News Behind the News

The Inside Story From The Capital
By PAUL MALLON
Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, March 7—The business boys applauded Mr. Roosevelt's new NRA program, but only to be polite. They had their fingers crossed.

They could read between the lines and see the suggestion that they might have to forego profits to create employment, and unless they did so voluntarily, Mr. Roosevelt would impose a shorter work week on them.

Their private comment ran something like this: "He congratulates us with one hand and pulls our nose with the other," and "he smiles at you so charmingly when he hits you that you do not realize you have been struck until the swelling comes."

They took heart from the fact that Mr. Roosevelt was slightly indefinite. They hoped he was merely talking and would hesitate to carry out his implied threat.

They probably will be doomed to disappointment in the end.

MOTIVES

The bald truth is the NRA has failed to accomplish its purpose under the existing set-up. It has not caused enough employment to meet the situation, and prospects are it will not, if it goes on as it has been.

Industry will pick up sharply for March and April. A steady improvement in employment will be accomplished, but probably not enough to absorb any considerable portion of existing unemployment. To do so, industrial production would have to increase anywhere from 28 to 40 per cent. The best economists believe that is unlikely.

So some other method of increasing private employment will undoubtedly have to be adopted. The shorter work week with no reduction in pay and without substantial increase in prices affords a simple method. At least that is the theory behind the move.

TEARS

The Wall Streeters immediately forgot their worries on the stock exchange bill and started fretting about the new presidential program.

As realists, they hardly expected that business generally would voluntarily hazard its income by affording extra employment for idealistic purposes. They rather anticipated a federal program fixing various reduced hours of labor for various industries, running probably from 32 to 36 hours.

That led them to the tearful conclusion that profits may be delayed for the present.

NECESSITIES

Some business men contend they have no profits as yet. They say that an increased payroll will bring about bankruptcy.

But the theory behind the administration move is clear. Mr. Roosevelt's treasury department is now contributing to the support of one out of every seven or eight persons through the AAA, OWA, CCC, etc. Some estimates run higher than that. One set of figures shows one out of every four persons getting money from the government.

The government cannot keep on supporting them much longer or the treasury will be pressed. It must get these persons back into private employment. If the employment does not come naturally, it must be forced.

It might be much harder on business in the long run to have the government continue to support these men than to have private industry do it.

PROFESSORS

A few days before the business men on the code authority met here, the NRA sent out tele-

SIDE GLANCES by George Clark

"Couldn't leave, because you were winner? No, I Can't understand THAT."

grams confidentially to most of the leading colleges in the country.

These telegrams referred to the possibility of getting college professors to serve as government representatives on code authorities.

Some insiders say as many as 100 telegrams were sent.

The idea is novel. General Johnson has been under harassment from Senator Nye and others because industrial giants act as government representatives on the code authorities over their own industries. There is a prevailing suspicion that some of these giants represent their industry more than they do the government.

Replacing them with college professors would do more probably to change the complexion of the NRA than the shorter work week.

PROGRESS

The AAA crowd has prepared a series of amendments to the crop curtailment program. These will be announced when they are sent to congress for approval, which will be soon. The general idea behind the amendments is to make technical corrections in the existing law so that the program may operate more effectively. One amendment is supposed to relate to the strengthening of the county committees by enlarging the personnel.

This caused one of the Anthony advocates to remark: "If everyone now receiving money from the government votes the democratic ticket in November, there will be no republicans left in congress."

NOTES

Insiders whisper, half seriously, that one reason Richard Washburn Child was chosen to Europe was that he has been leading the attack on administration policies in special articles for the Hearst newspapers. A more probable reason is that he helped form republicans-for-Roosevelt clubs before the last election.

Because of the ambiguous phraseology in some sections of the stock market bill, a Wall Street economist is suggesting that another provision should be added to it, reading: "Nothing is intended by this legislation, except what the authors had in mind."

The Wall Streeters say the reason the market has gone no lower in the face of the regulatory bill is that no one expects it to be enacted in its present form. Another reason given is that the speculators hope to have a field day before it goes into effect. They do not desire to sacrifice their market position before they get a last chance to make some money.

Some skeptics say Mr. Roosevelt omitted an "R" in describing his movement to the code authorities when he called it "evolution."

Man West styles are to be fashionable for men—provided, of course, the men have any money after their wives and daughters go West.

A mouse in Syracuse, N. Y., climbed a pole and ate bird seed out of a canary's cage. The canary must have been out with the cat, at the time.

