WILDLIFE MEASURES SENT TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21.—Three important wildlife restoration bills, the Walcott-Kieberg Duck Stamp, The Coordination, and the Robinson Refuge bills have passed both the U. S. senate and the house and have gone to President Roosevelt for his signature. That he will sign all three is a foregone conclusion as he has personally endorsed them, according to a bulletin of the American Game association. The house passed these bills on March 5; the senate on February 6.

These three bills will pave the way to real restoration of wildlife on a huge scale, according to the predictions of conservationists throughout the country.
The Walcott-Kieberg Duck Stamp bill will provide an estimated revenue of approximately $1,000,000 a year to be used in rehabilitation of wildlife. It provides that not less than 90 per cent of these monies shall be used for purchase and maintenance of breeding, feeding and resting refuges of the inshore type that is refuges in which no shooting is allowed. The remaining 10 per cent is to be used for administration. The U. S. biological survey is charged with protection and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has said that the federal government should provide the funds for this work independent of the duck stamp revenues. Each wildfowl hunter, excepting children under 16 years of age, will be required to purchase a $1 duck stamp from post offices and affix it to his or her state hunting license.
The Coordination bill is designed to coordinate all activities of the various departments of the federal government dealing with phases related to the welfare of wildlife. For instance, the war department engineers may be asked to modify plans for dams so as to benefit the fish life.

Law Is Waived for Five Couples

Records at the county clerk's office reveal that since March 1, nine marriage licenses have been issued and in five instances the three-day notice requirement has been waived.
Waiver is permitted by the law when there is cause. It is done only on permission of the county judge.

Egg Within Egg Found by Farmer
Some eggs are just ordinary occurrences in the life of a hen, others are different.
John Schneberger will testify to a "new deal" egg he discovered on his farm at Altamont. Schneberger, who has about 300 laying hens and 1,000 chickens coming, picked up an egg with an egg from one of the nests.
The egg was especially large with a soft outer shell. Inside however, was another egg. Mrs. Schneberger says it was normally shaped.
