Nothing Yet

KLAMATH'S attempts to take advantage of the government's public work offers have thus far proved of little value, except through the recovery program road appropriations.

Any number of ideas have been advanced here for bringing public works money into this community. At one time, a comprehensive plan for traffic improvement through construction of undergrade crossings and other street changes was prepared, but was lost in red tape before it got far.

Canal coverage has now been rejected, at least in its present proposed outline. The army came through finally with a PWA approval, but as yet the first spadeful of dirt is to be turned because of various technicalities. The period of acute unemployment when the army would have been especially helpful as a work-giving project is rapidly drawing to a close.

One cynic remarked the other day that the army will be ready for the next depression, anyway. And another suggested that if red tape were construction material, what an array of public works the country could build.

The Three-Day Law

FREQUENT waiving of the three-day marriage license requirement here directs attention to the law in this situation. It follows:

Sec. 33-112. Before any persons can be joined in marriage, a license shall be procured therefor from a county clerk, directed to any person or religious organization or congregation authorized by this act to solemnize marriage, and authorizing such person, organization or congregation to join together the persons therein named as husband and wife. The county clerk, in issuing such license, shall procure the addresses of both parties who are to be married, also the address of the officiant. No license to marry shall be delivered within a period of three days immediately following the date of application therefor; provided, however, that the judge of probate of each county, for good and sufficient cause shown, may, by an order in writing signed by him, authorize the county clerk to deliver such license immediately following the application therefor. In case the certificate referred to in section 33-108 is not returned in the time specified, it shall be the duty of the county clerk to notify the parties interested.

Quite evidently, the intent of the law is to make waiver of the three-day requirement a privilege to be exercised only in exceptional circumstances. So long as this is the purpose and the spirit of the law, it should be adhered to.

Birthday wishes are in order for the American Legion. It was fifteen years ago, March 15, 1918, that this great organization of American veterans was organized in Paris. Those 15 years have seen the American Legion carry on for America in peace as its members did in war. The Legion's contribution to good citizenship has been its outstanding accomplishment. May it long continue to foster and support American ideals.

City traffic regulations are showing a tendency toward the other extreme. Long almost unregulated, parking of cars is now being put on a restrictive basis resulting frequently in unnecessary inconvenience. Short-time parking limits are not necessary on streets where there are no more than two or three business houses in a block.

Chiloquin high school has again won the district debating championship. This is the third consecutive district title for the northern Klamath county school, certainly a record to be proud of, even though less noise may be made about it than usually accompanies the winning of an athletic championship. Good wishes are in order for the Chiloquin team as it goes on toward the state title.

WASHINGTON

News Behind the News
 The Inside Story From The Capital
 By PAUL MALLON
 Copyright, 1934 by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, March 15.—That gr-r-rat legislative battle in the house over the soldier bonus was no battle at all. It takes two opposing sides to have a battle.

The truth is that President Roosevelt's legislative generals picked out a nice soft spot on the battlefield, dropped a pillow and lay down to let the bonus juggernaut roll over them.

More than that, by their tactics they actually invited men in their army to join the opposition. That would be strange in war, but not in politics. No suspicion of treachery exists. There are no hard feelings.

Everyone seemed to understand that the bonus cannot become a law anyhow; that if some democrats could get political prestige out of supporting it, they might as well get it; and that after all, it was just in fun anyway.

FLIGHT
 Mr. Roosevelt did all he could be expected to do. He announced twice that he would veto the bill so it could not become a law.

The second announcement came about a week before the vote. It put the house democrats in a very tough position.

The situation within a certain southern state delegation is illustrative of the inner condition. This state has eleven congressmen, all democrats. When Mr. Roosevelt made his announcement, five of them decided to stand with him and oppose the bonus. Five were determined to vote for the bonus, regardless of Mr. Roosevelt. One was doubtful.

But when the vote was taken a week later, ten voted for the bonus and one voted both ways—first to take the bonus up and then against its passage.

CHANCES
 The reason for the change was that they saw such good friends of Mr. Roosevelt's as Bankhead, Rayburn, Jones and Prosser opposing the president's wishes.

The average democratic congressman did not have to be told officially that if such outstanding democrats were going to risk the wrath of the White House, they would do well to take a chance also.

That is why the bonus got as many as 295 votes, including 231 contributed by pro-Roosevelt democrats.

You would think that with all those votes, the bonus could be passed over a veto. Never fear. The 295 ayes were 15 more than the two-thirds necessary to pass over a veto. But after Mr. Roosevelt vetoes the bill fifty or more of those democratic ayes will change to nays. The matter then will have departed from the realm of fun.

Also, the perfect position for a congressman is to be on both sides of a question, not merely on one side only.

LEADING
 Another great help for the bonus was contributed by the chief of staff of Mr. Roosevelt's army, his floor leader, Mr. Byrns. Mr. Byrns is not a Roman general. He does not believe in falling on his sword and killing himself because he is losing.

In fact, one profane wag in the press gallery remarked that he could not tell what side Byrns was on, after hearing his speech. That was due to the fact that Mr. Byrns was in a tight spot. He voted for the bonus last time. His heart was clearly with the revolvers. But this time he was the leader, and he had to stand by the president. Also he wanted the soldiers in his district not to misunderstand him.

In the heat of the battle, when the time came to rally to the presidential flag and fight to the last drop of blood for the president, he said, in part: "I regret very much to find

SIDE GLANCES—by George Clark

"Arthur is trying to make good use of his extra day each week."

There will be more buyers than sellers of farm land, and again, in response to the law of supply and demand, farm prices will rise.

ON TOP of all this, Mr. Wenzlick told his hearers—this time in fairly simple and understandable language—"we are going to see credit loosened considerably for taking care of the financing of real estate. Some of this will become apparent even before the end of 1934."

Easter credit, of course, will mean more building and more buying.

WHAT does all this big talk mean to common, ordinary people? Well, it means just this: If you have any real estate, HANG ON TO IT. Keep your taxes paid, if you possibly can. Meet the interest on your mortgage. It will be worth something, some day.

REAL ESTATE has been a drug on the market many, many times in this country. But it has never yet failed to come back in price. It won't fall this time. After all, real estate is the solidest form of wealth there is.

Bly Resident Breaks Shoulder

 houses, and in consequence of this condition prices will rise.

ALL this, of course, refers to city real estate—dwelling houses particularly. A somewhat different process is under way regarding farm lands, but it will have a similar effect.

For a variety of reasons, chief of which is low price for farm products, farm production is steadily decreasing. After a while, it will decline so far that there will be more buyers than sellers, and when that happens prices of farm products will rise.

When prices of farm products rise, people will want to BUY FARMS. When that comes about,

MAHONEY DANCE DATE POSTPONED

Because of numerous other dances being held Saturday night in celebration of St. Patrick's day, the "Mahoney for Governor" dance scheduled for the Exhibit building has been postponed until March 24, according to announcement of Frank Sexton, chairman of the committee.

Tickets which were printed and sold for the dance March 17 will be honored at the dance at the later date, Sexton stated.

"The Mahoney dance conflicts with the Cullinary Alliance annual dance," Sexton said. He also announced the postponement was made at the request of W. E. Mahoney.
