law of the underworld in the Factor kidnaping trial today and did the hitherto almost unheard of thing of turning publicly against their former gang pals.

The former gangsters who provided today's sensations in the trial of three tough gangsters on charges of holding John (Jake the Barber) Factor 12 days for $70,000 ransom were James Wagner and Walter (Buck) Henrichsen.

Wagner formerly drove a beer truck for the Touhy mobsters. Henrichsen quit his job as a policeman to join the Touhy gang. Henrichsen reversed testimony given in an earlier trial and said that he was present when the ransom was collected. He said that among those present were Roger Touhy, Gus Schaefer and Albert Kator, the three men on trial.

2. Tightening of deductions for depreciation and depletion, taken by corporations from net income. Estimated to produce $35,000,000.

3. Revision of the capital gains and loss provisions under a new system, designed to prevent capital losses from diminishing ordinary income, and placing a levy on capital gains. Expected to return $30,000,000.

4. Imposition of a 35 per cent tax on personal holding companies' undistributed earnings—$25,000,000.

5. Revamping of the exchange and reorganization provisions of the income tax law so that corporations and individual stockholders cannot reorganize to evade taxation—$10,000,000.

6. Dividends paid out of corporate earnings made prior to March 1, 1913, are subject to surtaxes of shareholders—$6,000,000.

7. Credits for taxes paid foreign governments by American corporations and individuals operating abroad are reduced 50 per cent—$5,000,000.

8. The penalty tax on corporations for filing consolidated returns is increased from one to two per cent, leaving the single corporate tax at 13 1/2 per cent, and increasing the consolidated from 14 1/2 to 15 1/2 per cent—$20,000,000.

9. Curtailment of partnership allowances for losses by permitting the deduction of losses on the sale of capital assets only to the extent of gains from such sales—$5,000,000.

10. Administrative changes in collection of the existing one-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline and four cents a gallon on lubricating oil, whereby the first manufacturer shall pay the levy instead of the second or the distributor—$20,000,000.

Miscellaneous provisions of the bill are estimated to yield $24,000,000 more.