Death Claims Noted Fiction Character

SEATTLE, March 7, (AP)—Death came to Captain O. B. Lindholm, one of the characters in Peter B. Kyne's widely-read "Cappy Ricks," as stories as he was being rushed in an ambulance to the local marine hospital today.

He was taken off the Grace line freighter Condor after becoming stricken on the bridge of the vessel as it arrived in Puget sound waters from South America.

Wild Life Program

THE program under which it is proposed to re-flood Lower Klamath Lake as a bird sanctuary has just been published by the U. S. department of agriculture. It comprises the report of the President's Committee on Wild-life Restoration, and proposes the use of federal surplus relief funds up to $25,000,000 in acquiring 325,000 acres in seven states and selective purchases later from 5,246,074 additional acres.

These purchases would be made for wildlife rehabilitation purposes under the administration's plan to acquire and divert 50,000,000 acres of low-priced or tax-reverted sub-marginal lands to more useful purposes. In addition to the purchase price, there is suggested an additional use of some $25,000,000 from PWA and CWA funds for employment of labor on the tracts, and survey funds of $430,910. The maximum job can be done for $50,480,910, and the minimum job for $24,430,190.

Three sources are suggested for maintenance purposes after the first year. These include: continuation of the 10 per cent tax on arms and ammunition, amounting to $2,500,000; proceeds from the duck stamp tax of $1 paid by waterfowl hunters, estimated at $700,000; $300,000 from the migratory bird conservation act appropriations.

We note that Oregon is one of the seven states in which first purchases would be made if executive approval is given. The total for this state is placed at 123,000 acres. California is not listed, and the condensed statement of the report at hand does not indicate whether the committee has listed Lower Klamath as an Oregon project. It lies on both sides of the Oregon-California line. Incidentally, the proposed first purchases in Oregon are much larger than those in the other six states.

A schedule of acreages which can eventually be acquired for upland game and water fowl conservation purposes is given. Forty-two states are in the list with Oregon's acreage placed at 221,000 for water fowl and 100,000 for upland game. The report states a gross total of 13,000,000 acres can eventually be acquired for wild-life restoration.

Coordination of the wild-life restoration and conservation activities would be placed in the hands of a new set-up of identified federal agencies, headed by a committee composed of the secretaries of interior, agriculture and commerce. Under them is the "Restoration Commissioner," a new official, and the directors of erosion control, fisheries, wildlife (another new official) and of the national parks and forests.

This is the most extensive and comprehensive wild-life conservation and rehabilitation scheme ever attempted in this country. The disposition of the committee's report will be watched with intense interest here, where wild life is of definite economic importance, and in view of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce' recommendation of a lower lake flooding plan designed to protect the water situation and the various interests affected. This community is also sympathetically interested in the proposal to include Hart Mountain refuge in the upland game program.

Indians Revive Alleged Treaty

ALTURAS, Calif.—Considerable excitement prevails among local Indians over the revival of the memory of the treaty which it is claimed General George Crook made with Chief BHI Chipp of the Pit River tribe of Indians in the fall of 1857. Henry Chipp, son of the old chief, claims that Crook's treaty with the Pit River tribe embraced an area over 25 miles square in the center of Modoc county, on which the Indians were to be allowed to live unmolested by white settlement. The Indians are taking the matter of the old treaty up with the bureau of Indian affairs at Washington.

Regardless of Price
 Judge the new FORD V8 on what it will do

Thousands of people who can afford to spend two or three times as much for a car, are today choosing the Ford V-8 for 1934, instead. Here are some of the reasons.

POWER. The Ford V-8 for 1934 gives you better than 80 miles per hour with the quicker acceleration and greater smoothness of an 8-cylinder motor. Power has actually been increased by 12 per cent over last year's model.

COMFORT. The Ford V-8 for 1934 offers more actual body room than many other cars that cost considerably more. It offers you new Clear-Vision Ventilation, with the window in one piece. It offers you free action for all four wheels—plus the comfort of Ford Cantilever Springs and the proved safety of a front axle.

SAFETY. With the new Ford V-8 you get an all-steel body, safety glass, welded steel-spoke wheels, exceptionally low center of gravity and more braking surface per pound of weight than any other American-made car we know of.

ECONOMY. Gasoline economy is increased by two or three miles per gallon with the new Ford V-8. Test runs show that the new engine will give 20 miles per gallon at 45 miles per hour.
